393a. —.—]—Under Housing of the Working Classes Acts & Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), resps., a metropolitan borough council, assigned to the London County Council all rates authorised to be raised by resps. under Metropolitan Management Act, 1855, or London Govt. Act, 1899 (c. 14), to secure money advanced by the London County Council. The money so raised was used by resps. in connection with the construction of flats for the working classes in pursuance of a scheme prepared by them under Housing, Town Planning, etc., Act, 1919 (c. 35), s. 1. In making payments of interest on the sums advanced resps. deducted income tax under Rules applicable to all

Schedules, r. 21. The interest was paid out of the general fund in the hands of resps., into which fund were paid all profits or gains, whether derived from a housing scheme or from elsewhere. Resps. had only one banking account, out of which all payments, including the interest, were made & into which all receipts, including the profits & gains derived from resps.' electricity undertaking, or otherwise, were paid. No special fund in respect of any housing scheme was maintained. Resps. possessed profits or gains brought into charge to income tax sufficient for the payment of interest on the sums advanced, apart from any income derived under any housing scheme:—Held: as none of resps.' profits & gains other than the receipts of the housing scheme contributed to the payment of the interest, & as resps. had an indemnity against loss on the scheme, resps. were liable to account for the amount of the deductions.—DICKSON v. HAMPSTEAD BOROUGH COUNCIL. (1927), 91 J. P. 146; 43 T. L. R. 595; 25 L. G. R. 402; 11 Tax Cas. 691.

Board undertook to, & did, refund to them, by means of an Exchequer subsidy, the loss thereby incurred. In order to finance the scheme, the corp'n. issued housing bonds, & when paying interest upon them they deducted income tax. They alleged that that interest was paid out of their general borough fund, which was used in financing their markets, gas, electricity, tramways & other undertakings, & that as the income in respect of that fund & those undertakings had already been brought into charge for income tax purposes, they were entitled to retain the amounts deducted:—Held: as the corp'n. had an indemnity against loss on the housing scheme the interest so paid could not be regarded as a general payment out of profits brought into charge, & the corp'n. must account to the Revenue for the tax so deducted under rule 21 of the rules applicable to all Schedules.—*BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. 394a. —.—]—The profits of the Metropolitan Water Board were assessable under 1918 Act, Schedule A., No. III., r. 3, by reference to the profits of the year preceding the year of assessment. The accounts of the Board for the year ending Mar. 31, 1922, showed a loss, & no assessment was made for the year ending Apr. 5, 1923. The accounts for the year ending Mar. 31, 1923, showed a profit of over two millions, out of which the Board paid over one million interest on water stock, & debentures, deducting & retaining the income tax thereon. On an information claiming that the Board was liable to account for the amount of the tax so deducted, the Board contended that the interest paid for the year 1922-23 was payable out of profits brought into charge for 1922-23 within Rules applicable to all Schedules, r. 19, & was in fact paid out of the profits for 1922-23, & that, although the income tax for 1922-23 was to be measured by the profits of the preceding year, the profits for 1922-23 had been brought into charge, & rule 21 did not apply:—Held: as the Board had been assessed at zero under Schedule A for 1922-23, the interest had not been paid out of profits brought into charge, & the Crown was entitled to succeed.—*A.-G. v. From the outbreak of war in 1914 K. ceased to operate the account & he died in 1916. The bank, however, continued to credit the account with the interest & dividends until 1917, when the German Govt. appointed a custodian to take over & administer enemies' property in Germany, & the bank then paid the interest & dividends to the custodian. K.'s last surviving exor. died in 1921, & resps.,

the exors. of such survivor, recovered the interest & dividends, together with interest thereon, through the Anglo-German Mixed Arbitral Tribunal. Resps. were assessed to income tax in respect of these sums for the years 1922-23 to 1926-27 under Cases IV. & V. of Sched. D. on the ground that they were income arising to resps. in those years as they accrued only when received under the decree of the Tribunal:—Held: the dividends & interest accrued in the years when they were paid into the bank, & it was now too late to make assessments in respect of the years before K.'s death, & as to the years after his death assessments could be made only so far as the assessments were in time, & the further sum paid as interest thereon under the decree of the Tribunal was not income but was compensation comparable to damages for detention of a chattel & therefore was not assessable to income tax.—*SIMPSON v. As from Apr. 1, 1922, the entire control of the business was removed to Egypt. The trade of the co. wholly consisted of the lending of money to approved borrowers in Egypt in accordance with Egyptian law, at rates of interest varying from 6 to 8½ per cent. No loans were entertained without good real security being given, & in the event of the borrower's default, proceedings were invariably taken in the local cts. to realise the security, & if it could not be sold immediately, the co. would go into possession:—Held: as from Apr. 1, 1922, the co., though it carried on a trade or business, was properly assessed to income tax under Schedule D., Case IV., in respect of income arising from securities in a place out of the United Kingdom, & was to be taxed in the full amount of such income, whether it was remitted to the United Kingdom or not. 472a. ——— Relief of members of medical association & dependants in necessitous circumstances.]—Two societies whose funds were applied entirely to making grants for the relief of subscribing members or their dependants in necessitous circumstances:—

PART V. SECT. 9.

470 i. Exemption of charities—Charitable purposes.]—By the law of Scotland a trust for "charitable or benevolent" purposes is a trust for "charitable" purposes alone, & is a trust for "charitable purposes only" within 1918 Act.—JACKSON'S TRUSTEES v. INLAND REVENUE, [1926] S. C. 579; 10 Tax Cas. 460.—SCOT.

470 ii. ——— Stimulating interest in music.]—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. GLASGOW MUSICAL FESTIVAL ASSOC., [1926] S. C. 920; 11 Tax Cas. 154.—SCOT.

470 iii. ——— Supplying nurses.]—An assoc. was formed for the purpose of improving & extending nursing facilities in a county. The members were divided into three classes according to income, the largest class consisting of persons in comparatively poor circumstances. An annual membership fee was charged, varying, according to the class, from 2s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. per annum. The fees charged for the services of a nurse, or for admission to the assocn.'s hospital, varied from sums which, in the case of the poorest class, were considerably below the cost of the services rendered, to sums which, in the case of the wealthiest class, were reasonably equivalent to such cost. Nursing facilities, when not required for members, were granted to non-members at increased rates. Funds were held by the assocn. which had been raised by public subscription, & the hospital had been acquired with funds similarly raised. In respect of special charitable donations, necessitous cases from certain parishes received the services of a nurse gratuitously:—Held: the assocn. was established for "charitable purposes only."—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. PEEBLESHIRE NURSING ASSOC., [1927] S. C. 215; 11 Tax Cas. 335.—SCOT.

470 iv. ——— Promotion of temperance.]—Testator expressed his desire that the leading of a sober life might be made more easy for the inhabitants of F., & with that object conveyed half of the residue of his estate to trustees

Held: charities, & entitled to exemption from income tax.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. SOCIETY FOR RELIEF OF WIDOWS & ORPHANS OF MEDICAL MEN, INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. MEDICAL CHARITABLE SOCIETY FOR WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE (1926), 136 L. T. 60; 42 T. L. R. 612; 70 Sol. Jo. 837; 11 Tax Cas. 1.

472b. ——— Temperance reform.]—A society whose main object was "united action to secure legislative & other temperance reform":—Held: not a body of persons established for charitable purposes only, & its income, inasmuch as it was not applied to charitable purposes only, was not entitled to exemption from income tax.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. TEMPERANCE COUNCIL OF CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF ENGLAND & WALES (1926), 136 L. T. 27; 42 T. L. R. 618; 10 Tax Cas. 748.

472c. ——— Seaside boarding-house with reduced charges.]—By a declaration of trust "a home or place of residence" was founded & endowed, "where persons requiring temporary rest & change of air for the benefit of their health may obtain same." About half the income of the home came from payments by visitors, who included convalescents, persons needing rest & change, & holiday applicants:—Held: since on the construction of the trust deed there was throughout an overriding charity which fulfilled the character of a charitable convalescent home, the trustees were entitled to exemption from income tax on the ground that the trust was established for charitable purposes only.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. ROBERTS MARINE MANSIONS TRUSTEES (1926), 43 T. L. R. 270; 11 Tax Cas. 425, C. A.

472d. ——— Agricultural society.]—An agricultural society, founded mainly for the purpose of holding an annual agricultural show, had also among their objects the improvement of live stock & poultry & of machinery & appliances used in agriculture, & agricultural education & scientific research, & they claimed exemption from income tax upon the dividends from their investments, on the ground that they were a society established for charitable purposes only:—Held: there was evidence on which the Special Comrs. could find that the society for the purpose of providing F. with a temperance public-house. His trustees spent part of the funds in establishing a temperance hotel, containing a middle-class cafe & a cheap working-class cafe, free reading & recreation-rooms, & bedrooms, & a lecture-hall, which could be hired at moderate figures. Their policy was to make the hotel pay its way without earning profits, & the balance of the trust funds was invested & the interest was used to make good an annual deficit on the working of the hotel:—Held: the interest formed part of the income of a trust established for "charitable purposes only," & was "applied to charitable purposes only."—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. FALKIRK TEMPERANCE CAFE TRUST, [1927] S. C. 261; 11 Tax Cas. 353.—SCOT.

476b. ——— Geologists' Association.—The Special Comrs. found that the main function of the Geologists' Assn. was the combination of members for scientific purposes & mutual improvement, that all the benefits of the Assn. were enjoyed primarily by the members, & that although their studies tended indirectly to the promotion of education generally, the Assn. was not a body persons established for charitable purposes only, & was therefore not entitled to exemption :—Held: the question was one of fact, & that there were no grounds on which the Comrs.' decision could be disturbed.—GEOLOGISTS' ASSOCIATION v. advantage to the members in the practice of their profession. They decided therefore that the Institution was not a body of persons established for charitable purposes only & was not entitled to exemption from income tax :—Held: the question was one of fact, & the Comrs. had evidence before them to support their conclusion.—MIDLAND COUNTIES INSTITUTION OF ENGINEERS v. 483a. ———]—Testator devised his residuary estate on trust for applts., who were a society established for charitable purposes only & were entitled to exemption from income tax on their income from investments. Pending completion of the administration the exors. paid to the trustees for applt. society certain sums on account of income. Applts. claimed repayment of income tax, but the Inland Revenue Comrs. refused repayment so far as related to income received by the exors. before the date when the residue was ascertained : Held: as the income when it was received was the income only of the exors. & the money paid to the charity was only a sum equal to the income payable to the charity as a matter of equitable book-keeping in due course of administration, applts. were not entitled to the repayment claimed. MARIE CELESTE SAMARITAN SOCIETY OF LONDON HOSPITAL v. 483b. Exemption of industrial societies—1918 Act, s. 39—Number of shares unlimited.—Resp. Society, which was registered under Industrial Provident Societies Act, 1893 (c. 39), claimed exemption under Sched. D. on the ground that the number of its shares was not limited by its rules or practice. The Society was formed to carry on the business of (inter alia) manufacturers & dealers in butter, cheese, milk & other dairy products. Admission to membership was at the discretion of the committee & subject to taking up a qualifying number of shares; further every member was bound by the Society's rules to sell to the Society any milk produced on any lands farmed by him if required to do so. The number of shares held by any individual member was limited to 200. The majority of the members were dairy farmers, & milk dealers & consumers were not in practice admitted to membership. Approximately 98 per cent. of the Society's sales were made to non-members. The Crown contended that practically the whole of the Society's sales were to non-members, & that the restriction of membership in general to persons willing to supply milk to the Society & the exclusion of milk dealers constituted an effective limitation of shares. The General Comrs. found in favour of the Society:—Held: the number of the Society's shares was not limited within 1918 Act, s. 39 (4), either by its rules or practice, & it was entitled to the exemption.—*BENSTED v. - 489a. — Foreign director of British company.—Applt. in the first case was appointed foreign director of a British co. for fourteen years from 1918. The co. had subsidiary cos. on the Continent, the principal one being a French co. of which applt. was managing director. He was also a director of a German co., & had control over selling organisations in other European countries. He was thus responsible for the whole of the British co.'s Continental business, & his only remuneration was a fixed salary payable by the British co. plus commission on the co.'s profits from trading on the Continent. Since 1918 applt. had lived in Paris with his family. He came to London once a month to attend the co.'s directors' meetings, his function being to report & advise the directors on questions affecting the Continental business. It was no part of his duty to attend to the general business of the co. Applt. was assessed in respect of salary & commission for each year from 1920–21 to 1926–27 by the General Comrs. for the division in which the co.'s registered office was situated:—Held: (1) his office was an office within the United Kingdom; (2) the General Comrs. had jurisdiction to assess for 1920–21 & 1921–22 as well as for later years.—*PROCTOR v. 536 ii. — Whether gross or net income under will.]—Held: applt.'s income under her father's will, for the purposes of a claim to repayment of income tax in respect of personal allowance, etc., was one-half only of the net income of the estate after the deduction of all prior charges, including the expenses of management of the trust.—MURRAY v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1926), 11 Tax Cas. 133.—SCOT.

536 iii. — — — — —.]—A beneficiary was entitled to income from (inter alia) two trusts, under one of which, after the expenses of the trust were paid, he was entitled to a life interest in the residue of the estate; & under the other, after the expenses of the trust were paid, to (1) an annual sum, & (2) subject to a trust for accumulation for a particular purpose, the annual income of the estate during his life. The beneficiary, being a British subject resident abroad, was entitled to certain relief from British income tax under Finance Act, 1920, s. 24 (1):

—Held: in computing the "amount of his total income from all sources" for the purpose of this relief, the beneficiary was not entitled to include, along with the actual sums received by him from the trusts, the management expenses of the trusts.—MACFARLANE v. been approved by the Comrs. of Inland Revenue under 1921 Act, s. 32, & his annual contribution to the fund was therefore deducted as an expense in arriving at the net amount of his salary assessable to income tax. In the assessment one-sixth of the net amount was allowed as earned income relief, but applt. contended that one-sixth of his gross salary, before deducting the superannuation contribution, should be so allowed:—Held: earned income relief must be calculated on the net amount of remuneration assessable after deducting allowable expenses.—FRAME v. FARRAND (1928), 13 Tax Cas. 861.

545a. — Whether vested or contingent interest.]

—Resp., who came of age in July, 1922, claimed relief under Income Tax Act, 1918 (c. 40), s. 25, in respect of the accumulated income of a fund given to his parents by a relation in 1902 with a letter, which, after referring to a gift for the benefit of resp.'s brother, continued: "I also hand you a stock receipt representing the investment of £500 in Consols which, with the accruing dividends thereon, will fall due to your youngest boy (resp.) as he attains the age of twenty-one years. You will observe that you & W. are practically trustees for carrying this out":—Held: resp. took a vested & not a contingent interest in the gift, & was not entitled to the relief conferred by the sect. in respect of the income of the fund which had been accumulated for his benefit.—ROBERTS v. HANKS (1926), 134 L. T. 754; 10 Tax Cas. 351.

545d. Lunacy percentage.]—Under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), & the Rules in Lunacy, 1892, the Crown is in certain circumstances entitled to receive 4 per cent., but not exceeding £400, of the clear annual income of a lunatic. A., a lunatic, had a considerable income &

the whole of the funds were in ct. The income as it came in was credited to the lunatic's account by the Paymaster-General, & the appropriate lunacy percentage was debited annually in that account. Applt., the committee of A., was assessed under Case III. of Sched. D. for the year 1926–27 in the sum of £452, the amount of War Loan interest arising in 1925–26; the remainder of the lunatic's income was received under deduction of income tax. Applt. claimed that a deduction of £161, the lunacy percentage for 1925–26 on the whole of the lunatic's income, should be made from the assessment, on the grounds that the lunacy percentage did not form part of the lunatic's income that there was no authority for charging it to income tax. The Crown contended that there was no provision in the income tax Acts for allowing such a deduction, that the payment was merely an application of the lunatic's income, or alternatively that the deduction from the assessment should be restricted to the percentage appropriate to that source of income:—Held: lunacy percentage is a payment out of the lunatic's income, & that no deduction is admissible for income tax purposes.—*A. The insured had in each year the option of taking the reduction of premium for that year in cash or of converting it into the equivalent reversionary bonus. The co.'s premium notice showed £48 5s. as the premium payable on the policy & £33 15s. 6d. as bonus, leaving £14 9s. 6d. as the "amount to be paid." Resp. remitted £14 9s. 6d. to the co. but claimed that the amount of the premium paid by him in the year was £48 5s.:—Held: the reduction of premium had been provided by the policy, that the amount of the premium paid by resp. was £14 9s. 6d., & that he was entitled to relief from income tax on that amount only.—*WATKINS v. her income from the same source in the preceding year, notwithstanding that by proviso 1 to r. 16 of the Rules applicable to all Schedules that income was to be "deemed the profits of her husband." The interest due on June 1, & paid to the trustees on that date, amounting to £1,000, was treated by them as capital, & estate

The trustee having been assessed to income tax on the £1,000 of interest, contended that trustees acting for benefit of a British resident who was capax were not assessable to income tax. The Comrs. decided that the trustees were assessable as regards the two-thirds of the interest accruing to the portions destined to the testator's wife & daughter in life, but not as regards the one-third payable by them to the son.—Held: the trustees were assessable to tax on the whole interest, under Rule 1 of the Miscellaneous Rules applicable to Sched. The professor returned to Calro at the end of his leave in 1922, visiting this country again the following summer. For the year 1923-24 the trustees were assessed to income tax upon the wife's share of Canadian income.—Held: the income was liable to be charged to income tax upon the wife, & was not to be deemed to be the husband's profits. DERRY v. The interest was paid without deduction of income tax, & was debited in the co.'s profit & loss account as a business expense. It had been allowed as such in computing the profits on which the co. was assessed under Case I. of Sched. D. for the four years ended Apr. 5, 1925. The co. claimed repayment of tax under 1918 Act, s. 30, for these four years on the interest paid to the bank, contending that it should not have been allowed as a deduction in computing profits, that this error could be corrected by additional assessments, & that the interest must be treated as having been paid out of profits or gains brought into charge to tax. The Comrs. of Inland Revenue refused the claim, & on appeal the Special Comrs. upheld this decision:—Held: as in fact the interest had been deducted in arriving at the assessable profits, it had not been paid out of profits brought into charge to tax, & that it was not open to the co. to claim revision of the assessments.—MULLER & CO. D. liability was to be computed; they also delivered to the assessor of taxes a statement showing the average profits to be £1,447 after making the adjustments required for income tax purposes. The inspector asked that the accounts should be certified by a qualified accountant in view of their magnitude, & applts. refused on the ground that there was no statutory authority for such a requirement. In due course the statement & accounts were laid before the Additional Comrs., who, not being satisfied, made an assessment of £2,000, against which applts. appealed. On the hearing of the appeal the General Comrs. were of opinion that examination of the books as proposed by applts. would occupy them for several weeks, & even then would not enable them to establish the correctness of the accounts because they were not professional accountants. The Comrs. accordingly, not being satisfied on the evidence tendered that the assessment was excessive, decided to confirm it unless within two months applts. should produce accounts audited by a qualified auditor. Applts. expressed dissatisfaction with the Comrs.' decision as being erroneous in point of law & required them to state a case:—Held: the Comrs.' decision was not ultra vires.—LUNT & Co. v. sum was applied in payment up of the new shares, which were to be offered to the shareholders in proportion to their existing shares with an option to them either to accept the new shares so fully paid up, or to take their nominal value in cash. A shareholder having accepted the whole of the new shares offered to him as fully paid, was assessed to super tax in respect thereof. 664a. ————.]—A limited co. appropriated for distribution among its ordinary shareholders as a capital bonus £200,000 undivided profits which had been carried to the credit of its reserve account, the amount to be applied (1) in subscribing for one hundred & fifty £1,000 4 per cent. debentures of the co., & (2) in paying up in full fifty thousand £1 unissued ordinary shares of the co. All the ordinary shares were held by one of the directors. The debentures, all of which were issued to this shareholder, were redeemable at one month's notice by the co. at any time, & at one month's notice by the holder after May 25, 1920. On Apr. 16, 1920, the whole of the £150,000 due on the debentures was paid by the co. to the holder, interest being waived by him, & the co. thereupon borrowed £72,500 from him at 6 per cent. interest, a liability reduced to £33,117 by June 30, 1920:—Held: the debentures constituted a capital receipt in the hands of the shareholder, & he was not assessable to super tax for the year 1920–21 in respect of the amount of the debentures.—*WHITMORE v. 666. For the existing paragraph substitute the following paragraph:—

Distribution of profits—Assets of company written up—Loans to directors written off.]—

A partnership business was converted into a limited co. in 1916, practically the whole of the shares therein being held by two resps., the original partners, who were brothers, & were also the governing directors. The accounts showed profits of £117,000 for the three years ending Dec. 1919, but no dividends were declared or paid. The co., having power to lend money, granted loans amounting to £283,000 to resps. at 5 per cent. interest, against which the capital assets were increased in value by £226,000 & profits drawn upon to the extent of £57,000. The actual cash lent was mainly provided by a bank overdraft. At a later date resps. duly passed resolutions purporting to cancel the debt of £283,000 by writing it off against the general reserve fund. Resps. having been assessed to super tax upon £283,000:—Held: (1) the loans were genuine loans, which gave rise to no liability to super tax, even if cancelled, except as to the £57,000 taken from profit & loss account; (2) the purported release of the debt was wholly invalid & ineffectual, & resps. remained liable to the co. to repay the whole amount of the £283,000 but were not liable for any super tax thereon.—HALL v. 668a. ————]—Part retained by trustees—For payment of death duties.]—Appl't's first husband, by his trust disposition & settlement, gave the whole of his property, real & personal, to trustees for payment of his debts, except those heritably secured on his real estate, his funeral expenses, & the management expenses of the trust, any legacies he might leave, & an annuity to a niece, & subject thereto, in the events which happened, the trustees were to hold the whole of his property on trust to pay out of the free income thereof an annuity to his sister, & subject to the implement of all prior purposes of the trust, the trustees were, as soon as convenient after his death, to convey all his lands & estates to applt. in life-rent during her life, with remainders over to a series of heirs, & to hold the whole of the residue of his property in trust for her in life-rent during her life & on her death to the person then entitled to the landed estates in fee. In addition to all powers competent to them by statute or common law, testator conferred on his trustees all powers of administration competent to a fee simple proprietor, & in particular, power to sell any part of his property & to grant leases of any part of the heritable property. On the death of testator in 1919, heavy death duties became payable on the heritable estates, which were already heavily mortgaged. The trustees elected to pay the duties by sixteen half-yearly instalments, of which the earliest were met out of the proceeds of sale of testator's stocks & shares. Pending the realisation of such part of the heritable estates as, after necessary reductions of the charges thereon, would be sufficient to meet the remaining instalments, the trustees retained the estates & the management thereof in their own hands, & paid applt. only the free annual income. On the footing that she was entitled to the life-rent of the estates from the date of her husband's death, applt. was assessed to super tax for the year 1923–24 on the whole annual value of the estates as assessed to income tax, Sched. A., for the previous year, & this assessment was upheld by the Special Comrs. on appeal:—Held: applt. was assessable to super tax for the year 1923–24 only on the amount of the free income actually receivable by her from the trustees for the preceding year, the trustees & not applt. being owners of the estates for the purposes of Sched. A. for that year.—DE ROBECK (LADY) v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1928), 13 Tax Cas. 345, H. L.

670a. Partnership—Payments to widow of deceased partner—For use of firm name.]—A partnership deed provided that in the event of death of a partner the remaining partners might continue to use the firm's name, marks, & goodwill, paying to the exors. of the deceased partner for this privilege the sum of £500 quarterly for a period of five years, "after which it may be enjoyed without further payment." One of the partners died, leaving one-half of his residuary estate in trust for his widow, applt. The value of deceased's share in the capital & income of the partnership was agreed & paid to the exors. in full discharge of all claims except the quarterly payments. These payments were duly made, at first in full, but later under deduction of income tax. Applt. was assessed to super tax for the year 1926-27 in respect of her half share of the four quarterly payments received in 1925-26 :—Held : the payments were income assessable to super tax.—MACKINTOSH v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1928), 14 Tax Cas. 15.

671a. Loans to controlling shareholder of private company—No dividends declared.—Applt. was the controlling shareholder of five private limited cos. From time to time he withdrew from the business of each of the cos. sums which he used to finance the purchase in his own name of premises to be occupied by himself trading as a firm. The sums so withdrawn were described in the cos.' accounts as "loans" to applt. trading as such firm. Each of the cos. had power to advance money on loan, with or without security, but, while in some cases the loans shown in the accounts to have been made to applt. were subsequently approved formally in general meeting, no previous formal authorisation was given for any of the loans. The loans were not secured by any document, & no provision was made as to repayment or interest thereon. None of the cos. ever declared a dividend for any of the years material to the case. The Special Comrs. decided that the loans in question had not been made in the course of the businesses carried on by the cos., & that they were not genuine loans but constituted income of applt. for the purposes of super tax :—Held : there was ample evidence before the Comrs. to support their conclusion of fact.—*JACOBS v. 673a. Income received by executor before assent to legacy.—Under the will of his father, who died in Aug. 1921, resp. was entitled to a specific legacy of certain shares in two cos. Owing to difficulties in administration the exors. did not assent to the legacy until June, 1924, & in the meantime dividends had been declared upon the shares in Feb. & Aug. 1923, & in Mar. 1924, which dividends were retained by the exors. until their assent in June, 1924. Resp. was assessed to super tax upon these dividends for the years ending Apr. 5, 1924, & Apr. 5, 1925, respectively, on the basis that they were his income for the years when such dividends were payable by the cos. Resp. contended that as he was not in a position to require payment of the dividends from the exors. until June, 1924, they were not his income or receivable by him until then, & that he was wrongly assessed :—Held : the doctrine of relation of the exor.'s assent to the date of the death applied, & resp. was rightly assessed.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. HAWLEY, [1928] 1 K. B. 578; 97 L. J. K. B. 191; 138 L. T. 710; 13 Tax Cas. 327.

673b. Income from share of residue—Administration not concluded.—Applt. on attaining the age of twenty-five became entitled to a quarter share in the capital & income of the residue of his father's estate, which consisted mainly of real property heavily mtged. The will provided that the property was to be divided when the youngest child attained twenty-five, which happened in 1916, & not before, & that until then the exors. & trustees should apply the surplus income, after payment of legacies, annuities, etc., in reduction of the mtge. debts. In fact the exors. did not divide the property & continued, from 1916 to 1925, to apply the surplus income to reducing the mtges. All testator's debts other than the mtge. debts had been paid off before Mar. 1919, & payment of certain legacies & annuities was begun in Dec. 1919, but no payment was made to the residuary legatees until 1921, after which small annual payments were made. The delivery of a residuary account was not necessary in this case as no legacy duty was payable on the residue. Assessments to super tax for the years 1920-21 to 1925-26 were made upon the applt. to include one-fourth of the income from the property, less annual charges, but without deduction for repayment of mtges. :—Held : so long as the mtge. or other debts remained unpaid the exors. were entitled to retain any assets coming to their hands, the applt. did not enforce conveyance to himself of his share of the residue, & there-estate generally to make various payments. He further directed them to allow his wife to "occupy & possess" during her lifetime, free of rent or taxes, both landlord's & tenant's, the mansion-house of M. :—Held : applt. was neither a proper liferenter, nor in a position analogous to that of a proper liferenter, of the lands, but had a mere right of personal occupation, & accordingly, that the annual value of the lands, did not form part of her income for super tax purposes.—MILLER v. INLAND REVENUE, [1928] S. C. (Ct. of Sess.) 819.—SCOT.

674a. Annual value of family mansion occupied under will.]—Held: the occupant of a family mansion, under the terms of a will by which trustees were given general powers of management of the real estate & a discretion to admit to the mansion the present occupant or certain members of his family during his lifetime, must be regarded as being in occupation under the will, & the profits & gains representing the annual value of the house formed part of his income for purposes of super tax.—TOLLEMACHE v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1926), 96 L. J. K. B. 766; 136 L. T. 444; 43 T. L. R. 58; 11 Tax Cas. 277.

674b. Difference between net Schedule A. assessment & reduced rental paid under lease.]—Resp. negotiated for a lease of a house at a rent of £135 per annum, but it was eventually agreed that if resp. would pay £683, which was necessary to put the premises in a fit state for habitation, a lease would be granted at a rent of £35 per annum. The sum of £683 was paid before the execution of the lease. The circumstances in which the rent was fixed at £35 per annum were not set out in the lease, which was for a term of seven years, shortly afterwards extended for another year in consideration of resp. contributing £141 towards further repairs, but it was agreed therein that the rent under any new lease should be £140 per annum:—Held: the sums paid by resp. for repairs at the beginning of his tenancy were capital expenditure, & the difference between the net Schedule A. assessment on the house & the rent of £35 actually paid under the lease formed part of his total income for super tax purposes.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. FARGUS (1926), 10 Tax Cas. 665.

674d. Profits of partnership—Executor of deceased partner becoming partner.]—Applt. was the sole extrix. & residuary legatee of her late husband, who, until his death in 1916, was a partner in a firm. At the time of his death large sums were owing to the firm from residents in enemy countries, & by arrangement with the Inland Revenue these were allowed as bad debts, on the understanding that any sums received in respect of them should be brought into account for income tax as profits of the firm of the year in which they were received. On her husband's death applt. became a partner in the firm. In 1921 a sum was received in respect of the enemy debts, in respect of which the firm was assessed to income tax in the year ended Apr. 5, 1923. By arrangement between the partners applt. bore a proportion of the assessment in respect of the sum so received proportionate to her late husband's share of the profits:—Held: no part of the sum received in respect of the enemy debts formed any part of applt.'s total income for super tax purposes.—LASSEN v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1927), 138 L. T. 463; 13 Tax Cas. 229.

674e. Undistributed profits of company—Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 21—“Reasonable time”—Termination by liquidation.]—The share capital of a limited co. registered in 1922 was held by four persons, & the co. was a co. to which above sect. applied. In Feb. 1924, the directors came to the conclusion that the prosperity of the business, which was speculative, might not continue. Accounts for the year to Mar. 31, 1924, were prepared, showing a profit of approximately £34,000, & were presented at the general meeting on May 14, 1924. No dividend was declared & at the same meeting a resolution for the voluntary winding-up of the co. was passed, & a liquidator appointed. The Special Comrs. issued a direction to the co. that for super tax purposes the co.'s income for the year ended Mar. 31, 1924, should be deemed to be the income of the four shareholders. This direction was discharged by the Special Comrs. on appeal, but was restored by the Board of Referees on a re-hearing. The contention of the co. was that above sect. had no application in the circumstances of the case, & that on the passing of the resolution for winding-up it had no power to declare a dividend:—Held: the co., by going into liquidation while the “reasonable time” contemplated by the Act was still running, terminated that reasonable time, & that in view of the intended liquidation it would have been reasonable for them to have distributed the whole of the available income.—SUTCLIFFE (LIONEL), LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1928), 14 Tax Cas. 171.

674f. Sums expended by trustees—Upkeep of trust property.]—Applt. was the tenant for life of a mansion & land under a will which provided that the trustees should pay all outgoing & expenses of keeping up the property. Applt. was assessed to super tax in respect of the sums so expended by the trustees:—Held: as applt. had had the benefit of the sums expended by the trustees, he was properly assessed to super tax in respect thereof.—SUTTON v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1929), 45 T. L. R. 565, C. A.

PART XI. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3.—A.

st. Lump sum paid to retiring partner.]—One of the partners of a firm having retired, the partnership business was continued by the remaining partners, & the retiring partner received £1,500 “in full satisfaction of his whole share & interest in the profits of the year current at the date of dissolution of the original partnership,”

& it was further provided that there should be paid to him quarterly “out of the future profits of the business” sums amounting to £500 for the first year, & diminishing gradually to £100 for the fifth year:—Held: (1) the £1,500 was not a share of the profits of the firm, but the price or consideration paid for a discharge by the retiring partner of his claim to participate in the profits of the firm prior to his retirement, & the agreement did not affect the ascertainment of their share of the profits up to that date; (2) the quarterly payments “out of the future profits” did fall to be taken into account in estimating their profits after that date.—*RUTHERFORD v. In Mar. 1896, the judge ordered the surplus income to be accumulated for twenty-one years from testator's death, i.e., until Nov. 6, 1914, or until the bachelor's previous death without leaving issue. During this twenty-one years' period the bachelor married & died leaving three children, two of whom were still living. Temporary orders for maintenance were made. In Nov. 1914, the judge declared that as from Nov. 6, 1914, the two children then living were entitled to maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43 (1), but that notwithstanding sub-sect. 2 any income not so applied passed as on an intestacy. In July, 1927, the elder child attained twenty-one, & her contingent moiety vested in possession. The question having arisen whether, having regard to Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 165, the order of Nov. 1911 ought still to be acted on with regard to the younger child's contingent moiety :—Held : (1) the effect of sect. 165 was that the years of minority accumulation, which commenced during the twenty-one years' period, were not to be reckoned in ascertaining that period, & the income of the younger child's contingent moiety must in the first place be applied for her maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 43 (1), & the balance could be validly accumulated under sub-sect. 2; (2) quite apart from sect. 165, the moment the elder child attained a vested interest as a member of the contingent class, there could be no question of intestacy as to any part of the capital or income.—Re MABER, WARD v. 1128 iv. — — — — — J.—A child is further protected by Children's Protection Act, R. S. O. 1927, c. 279, s. 25 (3), which provides that, when it has been abandoned or deserted, or has been allowed by the parent to be brought up by a Children's Aid Society or by another person, in circumstances which show that the parent was unmindful of his parental duties, the judge shall not give the child to the parent, unless satisfied that, having regard to the welfare of the child, he is a fit person to have the custody of it. When once a child has been taken from its parents & made a ward of a Children's Aid Society & then placed out with foster parents, the parents have forfeited their natural rights, & others have acquired rights. The words "having regard to the welfare of the child" indicate that the intention of the statute is that the judge, in determining whether the parent is a fit person to have the child restored to him, should contrast the situation of the child in the care of its foster parents with that which it would occupy if restored to its natural parents.—Re CHMIELEWSKI, [1928] 2 D. 1126 v. — [—] In exercising its jurisdiction, derived from the C.E. of Chancery, as to the custody of a child whom its parent has allowed to be brought up by another person at that person's expense, the duty and power of the K. S. S. 1920, c. 155, s. 7 (b). Therefore, although the C. concludes that the parent has not been "unmindful of his parental duties" within said section, it should not, nevertheless, order the child to be restored to him if in its opinion the child's welfare in the widest sense, i.e., its material, moral, religious & physical well being, requires that the order should be refused. st. By agreement.—Under Child Welfare Act, C. A., 1924, c. 30, as amended in 1926, c. 4, s. 15, a person who, when a child within the said Act, was adopted under an agreement entered into prior to Sept. 1, 1921, between a person having his or her legal guardianship, & the adopting parent has the same status, including the right of inheriting from his or her foster parents dying after said amendment, except as to property expressly limited to heirs of the body, as if he or she were their child by natural birth, whether or not said adopted person was a "child" when the amendment came into force, & is, therefore, to be deemed the child of the foster parents for the purposes of Life Insurance Act, C. A., 1924, c. 99. The Act does not, however, create a new canon for the construction of wills. Therefore, where the adopted daughter was the niece of the foster father's wife, & his will, after making provision for said adopted daughter by name, gave part of the residue of his estate to his &

his wife's next-of-kin, the daughter took under the residuary bequest as his wife's niece & not as testator's child.—Re SCOTT ESTATE, [1928] 1 W. W. R. 168.—CAN.

Registration was effected, the registering officer having satisfied himself, as required by sect. 41, that the person presenting was entitled to do so according to sect. 40, & it not having been objected that he was not so entitled.—Held: the document was duly registered, since the natural father, as the adoptive son's nearest male agnate, was the proper person to act as his natural guardian in the absence of any guardian judicially appointed; further, that any doubt upon the facts was removed by the certificate of the registering officer.—*VENKATAPATYA v. Pltf. society was incorporated in 1885, under Cos. Act, 1867, as a co. not for gain without the use of the word "limited" under licence of the Board of Trade. In 1886 pltf. society recommended its members to adopt as their professional designation the use after their names of the term "Incorporated Accountant." By 1905 that designation had come to mean to that section of the public who had dealings with accountants a member of the society, which, by its system of tests & examinations, had conferred upon its members the valuable privilege of a recognised status for ability & integrity. In that year deft. association was incorporated under the Cos. Acts as a co. limited by guarantee. Shortly after its incorporation its council recommended its members to adopt the designation "Incorporated Accountant" with the addition of the abbreviation "Lon. Assocn." In an action by pltf. society against deft. assocn. & G., one of its members, claiming (a) an injunction to restrain G. from using in connection with business of accountant the designation "incorporated accountant," & (b) an injunction to restrain deft. society from holding out, by advertisements or otherwise, that its members were entitled to use such designation:—Held: the designation "incorporated accountant" was a fancy & not a descriptive term, & had come to denote membership of the society, & therefore, that the unauthorised use of it inflicted an injury on pltf. society, in respect of which it was entitled to maintain an action. Pltf. society had a pecuniary interest in preventing deft. assocn. from attempting, by representations & inducements held out to members of the professions, to reduce the status of pltf. society by conferring improperly an indication of that status. Pltf. society was entitled

In an action by the institute for an injunction the evidence was that this heading conveyed the impression that deft. was still connected with the institute:—Held: though deft. was entitled to state that he had obtained honours in the examination, the institute was entitled to an injunction against his making the statement in such a way as to lead to the belief that he was a member of the institute or was connected with it.—*INSTITUTE OF CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS OF ENGLAND & WALES v. - 171a. — — — — — A proposal form for the insurance of a motor-bus was signed by the person wishing to effect the insurance, but the answers to the questions therein, which were warranted to be true & to form the basis of the contract, were filled in by the insurance co.'s agent, who, although told the true facts, wrote, for some unexplained reason, answers which were untrue in a material respect. The agent was not authorised by the insurance co. to fill in proposal forms, & it did not appear that the co. knew that he had in fact done so. His duties were to procure persons to effect insurances & to see, as far as he could, that proposal forms were correctly filled up; he was not authorised to give a cover note or to enter into a policy of insurance. A policy was issued to the person who had signed the proposal form, & during its currency he made a claim under it, but the insurance co. repudiated liability on the ground of the untrue statements in the proposal form:—Held: the agent of the insurance co. in filling in the proposal form was merely the amanuensis of the proposer, that the knowledge of the true facts by the agent could not be imputed to the insurance co., & therefore that the insurance co. was entitled to repudiate liability on the ground of the untrue statements in the proposal form.—*NEWSHOLME BROS. v. - 218a. Representation of underwriter—Estoppel of insurer.—The claimant owned a motor car which he sometimes let out on hire & sometimes used himself for his own pleasure. He wished to insure the car, & instructed brokers to effect an insurance. The brokers interviewed the underwriter of resps., & he showed them a form of policy & said that it would cover both private pleasure & private hire by the insured. The claimant on being informed of this signed a proposal form for a policy & his broker stated in the form that the purpose for which the car would be used was "private hire"; the broker meant thereby that private hire would be the principal risk. Resps. then issued to the claimant a policy which in words covered "private pleasure or private hire," but which provided that the signed proposal form was incorporated with it & formed the basis of the contract. An accident occurred while the claimant was using the car for his own pleasure, & he made a claim under the policy. Resps. refused to pay, on the ground that as the proposal form was the basis of the policy & only related to the car while on hire an accident occurring while the car was not on hire was not covered. The dispute was referred to arbitration, & the arbitrator awarded in favour of the claimant, subject to the decision of a special case. On argument of the case :—Held: the arbitrator had acted rightly in admitting evidence of the interview between the brokers & the underwriter, & even apart from such evidence, as there was an inconsistency between the proposal form & the policy, the later document must prevail. On the facts, resps. were estopped from disputing the claim because their underwriter knew that the claimant had taken out the policy in reliance on his representation that it would cover private pleasure.—KAUFMANN v. effect of assigning the policy in the manner in which the policy was assigned, which was the ordinary manner in which policies were assigned in England, was to assign to the person holding the policy the right to sue on any claim which the assignor had on the policy, irrespective of the fact that at the time of the loss or damage the assignee was not interested in the subject-matter lost or damaged. 720a. ————].—Pltfs. insured a consignment of gunpowder on a voyage & reinsured with defts. Both the original policy & the reinsurance policies covered perils of the sea & jettison, & were expressed to be "warranted free from loss arising from . . . destruction . . . in a port of distress or otherwise." The original policy contained no admission of seaworthiness, but the reinsurance policies did contain such an admission, & they provided that defts. would "pay as paid thereon," & that the payment should be subject to the same terms as in the original policy. The vessel carried, in addition to the gunpowder, drums of sulphuric acid, & owing to heavy weather some of the drums burst & the acid disabled the machinery, with the result that the ship had to put in to a port of distress. There the required repairs could not be carried out with the gunpowder on board, & it was thrown overboard & became a total loss. Pltfs. paid the owners as for a total loss, & claimed to be reimbursed by defts.:—Held: as the way in which the sulphuric acid was stowed & loaded affected the safety of the ship & rendered her unseaworthy, pltfs. were under no liability on the original policy, & they could not recover from defts. on the reinsurance policies.—*FIREMAN'S FUND INSURANCE CO. v. 720b. "On a voyage."—Pltfs. insured a consignment of oranges from any port in Spain to Antwerp, & after the ship had left Valencia had been in wireless communication with Gibraltar, they reinsured with deft. by a slip, which referred to the fact that the ship had been in such communication with Gibraltar & which contained the words "on a voyage," meaning, according to the evidence, that the risk should attach only from a named port in the course of the voyage. The ship stranded before she reached Gibraltar, the oranges were damaged, & pltfs. had to pay on the policy. In an action on the contract of reinsurance:—Held: on the true reading of the slip, the intention was to limit the risk to the voyage from Gibraltar, & the action failed.—*EAGLE, STAR & BRITISH DOMINIONS INSURANCE CO., LTD. v. 720c. Insured object in damaged condition at expiration of insurance—Continuation of risk for "immediate consequences" of such damage.—Pltfs., reinsurers of a risk under a marine policy, reinsured that risk with defts. The policies were subject to the following conditions: "In the event of the vessel not being at the place of destination on the date of the expiration of the policy, the insurance shall continue in force till the end of the day when the vessel arrives at her first place of destination;" & "If the insured object is in a damaged condition at the time when the insurance expires, the risk shall continue for the immediate consequences of such damage until the object without unnecessary delay has been repaired or sold." On the date of the expiration of the policy, the vessel had not arrived at L. Bay, her first place of destination, but before reaching it she grounded on a reef & was taken into L. Bay badly damaged. Temporary repairs having been effected, she continued her voyage, but as she began to leak again she had to be run ashore in order to prevent sinking, & was subsequently sold as a wreck. Pltfs. having paid the original insurers as for a total loss, claimed against defts. on their reinsurance policy:—Held: the loss was an immediate consequence of the damage done by the original stranding, & the risk covered by the policy continued, until the vessel was repaired with no unnecessary delay, for the immediate consequences of the original damage.—*MERCHANTS' MARINE INSURANCE CO. v. 855a. Effect of clause.]—Claimants insured with defts. a quantity of cork from a port or place between Bordeaux & Nice to the United Kingdom. Claimants were cork growers & had a factory & warehouse near Algieras, & they had sent from the factory to Algieras quantities of cork for shipment, & had allowed it to accumulate on the jetty there until there should be enough for a cargo. While a quantity of cork was on the jetty awaiting shipment & before the policy was issued, a fire broke out on the jetty, & to prevent the fire spreading, the authorities jettisoned part of the cork & threw sea-water on the remainder, with the result that a large portion of the cork was lost or damaged. The policy, when issued, contained (inter alia) a marginal clause that the policy was not to enure to the benefit of any fire insurance co., but loss reasonably attributable to fire was covered. It also contained a warehouse to warehouse clause. A claim under the policy was referred to arbns., & the arbitrator treated the marginal clause as non-existent, on the ground that it was not included, or stipulated for, in the slip which represented the true contract between the parties, & he also found that the loss was one reasonably attributable to fire:—Held: (1) the goods on the pier at Algieras, having come in the ordinary course of transit from the shippers' manufactory at San Roque, were covered by the policy; (2) there being an existing fire & an imminent peril, the damage caused by water, used either to extinguish the fire or to prevent it from spreading, was a proximate consequence of fire, which could be recovered under the general words of the policy, as being eiusdem generis with fire; (3) the underwriters were not relieved from liability by the restraint of princes clause; (4) the case must be remitted to the arbitrator upon the question whether the policy issued, so far as it contained the fire policy clause, was or was not contrary to the usual form of marine insurance on goods.—*SYMINGTON & CO. v. 1660a. —.—A sailing ship, of which pltf. was mtgee., was insured by a policy, underwritten by deft., against perils of the sea & fire, &, as per Institute Time Clauses, clause 8, against loss of the vessel "caused through the negligence of master, mariners, engineers or pilots." The vessel was damaged by ice & she leaked badly, & the captain, expecting a gale in which he thought she would be lost, decided to abandon her, &

he set fire to her to prevent her from being a danger to navigation, & he & the crew then abandoned her. In an action by the mtgee. on the policy deft. did not allege any misconduct by the assured, by the mtgee., or by the managing owner, & there was no evidence that the abandonment was a wilful casting away of the ship by the master:—Held: on the facts the abandonment was unreasonable on the part of the master & constituted negligence, & this negligence, resulting in the continuing action of a previously existing peril of the sea, was covered by clause 8, & even apart from that clause, as the peril of the sea had endangered the ship & the negligence of the master resulted in proper measures not being taken to save her, pltf. was entitled to recover under Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 55 (2) (a).—LIND v. - 2010a. — Recovery of damages in collision action.—Defts. insured plffs. steamer against the usual marine risks, the steamer being valued in the policy at £4,000. During the currency of the policy the steamer collided with another steamer. The ship was repaired at plffs.' cost, & a collision action by plffs. against the owners of the other steamer was settled, & the owners of the other steamer paid over to plffs. £2,500, as being half the damages. In an action against defts. plffs. contended that, as the balance of their loss was £2,500 they were entitled to recover that amount, it being less than the value of £4,000 put on the steamer in the policy:—Held: defts. were liable only for £1,500, being the difference between £4,000 & £2,500, the amount recovered by plffs. from the owners of the other ship.—*GOOLE & HULL STEAM TOWING CO., LTD. v. - 2014a. Loss less than amount paid into court.—Resps. insured applts.' tug boat by a policy of marine insurance, which provided that, on a claim for a constructive total loss, the insured value was to be taken as the repaired value, & that nothing was to be taken into account for the damaged value, & also that all claims were to be subject to English law & usage. The tug was sunk by collision, & applts. at once gave notice of abandonment. Salvors employed by resps. raised the tug in a few days, & the abandonment was not accepted. The salvors, without the knowledge of applts., made an offer to resps. for the tug, & resps. requested them to put it into writing, which they did. The appellate ct., considering the evidence as to the probable cost of repair, held that there had been only a partial loss to an amount less than that paid into ct.:—Held: (1) the sinking was not an actual total loss; (2) resps. were not precluded from denying that they had accepted the abandonment; (3) there had been no constructive total loss within Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 60 (2) (i), since even at the date of the abandonment it was not unlikely that the tug could be recovered, & it was unnecessary to consider whether the old rule, that the crucial moment was the commencement of the action, had been modified by sects. 61 & 62; (4) the appellate ct. was not bound to accept the highest estimate of the cost of repairs given 2341a. ——— Damages for negligence in watching wreck.]—Defts. & other underwriters insured pl'tfs.' steamship A. against total loss, & to the extent of three-quarters against damages which pl'tfs. might have to pay for collisions with other vessels. The A. was sunk in a river & in fact was a constructive total loss. Notice of abandonment was given & acceptance thereof refused. Pl'tfs. & defts. agreed without prejudice to their rights to take joint action to salve the property. The master of the A. employed a tug to watch the wreck & warn other vessels. Owing to the negligence of the crew of the tug the steamship S. came into collision with the A., & both vessels sustained damage. In an action brought, in the names of pl'tfs., by & for the benefit of defts., against the S., the owners of the S. counter-claimed & recovered judgment for the whole of their damages & costs, & the underwriters paid three-quarters of the damages & costs to the owners of the S.:—Held: the underwriters were jointly liable to indemnify pl'tfs. against the remaining one-quarter of the damages & costs of the S., the liability not arising under the policy but upon the contract of indemnity.—*SUART & STEAMSHIP ALLEGHANY OF LONDON, LTD. v. 2404a. Prosecution of claim—Condition limiting time for.]—Pl'tfs. were interested in a certificate of insurance which was issued under two policies of marine insurance subscribed by defts. in respect of 100 barrels of pure gum turpentine shipped from Florida to Rotterdam. The policies provided for payment for "leakages from any cause in excess of 1 per cent. on each invoice." It was the practice of the trade, at the port of shipment, to gauge the barrels of turpentine & to express the result in gallons, & at the port of discharge to weigh it & to express the result in kilograms with an allowance for reduction on account of the varying temperature conditions of 3.25 kilograms to the gallon. The policies also contained a stipulation providing that no suit or action for the recovery of any claim should be maintainable in any ct. unless such suit or action be commenced within one year from the happening of the loss out of which the claim arose, but that limitation clause did not occur in the certificate. When the vessel was discharged a shortage in respect of the gallons of turpentine shipped was ascertained to have taken place. Defts. having refused to pay upon the ground that there was no sufficient evidence of the loss & that the claim was not instituted within the year, the present claim was brought by the pl'tfs. on the certificate:—Held: the limitation clause was not one which bound the certificate holder. The rights of the original policy holder, which were conveyed to the certificate holder, comprised the rights given by the policy qualified by all the conditions & warranties which affected the nature & extent of the insurance granted, but did not impose an obligation affecting only a limitation of time within which the rights so given were to be enforced; (2) an actual physical loss had been proved based upon the calculations, & there seriously ill with pneumonia. On July 26 defts. received the cheque, & thereupon they sent to L. a certificate of that date stating that the proposal had been accepted, & that upon the payment of the first quarterly premium a policy would be issued in due course. On July 27 L. died. His administrators sued defts. for the sum insured:—Held: (1) the acceptance of the proposal by defts. was made in reliance upon the continued truth of the representations therein, & as the risk had been materially increased between proposal & acceptance, a condition which defts. had made a condition going to the root of the contract had not been fulfilled; (2) since contracts of insurance were contracts uberrimæ fidei, there was a duty of disclosure on the part of the assured to inform defts. of his change of health, which was a material change in the risk insured, & the position was here even stronger because defts. had inserted express terms in their documents to protect themselves.—*LOOKER v. In any such case the directors may allow to the policy-holder such part of the sum assured as they shall think fit, & the policy shall remain in force to the extent of the pecuniary interest of third parties bonâ fide acquired for valuable consideration, satisfactory proof of which will be required, provided notice thereof in writing shall have been received & admitted by the directors at least one month prior to the date of death." The co. advanced money to the assured on a mtge. of leasehold property & on assignment to them of the policy by way of security. It was provided by a clause in the mtge. that the co. should satisfy themselves primarily out of the policy money. The assured committed suicide, & the co. commenced an action against his extrix. for the purpose of enforcing their security:—Held: upon the true construction of clause 5, the expression "third 2993a. Extension of period of policy by insured—Effect of.—By an insurance policy dated Aug. 13, 1925, an assurance co. agreed to pay the assured, his exors., administrators or assigns £1,000 in the event of his death on or before July 31, 1926. The assured assigned the benefit of the policy to deft. In July, 1926, the assured arranged for an extension of the period of insurance to Oct. 31, 1926, & this extension was given effect to by indorsing on the policy a declaration "that the sum assured shall be payable in the event of the death of the life assured on or before Oct. 31, 1926." No assignment was ever made of the benefit of this extension. The assured died on Oct. 1, 1926:—Held: (1) the extension of the period of the policy by indorsement was not a new contract of insurance, but a variation of the original contract of which the benefit was vested in deft., & she was entitled to recover the policy money by virtue of the assignment to her of the policy; (2) the effect of the transaction was that the assured entered into the contract for the extension of the policy for the benefit of deft. & as trustee for her, & deft. was, on that ground, entitled to the policy money.—*ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE v. An insured person, who was riding a bicycle, got off at the foot of a hill, & having pushed it some way, stopped to speak to another man & stood holding his bicycle, & an unattended motor-car came running down the hill & struck the insured person & caused his death:—Held: the word "vehicle" included a bicycle, & as the deceased man was "in charge of" the bicycle within those words in the policy, the insurers were not liable.—*HARPER v. Pltf. brought an action for personal injuries against deft., & the latter served on the insurance co. a third-party notice claiming an indemnity. An appearance without protest was entered in the action on behalf of deft., & as the Peruvian Minister forbade deft. to raise the plea of diplomatic immunity, no such plea was inserted in the defence. The jury found a verdict for pltf. for damages, & the insurance co. repudiated liability on the ground that deft. had broken the conditions of the policy by insisting that the plea of diplomatic immunity should not be raised:—Held: the privilege of diplomatic immunity was waived by the entry of appearance without protest, & as deft. was bound to obey the direction of his Minister there was no breach of the conditions of the policy, & deft. was entitled to the indemnity claimed.—DICKINSON v. The action was based upon a provision in the policy insuring pltf. against legal liability for bodily injuries sustained by any one in respect of the operation of his car. The defence relied upon pltf.'s failure to give written notice to the co. in the manner required by the policy. Pltf. had notified deft. co.'s agent on the day following the accident by exhibiting to him the letter from the injured party's solr. threatening action unless the compensation claimed was paid. Evidence was given to show that on previous occasions verbal notice was given to the agent, & notices so given were recognised & acted upon by payment of claims:—Held: the agent was authorised to act for the co. notwithstanding the provision in the policy requiring the insured promptly to give written notice to the co.: verbal notice given was sufficient within the meaning of the contract & the defence of absence of written notice failed.—DUNTHY v. 3214a. ————]—A policy of insurance provided that the insurance co. would indemnify the assured against all sums which he might be legally liable to pay for damages or compensation to any person for accidental bodily injury or accidental damage to property, where such injury or damage was caused by the driving of the insured's motor car, including law costs when incurred with the consent of the co. While the insured was driving his motor car a collision took place between it & a motor cycle, the result being that the driver of the latter vehicle was injured, a passenger thereon was killed, & both vehicles were damaged. At the time of the collision the insured was drunk through his own unpremeditated folly. The insured was convicted of the manslaughter of the deceased passenger. The injured driver brought an action for personal injuries against the insured, in which he was awarded damages & costs, & the insured incurred costs. The insured also incurred costs in repairing the vehicles, in attending an inquest on deceased, & in defending himself in the police ct. proceedings before his trial. In an action by the insured against the co. for indemnity against these damages & costs:—Held: (1) the policy covered liabilities of the insured for accidental bodily injury to any person or accidental damage to property caused by his negligence, even though gross & attended by criminal consequences; (2) the policy, by covering these liabilities, was not void as against public policy, & the insured was entitled to the indemnity which he claimed.—*JAMES v. The extension of the indemnity to friends or relatives of the insured is conditional upon such friend or relative being a licensed & competent driver & not being insured under any other policy. Condition 10. If at the happening of any accident, injury, damage, or loss covered by this policy there shall be subsisting any other insurance or indemnity of any nature whatever covering same, whether effected by insured or by any other person, then the co. shall not be liable to pay or contribute towards any such damage or loss more than a ratable proportion of any sum payable in respect thereof for compensation." L., G.'s brother-in-law, took out with the G. co. a similar policy, providing that "insured will also be indemnified hereunder while personally driving a car not belonging to him provided that there is no other insurance in respect of such other car whereby insured may be indemnified," & that "if at the time of the occurrence of any accident, loss or damage there shall be any other indemnity or insurance subsisting whether effected by insured or by any other person the corp'n. shall not be liable to pay or contribute more than a ratable proportion of any sums payable in respect of such accident loss or damage." While L. was driving G.'s car with G.'s consent it had a collision, & L. had to pay damages. G., as trustee for L., claimed against the M. co., & L. on his own behalf claimed against the G. co.:—Held: in each policy the provision as to ratable contribution qualified the preceding clause, & each co. was liable to pay claimants half the amount claimed.—*GALE v. 3217b. Action by repairer against insurers for repairs—Right of insurers to be subrogated to owner's rights against repairer.—In an action by the repairer of a motor car against an insurance co. for repairs executed at their request, the co. contended that they were entitled to set-off, on the principle of subrogation, the claims of the assured, the owner of the car, against the repairer, who had been driving the car on the occasion of a collision. The insurance co. had commenced an action, in the name of the owner, against the repairer for the damage done to the car by his negligent driving, but, at the date of the commencement of the action by the repairer, certain claims of the assured under the policy in regard to third party risks, etc., were still unsettled:—Held: the fact that these claims were then unsettled prevented the insurance co. from being subrogated to the owner's rights against the repairer, & the co. were not entitled to rely on these as a set-off to the repairer's claim.—*PAGE v. SCOTTISH INSURANCE CORPN., FORSTER v. PAGE (1929), 98 L. J. K. B. 308; sub nom. PAGE v. SCOTTISH INSURANCE CORPN., FORSTER v. PAGE, 140 L. T. 571; 45 T. L. R. 250; 73 Sol. Jo. 157; 34 Com. 3217c. Condition as to efficient condition of vehicle.—The claimants were the holders of a policy by which resp. co. had undertaken liability for damage caused by or to a motor car. The policy contained a condition that "the insured shall take all reasonable steps to maintain such vehicle in efficient condition." & it provided that the observation of the conditions should be a condition precedent to the liability of the co. The claimants removed the foot-brake from the vehicle, leaving only a hand-brake, & in this state of affairs the vehicle caused damage, & was itself damaged, in an accident, but the exact cause of the accident could not be ascertained:—Held: the condition was a condition precedent, & as it had been broken |

the co. was not liable on the policy.—

PART VIII.

g i. ——— Misstatements in proposal—What amount to.—A motor vehicle in the possession of the purchaser under a hire-purchase agreement was destroyed by fire. An action was brought by the two parties to the hire-purchase agreement under a policy issued in the names of both parties. Defts. pleaded that all benefit under the policy had been forfeited through misstatements in the proposal. The proposal began "I we, the undersigned desire to insure my/our motor vehicle." After the words "owner's full name," was written the names of both pltf.s, "for their respective rights & interests." The question "Have you ever made a claim against any insurance co." was answered "No." The proposal was signed by only one pltf. Although pltf. who signed the proposal had never made a claim, the other had done so:—Held: a non-suit, on the ground that the evidence proved the plea, should be set aside.—MEYERS & PADDINGTON MOTOR SERVICE, LTD. v. DALGETY & CO., LTD. (1926), 26 S. R. N. S. W. 195; 43 N. S. W. W. N. 39.—AUS.

g ii. ———
—A proposal for the insurance of a motor car contained the question, "Has any proposal for insurance, or any policy ever been withdrawn, declined or cancelled?" Pltf.'s answer was "No." Pltf. had held a policy over the car with another co., but by arrangement, & to oblige pltf., this policy had been terminated:—Held: the word "cancelled" meant the determination of the policy by the unilateral act of the co., & the termination of the policy by mutual arrangement did not amount to a cancellation, & the answer to the question in the proposal was true.—WILLCOCKS v. NEW ZEALAND INSURANCE CO., [1926] N. Z. L. R. 805.—N.Z.

—Held: a statement that the motor car insured was a new one, whereas in fact it was a second-hand one, was a material representation which avoided the policy.—ABASS v. GLOBE & RUTGERS F. INS. CO., [1927] 1 D. L. R. 435; 59 N. S. R. 81.—CAN.

g vii. — Condition that car not operated by assured's son—Car driven at son's request—Son present.—A policy of insurance upon a motor car contained a term that it was not covered if the car was "operated" by assured's son (naming him). The car was taken out by the son without assured's consent, & against his express prohibition, & was destroyed by fire upon a highway. The fire occurred when the car was being driven by a friend of the son, at the son's request, the latter being in the car with the driver.—Held: the son was still "operating" the car within the prohibitive term, & an action by the assured upon the policy was dismissed.—O'REILLY v. g viii. — After returning from hire—Insured for "private personal use."—The owner of a motor car insured it against loss or damage by fire. Condition 3 of the policy was that it should apply "only to a car for private personal use," & that no liability should be incurred if & when it was being used otherwise; & condition 4 expressly excluded liability for loss or damage arising while the car was "let out for hire." The car was normally used in a private hiring business conducted by the owner, & was only rarely employed by him for private personal purposes. After returning from a hire late one night it was put in its garage, & was shortly afterwards destroyed by fire. The owner made a claim under the policy, but the co. denied liability.—Held: the co. was not liable, in respect that the risk to which the car was exposed while in the garage was incidental to its ordinary employment, i.e. in the hiring business, & accordingly, the loss was one which was excluded by the policy.—MURRAY

Both before & after seizure B. gave formal notice to the sheriff that the furniture was his, & on the 23rd issued a writ in an action against the sheriff for an injunction & damages. On the 25th the sheriff issued an interpleader summons, under which an issue was directed & an order made for the sheriff withdrawing from possession on payment of £100 into ct. & the sheriff withdrew from possession on Sept. 1. B.'s title was afterwards admitted by the judgment creditor, & the £100 paid out to B. The daughter & son-in-law usually had their meals with the accused in the kitchen. The other three were not boarders. The liquor in question was a case of beer which was found on the stairway leading from the kitchen to the basement. The magistrate dismissed the charge & the Crown appealed, contending that the keeping of said lodgers & boarders had destroyed the character of the premises as a "private dwelling-house":—Held the appeal should be dismissed.—*R. v. 202a. Applicant's willingness to contribute to compensation fund.—A question arose which of two adjacent licensed houses should be granted a renewal of its licence, & which should be suppressed. The owners of each house submitted to the licensing justices plans of proposed alterations, & the owners of one of the houses offered to pay £1.250 to the compensation fund if the alterations were sanctioned. The same licensing justices sat as compensation authority to consider the question of redundancy, & decided to renew the licence of the house whose owners had offered the contribution, it appearing from the evidence that that house, when altered, could be made the better of the two. They then, as licensing justices, approved the alterations to that house:—Held: (1) in considering the question of the contribution offered to the compensation fund the licensing justices had taken extraneous matter into account, & as this must necessarily have affected their minds as compensation authority, their decision must be quashed; (2) it was contrary to the spirit of the Licensing Acts, though it might be within the letter of them, that the powers of the compensation authority should be delegated to the licensing committee so that the two bodies were identical, it being clearly intended that they should be separate & independent bodies.—*R. v. The justices refused to sanction the proposed alterations, unless appetts. bricked up a door which was in the yard behind the premises, & which gave access to a site on which a public market place was being erected:—Held: the words of Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910 (c. 24), s. 71, which were descriptive of the alterations requiring the justices' consent, did not limit the justices to consideration of those named matters; & it was their duty to consider all relevant matters, of which the means of access to the premises might be one.—*R. v. The application was opposed, but the license was granted unconditionally. The confirming authority, after hearing the case for & against the application, confirmed the license subject to two conditions. Notice of this decision was given to the licensing justices, who told the confirming authority that they did not agree to the second condition. At a further meeting of the confirming authority it was decided to confirm the grant subject only to the first condition. No notice was given to the parties, & they had no opportunity of appearing at this meeting & arguing as to the variation of the conditions. A rule nisi for certiorari to quash the order of the confirming authority was obtained on the ground that the authority acted without jurisdiction in confirming the license:—Held: (1) as soon as the confirming authority had ascertained the views of the licensing justices it was their duty to sit judicially in the presence of the parties interested to determine whether or not the alterations made by the licensing justices should be accepted. As this had not been done, the order made by the confirming authority was a nullity, & the matter must go back to them to hear & determine it in the presence of the parties interested; (2) the meeting of the confirming authority ought to be constituted of the same members as were present at the original meeting.—*R. v. The solr. duly appeared & opposed, & the compensation authority refused the renewal, subject to payment of compensation. Three of the justices who sat & voted as members of the compensation authority had been parties to the resolution of the licensing justices authorising a solicitor to appear on their behalf:—Held: the three justices were disqualified from sitting on the compensation tribunal on the ground of bias, & the decision

On the trial the evidence showed that the liquor in question was found in an automobile owned & driven by deft., & some evidence was offered by the Crown indicating unlawful importation. The trial judge instructed the jury that the burden of proof of lawful importation & payment of duty was upon deft., & the Crown was only bound to establish harbouring without lawful excuse:—Held: under the instructions given to them the jury would be likely to place the whole burden upon accused, whereas, under the wording of the statute, the necessity of proof by the Crown of importation was implied, &, consequently, there should be a new trial.—*R. v. The justices dismissed the summons on the ground that the time at which resp. was found drunk was after the hours when the sale of intoxicating liquor was permitted:—Held: since at the time in question the premises were open & there was nothing to prevent the sale of food & non-intoxicating liquor at that time, the justices ought to have convicted resp.—*EVANS v. 728 ix. ———.]—A resident in a licensed hotel was visited by three friends, who were non-residents. After the permitted hours for the sale or supply of liquor, he ordered & paid for three rounds of drinks, which were consumed by himself & his guests:—Held: the hotelkeeper had supplied the liquor to the resident's guests, & had been guilty of a contravention of Licensing Act, 1921 (c. 42), s. 4 (a).—McBAIN v. MITCHELL, [1927] S. C. (J.)

el f. ———.]—A licensee of a hotel, who was seated on a form outside the hotel, was asked to supply liquor to an unexcepted person. He went inside the hotel, came out & handed the liquor to the person, who paid him. There was a light in a room in the hotel described by witnesses as the saloon bar:—Held: an offence had been committed against Licensing Act, 1917, s. 185, & the ct. would take judicial notice of the fact that liquor was kept in a saloon bar.—ALLCHURCH v. HEALEY, [1927] S. A. S. R. 370.—AUS.

sn. Proclamation prohibiting sale during specified hours of named day—Validity of.]—Held: the power conferred upon the Governor in Council by Liquor Act, 1912 (N. S. W.), s. 57 (1) (b), was a power to name a day during the whole of which licensed premises shall not be open for the sale of liquor & no power was given to direct that, during specified hours of a named day, licensed premises should not be open for the sale of liquor.—DELANEY v. GANT (1927), 40 C. L. R. 174.—AUS.

so. Bye-law prohibiting sale on New Year's day—Sale to bond fide traveller.]—A county licensing ct. issued a bye-law that all licensed premises within the district, including inns & hotels, except as regarded travellers & lodgers therein, should be closed wholly on New Year's day, & when New Year's day fell on a Sunday, then on Monday, Jan. 2:—Held: under this bye-law a Monday falling on Jan. 2 must be treated as a Sunday, & accordingly, an hotel-keeper who had supplied a customer on such a Monday, outwith the permitted week-day hours, had not infringed his certificate where the customer was a bond fide traveller who could lawfully have been supplied on Sunday.—HENDERSON v. ROSS, [1928] S. C. (J.) 74.—SCOT.

sg. Customers leaving premises during prohibited hours—Carrying bottles.]—A licensee was convicted upon an information alleging that a disposal of liquor unlawfully took place on his licensed premises during prohibited hours. The evidence for the prosecution was that during prohibited hours two men were seen coming out of deft.'s licensed premises, & that one of them was carrying six bottles of beer, & the other four bottles. No evidence was called by deft., who was convicted:—Held: no inference could be drawn from the evidence before the ct. that the beer in question was disposed of after closing time rather than before; the liquor was presumed to have been lawfully acquired until the contrary was shown, & the conviction should be quashed.—*WALSH v. The liquor which he was found to have had unlawfully in his possession was beer manufactured in the Province of Quebec, & was intoxicating liquor, within the Act, which delt. had imported into Ontario.—Held: the Province had the right to prohibit the keeping of intoxicating liquor within its bounds for purposes other than those authorised by Dominion Legislature; s. 72 (2) should be viewed as a measure of control of the liquor traffic in the Province & enacted for the purpose of making control by the Province effective, & not as a prohibition of import.—*R. v. Pltf. has no personal right to have sewers kept in proper condition. It is a matter, as LORD HALSBURY says, for the whole district; it is a matter committed to the special jurisdiction of a department which is a Government department, who have to act, not with regard to the interests of any particular individual, but with regard to the interests of the district generally. I am not aware that any ct. has ever in such a case made a declaration at the suit of a member of the public, & still less in a case where, as I have said, I am not satisfied that any real principle of justice requires the ct. to determine the matter (MAUGHAM, J.).—CLARK v. But if it is not clear, then it is not part of the tribunal's duty to spell out with great difficulty a ratio decidendi in order to be bound by it.

(2) If a decision of the House of Lords rests upon the special & peculiar circumstances of the case, the case does not bind the House, or any etc., by a general principle: but if the decision rests upon a general doctrine, it binds all etc. & the House, & that doctrine is part of the law of the land until the legislature be moved to interfere.—*GREAT WESTERN RY. 506a. ————]—It is the duty of a judge to ascertain the construction of the instrument before him, & not to refer to the construction put by another judge upon an instrument, perhaps similar, but not the same. The only result of referring to authorities for that purpose is confusion & error, in this way, that if you look at a similar instrument, & say that a certain construction was put upon it, & that it differs only to such a slight degree from the document before you, that you do not think the difference sufficient to alter the construction, you miss the real point of the case, which is to ascertain the meaning of the instrument before you. It may be quite true that in your opinion the difference between the two instruments is not sufficient to alter the construction, but at the same time the judge who decided on that other instrument may have thought that that very difference would be sufficient to alter the interpretation of that instrument. You have, in fact, no guide whatever; & the result, especially in some cases of wills, has been remarkable. There is, first, document A., & a judge formed an opinion as to its construction. Then came document B., & some other judge has said that it differs very little from the document A., not sufficiently to alter the construction, therefore, he construes it in the same way. Then comes document C., & the judge there compares it with document B., & says it differs very little, & therefore, he shall construe it in the same way; & so the construction has gone on until we find a document which is in totally different terms from the first, & which no human being would think of construing in the same manner, but which has by this process come to be construed in this manner (JESSEL, M.R.).

304a. ————Whether ground for new trial.—In an action for libel pltf. set out in his statement of claim the alleged libel, & in a separate paragraph alleged an innuendo which practically repeated, but somewhat extended, the statements in the alleged libel. Defts. did not plead justification or fair comment, but paid 20s. into ct. in respect of the alleged libel as sufficient damages; they made no payment into ct. in respect of the innuendo; & they gave notice under R. S. C. Ord. 36, r. 37, of their intention to give in evidence certain matters in mitigation of damages. At the trial pltf. gave evidence that save for one lapse he was a man of unblemished reputation. Thereupon he was cross-examined as to specific incidents not mentioned in the libel or in the particulars served under R. S. C. Ord. 36, r. 37, it being suggested that he was a man of bad reputation. This line of cross-examination was objected to, but was allowed. Before the conclusion of the cross-examination the jury intervened with an intimation that they desired to find for the defts., which they then did without any summing up. On appeal :—Held : (1) the cross-examination was admissible as cross-examination to credit, but if the incidents were denied by pltf. no further evidence could be called to rebut pltf.'s denials, & the jury should have been told that while they were not bound to accept pltf.'s denials, those denials, though unaccepted, afforded no evidence that the incidents had taken place; (2) the cross-examination was not admissible to mitigate damages, & the jury ought to have been directed to this effect; (3) the jury should have been told that their intervention was premature, & they must hear the pltf.'s case to the end & be directed as to the issues they had to try; & (4) the trial having been in those respects unsatisfactory, there must be a new trial.

(5) Communications from the jury to the judge should be shown to the parties' counsel (per SCRUTTON, L. J.).

While the better practice is for communications from the jury to be shown to parties' counsel, the question whether they should be shown or not is one for the discretion of the judge (*per SANKEY, L. q ii. — — — — —.]—Issue left to jury immaterial.—In an action against a police officer for assault & battery, malicious prosecution & malicious arrest, the trial judge dispensed with the jury in the trial of the claim for assault & battery. O. 1914, c. 56, s. 62, to decide all questions both of law & fact as to the existence of reasonable & probable cause; & he said that the jury would be called upon to try only the issues as to malice & damages. A jury was then called & sworn & the trial proceeded. The evidence being closed, & the jury having retired, the trial judge gave judgment, dismissing the claim for assault, & finding that there was reasonable & probable cause for the prosecution. He also held, on the facts, as a matter of law, that there was no foundation for the claim for malicious arrest. He, therefore, dismissed the whole action & discharged the jury:—Held: having regard to Jud. Act, R. S. LAND IMPROVEMENT.

Part III.—Under Settled Land Act, 1925.

72a. ———.]—Re SHERBORNE'S (LORD) SETTLED ESTATE, No. 79a, post.

79a. Authorised improvements — Improvements executed before Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18).—(1) A tenant for life of certain settled estates had expended on the settled property large sums of money for improvements, repairs & other works. Among the items of expenditure so incurred were certain electric light installations to the mansion house & the erection of batteries. These particular works had been carried out before the coming into force of above Act, & were therefore not "authorised improvements" under Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890, for which the ct. could have granted repayment to the tenant for life out of capital, although under the new Act of 1925 they would be "authorised improvements." On an application by the tenant for life to be recouped out of capital these sums so expended by him:—Held: notwithstanding the fact that these works were executed prior to above Act, there was, under the new Act, jurisdiction in the ct., if it thought fit, to order repayment of these sums to the tenant for life out of capital moneys; & consequently as these particular items were "authorised improvments" under above Act, they could be repayable out of capital, notwithstanding the fact that they were incurred on works executed before Jan. 1. 1926. Having regard, however, to the fact that certain of the works had been carried out several years previously, there would have to be a rebate to allow for a diminished value.

By arrangement the engrossments of the lease & counterpart were then prepared by the lessee's solrs., who subsequently wrote to the lessor's solr. purporting to enclose the engrossment of the lease for his signature, & saying they had written to the lessee & expected to exchange parts shortly. Deft. insured the factory against fire, & on the occurrence of a fire which almost completely destroyed it, he received compensation from the insurance co. Plffs. then gave notice of the exercise of their option of purchase & paid a deposit, but deft. declined to reinstate the walls & roof, & alleged that in exercising the option plffs. had to take the property as it was. 1526a. — Underlessee of sub-term in mortgaged premises—Covenant for further assurance in mortgage—Underlessee entitled to conveyance of legal estate—Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), Sched. I., Part II., paras. 3, 6 (d).—A. in 1926 had become entitled to a sub-term in certain mortgaged leasehold premises acquired by purchase by a predecessor in title from a mtgee. The original mtge. was made in 1848, & contained a covenant by the then mtgor. with the then mtgee. his exors. administrators & assigns (inter alia) for further assurance of the nominal reversion in the three outstanding days in the head lease, thereby mortgaged, if required. In the head lease were certain covenants by the lessee for repair of the premises. The freehold of the demised property ultimately became absolutely vested in pltf. for an estate in fee simple. A. had gone into possession of the mtged. premises, but relinquished such possession before the trial of the action. Pltf. alleged that there had been a breach of the covenant to repair contained in the head lease & claimed (inter alia) damages against A. It appeared that the nominal reversion in the head lease had never been got in by any one, & A. denied that, as there was no privity of estate between him & pltf., he could be held liable under the repairing covenant contained in reason of the covenant for further assurance contained in the mtge., was a person "entitled to require a legal estate to be conveyed to or otherwise vested in him" under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), Sched. I., Part II., para. 3, such legal estate, namely, the nominal reversion, vested in him by Sched. II., Part II., para. 6 (d), & rendered him liable on the repairing covenants contained in the head lease:—Held: on the facts of the case, A. was liable by reason of the operation of Sched. I., Part II., paras. 3 & 6 (d), as a person entitled to require a legal estate to be conveyed to or otherwise vested in him; & further, that he had not availed himself of the provisions of the Sched. to the Law of Property (Amendment) Act, 1926 (c. 11), enabling persons to disclaim the vesting of any legal estate affected by onerous covenants.—*PEACHY v. sk. Premises no longer available for purposes contemplated.] A fishery co. were the tenants of salmon fishings under a lease for nineteen fishing seasons. During the currency of the lease, the President of the An Council, acting under statutory powers, made bye-laws converting the greater part of the area occupied by the fishings into a danger zone for the purposes of aerial gunnery & bombing practice. The bye-laws provided that practice would take place within the zone four days a week throughout the year, & that, during practice, no person might enter the zone, or bring thereon any vehicle, animal, vessel, aircraft or thing, & penalties were imposed for contraventions of the bye-laws. The effect of a due observance of these bye-laws would be to render the fishings incapable of possession for the purposes of the lease, & although bombing & firing practice had taken place only on a portion of the days reserved, the fishery co. had not attempted, since the bye-laws were promulgated, to exercise their right of fishing. In an action by the fishery co. against their landlord for declarator that they were entitled to abandon the lease:—Held: as the effect of the bye-laws was to cause total eviction from the fishings, the landlord could no longer maintain the pursuers in possession of the subjects of the lease, as he was bound to do, & accordingly, pursuers were entitled to abandon the lease.—*TAY SALMON CO. v. Court under a lease which contained a reservation "excepting & reserving unto the lessors & the person or persons for the time being occupying the other parts of the building the passage of gas water & other pipes & electric wires through the demised premises & the free running of water & soil in & through the pipes connected with the demised premises." In May, 1924, ptff. took a lease of the second floor of I. Court from the firm, subject to a similar reservation. In exercise of the right reserved to the lessors & persons occupying other parts of the premises ptff. conducted pipes from her premises through deft. co.'s part of the premises. Deft. co., after the operations had proceeded for some time, alleged that great inconvenience would be caused to them, & cut the pipes:—Held: the reservation gave no right to the lessors or ptff. to introduce any new pipes or wires into the premises.—TAYLOR v. Proposed transfer of license to other premises.—Leaving demised premises unlicensed.—Pltfs. were the owners of certain premises to which a seven-day license was attached, & deft. was their lessee & the holder of the license. The lease contained a covenant by the lessee not to do, or suffer to be done, on the premises any act whereby the license might be forfeited or the renewal thereof withheld, & also a covenant that he would insure the license against forfeiture in the joint names of the lessors & the lessee in the sum of £500. The lessee further covenanted to deliver up the premises on the expiration of the lease in all respects in such condition as should be consistent with the due performance & observance of the said covenants. Deft., who was also the owner of other premises, situate in the same licensing area, & to which a six-day license was attached, served notice to have the seven-day license transferred to the premises to which the six-day license was attached:—Held: as the effect of the transfer would be that pltfs.' premises, to which the seven-day license was attached, would, for the purposes of Licensing (Ir.) Act, 1902, be statutorily deemed never to have been licensed, so that when the lease expired pltfs. would get back premises to which no license was attached, they were entitled, in view of the covenants in the lease, to an injunction to restrain deft. from exercising the right of transfer conferred on him by Intoxicating Liquor Act, 1927, s. 11 (1).—HEATHCOTE v. 2792a. ———.]—By a lease dated July 21, 1926, pltf. demised to deft. certain premises at an annual rent of £1,100. The premises were demised to deft. in consideration of the sum of £1,000, of which the sum of £200 was paid on the execution of the lease, & the remainder was to be paid by instalments. The lease provided that, in the event of the term thereby granted being determined by re-entry, all the premium remaining unpaid at the date of such re-entry should become immediately payable. The lease gave the lessee an option to purchase the premises at any time during the first seven years of the term, at the price of £13,000, less the whole or such part of the premium of £1,000 as should have been paid. Before granting the lease to deft., pltf. had mortgaged the demised premises, & on Oct. 12, 1926, the mtgee., acting under a power contained in the mtge., sold the premises to deft. for £8,350. The conveyance of Oct. 12, 1926, to deft. was silent with regard to the premium reserved by the lease of July 21, 1926. Pltf. claimed to recover from deft. £800, being the balance of the premium of £1,000 reserved by the lease. Deft. contended that on the making of the conveyance of Oct. 12, 1926, all his obligations under the lease were finally determined. He also relied on Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 141:—Held: deft.'s liability to pay the premium was not discharged by his purchase of the demised premises on Oct. 12, 1926. The premium was to be paid for the granting of the lease & had to be paid if the lease was granted irrespectively of what happened to the lease afterwards & of the fact that the lessee purchased the reversion. The reservation of the premium was not a grant out of the subject-matter, but was a separate personal covenant to pay the premium because the lease was being granted. Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 141, did not apply. Pltf. was therefore entitled to recover.—HILL v. BOOTH (1929), 46 T. L. R. 50; 73 Sol. Jo. 782, C. A.

2913a. ——— Part of premises sublet.]—In 1906 there was granted to K., as lessee a dwelling-house & premises for a term of ninety-nine years at a ground rent of £8 a year, & the lessee covenanted with the lessors that he would not, without the lessors' previous licence in writing, use the demised house, or any part thereof, "for any purpose whatsoever other than for the purpose of a private dwelling-house, wherein no business of any kind is carried on." There was a further covenant by the lessee that he would not do or suffer to be done in or on the demised premises anything which might, in the judgment of the lessors, be or grow to the injury or annoyance of the lessors or their tenants, or the occupiers of adjoining premises. In 1914 the lessee, without the knowledge of or licence from the lessors, sublet three rooms of the first floor of the demised house to a subtenant, whose tenancy expired in June, 1926. On July 19 the lessee, without any licence from the lessors, sublet the same three rooms to P. as a subtenant at a rent of £1 a week. In an action by the lessors against K. & P., & the mtgees. of K., claiming possession of the house as against all defts., on the ground that the lease had been forfeited by reason of the breaches of the two covenants:—Held: (1) there had been a forfeiture of the lease by breaches of both the restrictive covenants, & the words in the first covenant, "wherein no business of any kind is carried on," must be construed as adding to the stringency of the covenant that the house should be used as a private dwelling-house; (2) Rent Restriction Acts afforded no defence to the action, as K. was in actual possession of the whole of the dwelling-house in the interval between the two tenancies, & 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), came into operation, & the premises had become decontrolled.—*BARTON v. Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920 (c. 17), & the rent of which had been increased under the latter Act, sought to recover from his landlords, deft. corp., his medical expenses & damages for loss of work incurred by reason of an accident suffered by him when, in opening one of the windows of the house, as soon as he had unlatched the top sash it fell owing to the breaking of the sash cord & severely crushed his hands. He based his claim on the alleged failure of the landlords to perform their statutory obligations under Housing Act, 1925, to keep the house “in all respects reasonably fit for human habitation” &, alternatively, under Increase of Rent & Mtge. Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, to keep the house in “good & tenantable repair”:—Held: (1) whatever was the effect of the above mentioned Acts upon a landlord’s responsibility for the condition or state of repair of houses coming within the scope of those Acts, upon which, as applied to the facts, the ct. was not unanimous, it was a condition precedent to the liability of the landlord that notice of latent, as well as of patent, defects should be given to him by the tenant, whether or not the landlord had a right of access to inspect the state of repair of the house, & the absence of such notice was fatal to pltf.’s claim. sr. Agreement altering incidence of tax.—What amounts to.] A landlord & a tenant entered into a preliminary agreement for a lease of certain premises for £90 per week, the tenant to pay all taxes, including land taxes. Prior to the execution of the lease the lessor discovered that the provision that the tenant was to pay land tax was contrary to the terms of Federal & State Land Tax Acts. The landlord then required that the lease should provide for a rent of £100 per week, & promised that he would make a voluntary annual allowance to the lessee of an amount equal to the difference between the amount of the Federal & State land tax paid by the lessor in respect of the premises & £520, the latter sum being the annual amount of £10 per week. The lease was then executed, stipulating for a rent of £100 per week:—Held: the above facts did not disclose a "contract, agreement or arrangement . . . altering the incidence" of any land tax within Land Tax Act Assessment Act, 1910 1926, s. 63, or Land Tax Act, 1915, s. 68.—Re LUCKE, LTD., [1928] V. 4457a. Right to deduct from rent—Under landlord's covenant to refund excess over specified sum.]—The lease of a flat beginning at midsummer at a rent of £400 a year, payable in advance at the rate of £100 on each quarter day, contained a covenant by the lessors that, in case the total sum paid by the tenant in any one year of the term in respect of rates & taxes should exceed £125, the lessors would, on production of the relative receipts, refund to the tenant the difference between the total sum paid by him & £125. If this difference were not refunded by the lessors within fourteen days of demand the tenant was to be at liberty to deduct such difference from the next instalment of rent. The lease contained a covenant by the tenant that he would duly & punctually pay & discharge all rates, taxes, duties, charges, assessments, & outgoings payable in respect of the demised premises. The tenant in a year of the tenancy between midsummer & midsummer paid three half-years' rates, amounting in all to over £125, & having demanded the refund of the excess from the landlords, & having failed to get payment of the same within fourteen days of the demand, deducted it from his next instalment of rent :—Held : under the landlords' covenant to refund, the tenant was entitled to make the deduction.—*OWERBY v. 4739a. — Dilapidations—Neglect to repair.—Testator devised a dwelling-house to his wife for her life, she “keeping same in good repair & condition, reasonable wear & tear excepted,” & after her death he directed that same should fall into his residuary estate, which was to be divided among his children in equal shares. Testator’s widow occupied the premises until her death, a period of forty-two years. She did nothing actively to injure the premises, but did nothing substantially to counteract the natural process of decay. Pltfs., the trustees of the will, alleged that she had neglected to keep the premises in good repair & condition in conformity with the terms of the will, & claimed from her exors. the cost of the necessary repairs:—Held: testator’s widow, having accepted & occupied the premises, was bound by the terms of the devise; the words of the exception were not to be treated as mere surplusage, & a reasonable meaning must be given to them, but having regard to the length of time during which no substantial repairs had been done to the premises, & to the extent of the damage thereby caused, the widow, as tenant for life, was not protected by the words of the exception, & her exors. were liable for the damage arising from the natural process of decay.—*HASKELL v. 4760a. To keep in good & proper order & condition—Ornamental waters—Removal of mud.—Among the covenants in a lease was one by which deft. covenanted at all times during the term to maintain, keep, & leave “all pleasure grounds,” lawns, walks, borders, & shrubberies in good & proper order & condition. Included in the pleasure grounds were ornamental waters consisting of two ponds & three lakes, which afforded boating & trout fishing. Pltf. complained of various breaches of the above covenant, particularly in respect of the accumulation of mud in the lodge lake & in a portion of the upper boat lake, thereby causing deterioration in the trout fishing, & required the lakes to be cleared of mud & weeds. Def. had regularly cut the weeds in the lakes & kept in order the sluices & weirs, but repudiated liability to clean out any of the mud:—Held: in order to comply with the covenant which was absolutely unqualified in terms, def. was liable to remove so much of the mud in the lodge lake, & also in a specified portion of the upper boat lake, as would leave a sheet of water of not less than 2 feet 6 inches in depth throughout.—HORLICK v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330, had never been applied to affect the liability of an owner who was out of possession at the time when the injury took place; though defts. did not erect the wall, they took it over when they bought the property as the boundary & retaining wall for their property, & they were only using that property in the ordinary ways in which property is used, so that they were outside the authority of that case; (2) there was no reason to suppose that when they let the property to their tenant it was in a ruinous condition, or that in the exercise of a reasonable diligence they should have ascertained that it was in a ruinous condition; & pltfs. failed to bring their case within the principle

The rent being in arrear the administration purported to give the notice required by clause 2 of the lease & thereafter to cancel the lease:—Held: a written notice to the effect that the rent was in arrear & calling upon the lessee to pay the same within 14 days from date was a sufficient compliance with the clause. —WINTER v. 6636a. Substitution of licence or tenancy at will under purchase agreement—Rescission of agreement.—By an agreement in writing dated Aug. 28, 1926, deft., the weekly tenant of a house to which Rent Restriction Acts applied, agreed to buy it from plff., the landlord, for £900. The agreement provided that deft. acknowledged owing plff. £63 11s. arrears of rent, & that plff. would accept £50 in settlement; that, until certain mtgs. had been transferred from plff. to deft., plff. should remain in absolute ownership of the premises; & that, until completion of the conveyance, deft., who was to remain in possession, should pay to plff. interest on the £950 at the rate of 6 per cent. with interest on interest dating from Sept. 1, 1926. Deft. also agreed to pay certain deposits, plff., on failure of such payments, to be entitled to rescind the agreement & enter into possession of the house. Deft. agreed to maintain the house in a good state of repair & to pay rates, taxes, & insurance. On Feb. 27, 1927, plff. rescinded the agreement under the powers reserved in it, but deft. refused to give him possession of the house:—Held: (1) the effect of the agreement, as indicating the intention of the parties, was to determine the weekly tenancy, & to substitute for it either a licence or a tenancy at will, which, in its turn, was revoked or determined by the rescission of the purchase agreement, & deft. had no contractual right to resist the claim for possession; (2) deft. was not protected by Rent Restriction Acts, & on Aug. 28, 1926, deft. remained in possession of the house by virtue of the contract of purchase, & not as a statutory tenant, & under that contract she was either a licensee or a tenant at will, & after its rescission, if she had been a licensee, she was not a tenant who had held over under the Acts, & if she had been a tenant at will, her tenancy had been at no rent, & by increase of Rent & Mtgs. Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920 (c. 17), s. 12 (7), it must be ignored, with the result that the house was to be treated as untenanted & plff. had an unrestricted right to recover possession of it; (3) the rescission of the purchase agreement did not deprive plff. of his right to the arrears of rent which had accrued due to him before the agreement

6674a. —.]—In 1910, deft., a county police constable, became quarterly tenant of a house. In 1912 the county police authority, which had till then made a grant in aid of the rent of houses occupied by police constables, decided that for the future the chief constable should be the tenant of those houses, that the constables should occupy them as servants, that the chief constable should pay all rent, rates & taxes, & that a deduction should be made in respect thereof from the men's pay. Deft. knew of, & made no demur to, this arrangement, but no express notice to determine his tenancy was given. From 1912 onwards the demands for rent were sent to deft., addressed to the county authority. These deft. took to the police office, received the full amount due, & paid it at the estate office of the landlord, being given a receipt acknowledging payment by the county authority, which receipt he sent to the county treasurer. No demands for rates & taxes were made to deft. This course of business continued for fourteen years, deft. continuing to occupy the house & his name remaining on the estate books as tenant. There was no written surrender or assignment of the tenancy:—Held: (1) there was evidence from which the inferences of fact could be drawn that in 1912 deft. agreed with the landlord that he would forthwith surrender his tenancy, that the landlord agreed with deft. to accept the surrender & accept the chief constable as his tenant, & that the deft. would in future occupy the house as a servant of the chief constable & not as a tenant, & on those facts there had been a surrender of the tenancy by operation of law; (2) deft. was in the circumstances estopped from denying that he had surrendered or assigned the tenancy.—*METCALFE v. On the expiry of the farm tenancy at Martinmas 1923, the landlord let to the subtenant the house, garden, & offices, with the steading & farmyard, at a rent of £35. The ratable value of the garden, offices, steading, & farmyard was more than one-quarter of that of the house :—Held : as the value of the land & other premises let with the house since Martinmas 1923 exceeded one-quarter of that of the house, 1920 Act did not apply to the subjects, the addition of the farmyard & steading having altered the identity of the house, & thus elided sect. 12 (6) of the Act. — *HALEDALE v. 7145a. What amounts to increase.]—By a local Act, the rates in S. were consolidated & became a comprehensive borough rate. In May 1927, by virtue of the Act, which provided that in certain cases owners might be rated instead of occupiers, the city council passed a resolution transferring the liability for the rate as regards premises of which the ratable value did not exceed £10. The resolution took effect on Oct. 5, 1927. The rate, which the owners became liable to pay, was calculated on the basis of nine-tenths of the amount in the pound of the full consolidated rate previously payable by the occupier. The landlords of certain premises of a ratable value not exceeding £10 claimed that they were entitled to increase the rent of one of their tenants, under 1920 Act, by the amount of the full consolidated rate previously payable by the tenant:—Held: under sect. 2 (1) (b), the landlords were entitled to increase the rent, as there had been an increase in the amount of the rates for the time being payable by the landlords over the corresponding amount paid by them in the period specified by the sect.; but the amount of the permitted increase was an amount equivalent to nine-tenths of the full consolidated rate, & not the full amount of that rate.—HODGKINSON v. HEWITT (1928), 139 L. T. 101; 11 T. L. R. 691; 93 J. P. 23; 27 L. G. R. 210, D. C.

remained in occupation & entered into legal possession of the house under increase of rent, etc. (Restrictions) Act, 1920, s. 12 (1) (g). Deft. married again in Mar. 1928, & her second husband & his children came to reside in the house occupied by her. The landlord instituted ejectment proceedings against deft., who claimed the protection of Increase of Rent (Restrictions) Acts. Increase of Rent & Mtge. Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, s. 12 (1) (g), provides that "the expression tenant includes the widow of a tenant dying intestate who was residing with him at the time of his death."—Held: the widow acquired a vested interest as tenant, & there was nothing in Increase of Rent & Mtge. 7108 1. "Separate"—Whether physically separate—Or partitioned off.]—Pltf., the owner of a house consisting of four floors & a basement, erected in each of the back rooms on the first & second floors a partition, which converted each large back room into two rooms. He put electric fittings in each floor, & did other work in connection with the gas & water supply, & lot portion of the house to deft., describing it in the agreement as "consisting of a flat of three rooms & front basement on parlour floor." It had not a separate bath or separate sanitary accommodation, & there was no physical separation of it, as a residence, from the rest of the house.—Held: (1) the dwelling-house had not been "bona fide reconstructed by way of conversion into two or more separate & self-contained flats" within Rent & Mtge. Restrictions Act, 1923 (No. 19 of 1923).

The rent being in arrear, pltf. served notice to quit on deft., & instituted ejectment proceedings.—Held: (2) the letting was a new letting of portion of altered premises, so as to entitle pltf. to charge a rent without regard to the standard rent of the whole house; (3) deft.'s claim for apportionment of the rent must be dismissed; (4) pltf. was entitled to an order for possession, the ct. granting a stay for a limited period, the order for possession not to issue if the rent was paid within that period.—*BOYLE v. sa. Rates previously paid by landlord Right to throw upon tenant.] Apart from any question of special agreement, Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1923, prevents a landlord of premises to which the Act applies, so long as he is not entitled to obtain possession, from throwing upon the tenant the burden of rates, which he, the landlord, habitually pays or allows, though his contract to pay the rates may be void in law.—*MOORE v. PART XXVII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3.—C. (a).

sl. Service of notice Proof.]—Held: (1) as 1920 Act required no particular formalities or solemnities to be observed in connection with the service of notices, service could be proved by evidence in the ordinary way; (2) upon the facts it must be inferred that notice had been received by the tenant.—GUTHRIE v. STEWART, [1926] S. C. 743.—SCOT.

sm. Agreement for increased rent.] Deft. resisted a claim on the ground that, as no notice to quit had been served, not any valid notice of increase of rent, the increase was irrecoverable under Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Acts of 1920 & 1923, pltf. contending that the latter Act authorised an agreement for an increased rent, not exceeding the limits prescribed by the Act, although a notice to quit & a valid notice of increase of rent had not been served. The circuit judge gave a decree for the amount claimed.—Held: the decision must be affirmed.—LANGLEY v. POWER, [1928] 1 R. 351.—IR.

PART XXVII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3.—C. (b).

sn. Notice increasing rent during currency of lease.] A notice to be a valid notice must be correct in substance as well as in form.

sq. Immaterial errors Effect of.]—In an action for recovery of arrears of rent, the tenant maintained that a previous notice of intention to increase rent was invalid, in respect that (1) the notified increase of rates was inaccurate, & (2) a charge for stam gas had wrongly been included in the increased rates.—Held: as the tenant had suffered no prejudice, & as the notice did not contain any statement which was false or misleading in any material respect, & was as accurate as it could be in the circumstances at the time when it was given, the notice was not invalid.—CLYDEBANK INVESTMENT CO., LTD. v. MARSHALL, [1927] S. C. 860.—SCOT.

PART XXVII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3.—C. (c).

sr. Is to amount of rent.]—A notice of intention to increase rent, which was in writing & in the statutory form, was objected to by the tenant as incompetent, on the ground that the landlord had stated, as the "rent payable," not the standard rent, but a higher amount which he was receiving at the date of the notice, & had further failed to set forth how the existing excess over standard rent had become due.—Held: as the tenant had already for some time been paying without objection rent at the figure stated in the notice, the onus was upon him to establish that the amount in excess of standard rent was not legally exigible, & as he had failed to do so, his objection fell to be repelled.—McKELLAR v. McMASTER, [1926] S. C. 754.—SCOT.

7107 i. Amendment Mode of.]—A notice of intention to increase rent, which was in writing & in the statutory form, showed under the appropriate headings how the proposed increase was made up. As the item of occupier's rates was subsequently found to have been overestimated, the original notice was amended by a corrective notice, sent by the landlord's factors & received by the tenant before any increased rent had become due.—Held: amendment of a defective notice was not restricted to the method prescribed by 1923 Act, s. 6, the primary purpose of which was to validate defective notices which had been acted on, & it was competent to amend the notice by the method adopted.—

Decision of county court judge—Right of appeal to High Court.—Landlords served on one of their tenants a notice of increase of rent, purporting to increase his rent on account of their liability for repairs & other grounds. The tenant ultimately disputed the increase on the ground of repairs only. The landlords applied to the county ct. under 1920 Act, s. 2 (6), to determine the question whether the notice of increase was valid, whether they were responsible for the whole of the repairs, & if not for what proportion they were responsible:—Held: although questions of law were involved in the matters submitted, the terms of the Act made the decision of the county ct. judge final, & no appeal lay from it.—*ELVINGTON TENANTS, LTD. v. Necessity for apportionment—Onus of proof.—The tenant of part of a dwelling-house to which the Rent Restriction Acts applied proved, on an application by him for an apportionment of the rent of the whole house to determine the standard rent of the rooms occupied by him, that the whole house was let on Aug. 3, 1914:—Held: he had established a prima facie case of necessity for an apportionment, & the onus was then cast on the landlord to show that the rooms occupied by the tenant were let as a separate dwelling-house on Aug. 3, 1914, & so had a standard rent of their own, an apportionment of the rent of the whole house being thus rendered unnecessary.—*PLATMAN v. 7318b. ———.]—On an application for possession of a cottage made before justices under Small Tenements Recovery Act, 1838 (c. 74), it was proved that M. worked for C. at certain gas works from Apr. 1920, till Jan. 1921. Adjoining the gas works was a cottage, the property of C., which was let to M. at the commencement & in consequence of his employment. In Jan. 1921, on the termination of his employment, M. received notice to quit the cottage, & was asked to pay a certain sum for rent. He applied to the county ct. & the rent was settled by the county ct. judge at 5s. per week. M. paid this rent up to Sept. 8, 1928. On June 1, 1928, C. having sold the gas works, including the cottage, to a limited liability co., conveyed the same to the co. On Sept. 22, 1928, the co. served a notice to quit on M., who subsequently tendered the rent due from Sept. 8 to 22, which was refused. On Oct. 13, 1928, the statutory notice under the Act of 1838 was served by the co. on M. The cottage was reasonably required by the co. as a residence for a man engaged in their whole-time employment at the gas works. The existence of alternative accommodation was not proved by the landlord. The justices found that no new tenancy had been created & that there was no obligation on the co. to prove alternative accommodation. Accordingly they ordered that a warrant of ejectment should issue: Held: at the time ejectment was sought the cottage was not let to applt. in consequence of his employment, the tenancy then being held under an entirely new contract, & that there were no materials on which the justices could find that no new tenancy had been created. Accordingly, as resp. had not proved the existence of alternative accommodation, the order that a warrant of ejectment should issue must be quashed.—MURTON v. ALDIS (1929), 141 L. T. 168; 93 J. 7352d. — — — — —.]—(1) The expression "landlord" in 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), is not to be construed in the strict sense as requiring a tenant & a contract of tenancy, but it must be used either in the looser sense of "owner," or in the still looser sense of a person who at a later stage is going to appear as a landlord contesting with a tenant the terms of his tenancy. Neither in 1920 Act, nor in 1923 Act, is the word "landlord" used in its technical sense of a person between whom & the tenant a contractual relationship of landlord & tenant exists.

Where a person who is a "landlord" within 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), can prove either that he was in possession of the whole of the dwelling-house at the date of the passing of 1923 Act, or at any time since that date, 1920 Act ceases to apply to that dwelling-house & to every part of it. The whole house & every part of it is decontrolled, & a subsequent letting of the dwelling-house, or of any part of it, cannot revive control.

(2) The expression "the tenant" in 1923 Act, s. 2 (2), refers to the sitting tenant, i.e. the person who is the tenant at the time when the lease referred to in the sub-sect. is granted.

(3) Where a lessee at a rent less than two-thirds of the ratable value is in actual possession of the dwelling-house after July 31, 1923, the dwelling-house is thereby decontrolled, because, under 1920 Act, s. 12, the lessee must be treated as the landlord, & a subsequent sub-letting of certain rooms forming part of that dwelling-house does not revive control.—*LOYD v. - 167a. Amateur sportsman—Imputation of professionalism.]—Pltf., an amateur golf champion, whose name was Tolley, claimed damages from defts., Fry & Sons, who were chocolate manufacturers, in respect of an alleged libel published by defts. & consisting of a caricature of pltf. playing a golf stroke while a caddie looked on. Below the picture appeared the following limerick:—
 The caddie to Tolley said: "Oh, Sir,
 Good Shot, Sir, that ball see it go, Sir.
 My word, how it flies.
 Like a cartet of Fry's;
 They're handy, they're good & priced low,
 Sir."
 Pltf. alleged that this advertisement meant
- that he had for gain agreed or permitted his portrait to be exhibited for the purpose of advertising defts.' chocolate, & had prostituted his reputation as an amateur golfer for advertising purposes. The jury returned a verdict for the pltf. assessing the damages at £1,000:—Held: as there was no evidence entitling the jury to attach a special defamatory meaning to words otherwise innocent the verdict must be set aside & judgment entered for defts.—*TOLLEY v. Pltf. was, & was known among her acquaintances as, the lawful wife of C.; but defts. did not know this:—Held: the publication was capable of conveying a meaning defamatory of pltf. & the jury having found that it conveyed to reasonably minded people an aspersion on her moral character, that she was entitled to damages.

It is impossible for the person publishing a statement which, to those who know certain facts, is capable of a defamatory meaning in regard to A., to defend himself by saying: "I never heard of A. & did not mean to injure him." If he publishes words reasonably capable of being read as relating directly or indirectly to A. & to those who know the facts about A., capable of a defamatory meaning, he must take the consequences of the defamatory inferences reasonably drawn from his words (SCRUTTON, L. Defts., in their plea of justification, did not justify the allegation of murder nor the allegation that pltf. was a murderer. But they said: "It & in so far as the words complained of meant or were understood to mean or were capable of meaning that pltf. took no steps to bring to justice persons guilty of the death of L. or of the attack on the British troops at Queenstown, or that pltf. was unfit to hold any office of trust or responsibility, or of any kind, or that pltf. was a person with whom no honest or responsible man ought to have anything to do, such words were & are true in substance & in fact." Pltf. having obtained an order for particulars of the justification, defts. delivered particulars of seventy-two murders committed in Ireland over a period of five years with an allegation that pltf. had assisted to organise them or had employed people to organise them: Held: notwithstanding that defts., in their plea of justification had avoided justifying the allegations of murder, the particulars delivered by defts. were admissible.—MACGRATH v. ordinary intelligence & moral principles, or is fairly made in the legitimate defence of a person's own interests. It is not sufficient that the person making the statement believes, honestly & without a bad ground, that the duty or interest exists. - 2041a. ———.]—In an action for libel plff. set out in his statement of claim the alleged libel, & in a separate paragraph alleged an innuendo which practically repeated, but somewhat extended, the statements in the alleged libel. Defts. did not plead justification or fair comment, but paid 20s. into ct. in respect of the alleged libel as sufficient damages; they made no payment into ct. in respect of the innuendo; & they gave notice under R. S. C. Ord. 36, r. 37, of their intention to give in evidence certain matters in mitigation of damages. At the trial plff. gave evidence that save for one lapse he was a man of unblemished reputation. Thereupon he was cross-examined as to specific incidents not mentioned in the libel or in the particulars served under R. S. C. Ord. 36, r. 37, it being suggested that he was a man of bad reputation. This line of cross-examination was objected to, but was allowed. Before the conclusion of the cross-examination the jury intervened with an intimation that they desired to find for the defts., which they then did without any summing up. On appeal:—Held: (1) the cross-examination was admissible as cross-examination to credit, but that if the incidents were denied by plff. no further evidence could be called to rebut plff.'s denials, & that the jury should have been told that while they were not bound to accept plff.'s denials, those denials, though unaccepted, afforded no evidence that the incidents had taken place; (2) the cross-examination was not admissible to mitigate damages, & the jury ought to have been directed to this effect.—*HOBBS v. The smallness of the damages is only one element for consideration. The judge must exercise a discretion independent of any view expressed by the jury on the question of costs.—*MARTIN v. sw. Conduct of both parties.]—Plff. in opening his case to the jury, stated that he would be satisfied with an undertaking by deft. to publish an apology in their newspaper, & further stated that the defamatory article complained of by him was false from beginning to end. Deft. by his counsel, thereupon offered to give such an undertaking as asked for by plff. This offer plff. refused to accept. During the course of the trial, cross-examination was directed to show the truth of the article complained of, though the character of plff. was not attacked in the article. Plff. was awarded a verdict & damages were assessed at one farthing: Held: the jury may take into consideration the conduct of both parties, even up to the moment when it returns its verdict.—LEMAIRE v. SMITH'S NEWSPAPERS, LTD. (1927), 28 S. R. N. S. W. 161.—AUS.

Up to May 1, 1925, the cabs, with the consent of pltfs., had been garaged at defts.' garage, & B. owed defts. the balance of a general account for garage rent, goods supplied, & washing, cleaning, & repairing the cabs. Defts. had never been aware of the terms of the agreements between B. & pltfs. On May 1, 1925, pltfs. terminated the agreements, as B. was in arrear with his payments, but defts. refused to hand them the cabs, asserting that they had a lien for repairs. In an action for the delivery up of the cabs & damages for their detention:—Held: the lien might attach notwithstanding the provision that B. should not have authority to create a lien, & although defts. did not have continuous possession of the cabs, yet since, in letting B. take them out to ply for hire, they parted with possession without any intention to abandon the right of lien, the action failed. —ALBEMARLE SUPPLY CO., LTD. v. 322a i. Order given by hire-purchaser—No authority to create lien.—Held: the vendor was entitled to a return of the subject-matter of the agreement without payment of the cost of repairs ordered by the hire-purchaser.—ALLIANCE FINANCE CO. & STANDARD MOTORS, LTD. v. SIMONS GARAGE & GOODCHAP (1925), 36 B. C. R. 117.—CAN.

322a ii. ———.]—Held: the repairers had not acquired a lien, in respect that the hirer's title excluded the right to create a lien. —LAMONBY v. FOULDS, LTD., [1928] S. C. 89.—SCOT.

322a iii. ———.]—Although in a hire-purchase agreement there may be a clause expressly negating any authority to create a lien, it does not prevent a lien arising for repairs done to the subject-matter of the agreement.—MOYES v. MAGNUS MOTORS, LTD., [1927] N. Z. L. R. 906.—N.Z.

322a iv. ———.]—Where an agreement for the conditional sale of a motor car contained the following clause: “We shall not at any time (that is, the buyer) suffer or permit any charge or lien whether possessory or otherwise to exist against said automobile,” it was held that this clause negated the idea that the buyer could authorise the doing of repairs in such a way as to give the repairer a lien.—ALLIANCE FINANCE CO. & STANDARD MOTORS, LTD. v. SIMONS, [1928] 3 W. W. R. 621.—CAN.

322a v. ———.]—An artificer's lien arises only when the work in respect of which the charges arose was done by the order or at the request of the owner or some person authorised by him. Where the owner of a motor car let it to another under a hire-purchase agreement, which provided that repairs to the car should be made by the owner's nominee only, & the hirer caused the car to be repaired by a person who was not the owner's nominee:—Held: the person who repaired the car was not entitled to a lien for his charges as against the owner.—FISHER v. 322a vi. ———.]—Deft sold an auto-truck, taking a lien agreement to secure the balance of the purchase price, which was duly registered. The owner having an accident, brought the truck to pltf., who made extensive repairs, & held the truck for the cost of the repairs. On the truck being taken for trial by an ostensible buyer, after the owner was in default under the lien agreement, it was seized by deft.'s bailiff under the lien agreement. In an action to recover the truck it was held that pltf. was entitled to hold the car subject to his lien:—Held: where the vendor had not taken possession & where there had been no default up to the time of repair, the purchaser had the right & duty to have the property repaired so as to give rise to a common law lien in favour 322a vii. ———— Acquiescence of vendor.—A motor car sold under a conditional sale agreement & lent by the buyer to a friend for his temporary use was damaged while in the latter's possession & left by him with a mechanic to be repaired. The agent of pltf., the vendor's assignee, saw the car in the mechanic's garage while it was yet unrepaid & without questioning the authority of the borrower of the car to order the repairs, which were obviously necessary, suffered it to remain there, merely asking the mechanic what the repairs would cost & how long it would take to make them, & requesting him to send in an account of his charges against the car:—Held: the agent had so conducted himself as to justify the mechanic in concluding that pltf. expected him to make the repairs, & therefore, whatever was the extent of the borrower's authority to order them, pltf. could not be heard to say that the mechanic had no authority to make them; & the mechanic was, therefore, entitled to a lien for the repairs.—*STERLING SECURITIES CORPN., LTD. v. sp. Wharfinger.—It is not necessary that the proprietor of a wharf or quay upon navigable waters, used for the loading & unloading of vessels, should have a warehouse or shed or other convenience for the storage of goods & protection thereof from the weather; & as such wharfinger he is entitled to a lien on goods unloaded at his wharf, for money due to him for wharfage.—HICKFORD (1879), 26 Gr. 512.—CAN.

PART IV. SECT. 3.

f i. ———— Excessive seizure.—A threshing machine, under Threshers' Lien Act, 57 Vict. c. 36, maintain a lien on grain for the threshing of which he has been paid, to recover the price of a subsequent unpaid threshing.—SIMPSON v. OAKES (1902), 14 Man. L. R. 262; 23 C. L. T. 54.—CAN.

f ii. ———— By assignee of lien.—Pltf.'s grain on his farm was seized by defts., purporting to be assignees of C., who had threshed the grain for pltf. & who was, as defts. alleged, entitled to a lien on the grain under Threshers' Lien Ordinance. At the time of the seizure only $38.89 was owing by pltf. to C., & that sum was, by agreement between pltf. & C., not then payable. The alleged assignment to defts. was after this agreement. It was a general assignment of all earnings of a threshing machine used by C. in threshing pltf.'s grain:—Held: defts. had no legal right to make the entry & seizure; & defts.' seizure being for $160, it was, at all events, for an excessive amount, & illegal.—SEMPLE v. SAWYER-MASSEY CO. (1910), 13 W. L. R. 428.—CAN.

f iii. ———— Damages claimed from threshing for delay.—Def't. on Sept. 9 agreed to thresh pltf.'s crop as soon as he finished other threshing. He finished the other threshing in Oct., but, except for a few hours on Dec. 21, he failed to thresh for pltf. until May. Damages were held recoverable by pltf., as being fairly supposed to have been in contemplation of the parties, on several heads. When def't. finished threshing in May he seized under the Threshing Lien Act:—Held: as pltf.'s existing claims, being for damages as above & a claim for teams supplied which should have been supplied by def't., were not in the nature of payment made on account of threshing, but in the nature of counterclaim, the seizure was lawful & pltf. could not claim damages for conversion.—FINLAYSON v. SILZER, [1921] 1 W. W. R. 882; 14 Sask. L. R. 169.—CAN.

f iv. Thresher's employee's lien—On earnings of employer—Nature & extent of.—The "claim" which Thresher Employees Act, R. S. 1920, c. 209, s. 3, gives to a person employed on or about a threshing machine is not a mere right to make a demand but an actual charge on the earnings of the machine, which takes effect as soon as the wages are earned. The claim is restricted, however, to the amount of wages earned with respect to threshing done for the particular person in whose hands are the earnings against which the claim is asserted.—*STREDSMAN v. who were dead, claiming a declaration that certain sums of Consols & bank stock had been wrongfully expended or disposed of by or converted to the use of the exors., & an order that these sums should be replaced. Defts. alleged that these sums had been expended in 1894 in satisfying liabilities of testatrix, & pleaded the appropriate statute of limitation. The exors. had set aside sums to answer the £2,000 legacy in part, & on L.'s death payments of capital were from time to time made to the persons interested in remainder, the last payment being made in June, 1921. If the stock had been paid away in 1894, the statute of limitation afforded a good defence except in regard to the share of the £2,000 legacy, which only fell into possession in 1916:—Held: (1) as the claim was against exors. holding on express trusts, it was not a claim to recover a legacy within Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 8, & the statute of limitation applicable was Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 8, under which the period for which the statute had to run in order to afford a defence was only six years; (2) the payments relied on, being payments in respect of the part of testatrix's estate accounted for, did not constitute an acknowledgment of liability in regard to that part which the exors. were said to have misapplied; (3) the statute afforded a good defence in regard to the share of the £2,000 legacy also.—Re OLIVER, THEOBALD v. OLIVER, [1927] 2 Ch. 323; 96 L. J. Ch. 496; 137 L. T. 788; 71 Sol. Jo. 710.

L. received dividends to clear the interest up to 1908, when they ceased & the shares became of practically no value, L. retaining them, but without foreclosing. In 1916 & thereafter the value of the shares increased enormously, & such large dividends were paid that by 1921 L. had received sufficient to pay off the capital of the loan & all interest in arrear. He died in 1923. Pltfs., who were entitled to the equity of redemption of the mtge., took out a summons claiming redemption, & also repayment of the excess of the amount of dividends received by L. or his exors. over & above the amount due under the mtge.:—Held: (1) equity ought not to deprive a mtgor. of his right to redeem if the debt had been or could be repaid, the security were still available, & the position of the mtgee. had not been altered to his prejudice by the delay; (2) the limit of twelve years applicable by Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), in the case of a mtge. of realty would not, by equitable principles, be extended so as to support a plea of delay & laches & be made applicable to a mtge. of personalty.—*WELD v. By above Act it was provided that it should not be lawful for any local or other public authority to make it a condition of the employment, or continuance in employment, of any person that he should or should not be a member of a trade union; & that any such condition should be void. o i. ——— Right to investigate payments made prior to period under audit.—A clerk of a rural district council received, during the period from Mar. 1, 1920, to Sept. 30, 1925, a bonus in addition to his salary, & this bonus, he contended, had been duly granted to him. During that period the payments made to him were entered in the expenditure book & submitted to various inspectors of the Local Govt. Department, who passed them as correct, & such payments up to Oct. 1924, were audited by auditors of the said Department & certified as correct.

In Nov. 1925, B., an auditor of the said Department, commenced his audit of the council's accounts for the two half-years ending respectively Mar. 31, & Sept. 30, 1925. He informed the clerk that the legality of the payment of the bonus had been questioned in the Ministry of Local Govt. by reason of the clerk's claim for superannuation:—Held: B. had jurisdiction to investigate payments made prior to the period under audit.—WALSH v. LOCAL GOVERNMENT & PUBLIC HEALTH MINISTER, [1929] 1 K. Part VI.—Jurisdiction in Lunacy.

529a. Jurisdiction to direct settlement of lunatic's property—Change of circumstances—Causing party to "suffer an injustice"—Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 171 (1).—A lunatic not so found had been of unsound mind since 1882. She was a spinster aged eighty-one, & was possessed of personal property of the value of £2,000. From the time when she became of unsound mind she had lived under the care of an uncle & aunt, who had provided £2,076 towards her maintenance. The uncle died in 1885 & the aunt in 1907. By the will of the latter an annuity of £300 was bequeathed for the support of the lunatic. Upon the death of the aunt a sister of the lunatic was appointed receiver of her estate & acted until 1920, when she was relieved & a sister of appcts. was appointed in her place. On her death in 1925 one of appcts. was appointed & was receiver of the lunatic's estate. In 1880 before her reason left her the lunatic made a will, by which she bequeathed her property to her three sisters, all of whom were dead. On an application by appcts., the residuary legatees under the aunt's will & second cousins of the lunatic, to the ct. to exercise the powers vested in it by sect. 171 of the above Act, & to direct a settlement to be made of the property of the lunatic :—Held : (1) the phrase "suffer an injustice" in sect. 171 (1) (c) must not be rigidly confined to a deprivation of a strict legal right, since that would stultify the operation of the sect. altogether, but it must in its context include the destruction of a clear moral claim, or even the disappointment of a thoroughly legitimate & well founded expectation, & in the circumstances appcts. would "suffer an injustice" if the recent change in the law of intestacy were allowed to defeat the moral claim which they had to succeed to the estate of the lunatic, particularly in view of the continuous recognition, pecuniary & otherwise, which their side of the family had throughout shown of the obligations imposed on them by their kinship to the lunatic ;

(2) there had been "a change of circumstances" within the sub-sect. since the execution by the lunatic of her will, by reason of the deaths of her three sisters to whom she had left her property ; (3) the case was one in which the ct. ought to exercise the discretion vested in it by sect. 171, by directing the receiver to execute a settlement of the property of the lunatic, to be approved by the judge in lunacy, which must be subject during the life of the lunatic to her right to be maintained out of the income, & if & so far as might be necessary out of the capital thereof, & subject also to any effective disposition by will or deed which the lunatic might make should she recover.—Re FREEMAN, [1927] 1 Ch. 479 ; 96 L. 529b. ————[.]—Under a marriage settlement dated Oct. 16, 1879, personalty funds were settled by a husband & wife upon trusts under which, after the death of the husband in 1915, the wife was entitled to the income for life with a power of appointment by deed or will among the issue of the marriage, & in default of appointment the funds were settled in trust for the two surviving children, now aged forty-six & forty-four years, who by inquisitions in 1902 & 1910 had been certified to be of unsound mind. In default of children who attained twenty-one or being daughters married, the wife's fund would have passed to the wife absolutely & the husband's fund to the husband, who had given all his property to his wife. By his will the wife's father, who died in 1885, gave his residuary real & personal estate upon trusts under which, in the events which had happened, his daughter, the wife, received the income for her life with a power of appointment by deed or will amongst her issue. In default of appointment the residue was settled on trusts under which the wife's two children were the only beneficiaries. Neither of the children had made a will &

apart from their mother & an aunt aged eighty-two, who was a spinster of unsound mind, their next of kin were second cousins, so that if they survived their mother & aunt, the Crown would take on their deaths under an intestacy. In these circumstances the wife took out summonses under the above sect., asking the ct. to direct settlements of the children's personal property under the marriage settlement & her father's will, which should include trusts in her favour absolutely after the death of each child or, alternatively, a general power of appointment by will so as to enable her to benefit friends & charities in which the family had always been interested. Before the applications were heard an arrangement was come to between the wife & the Crown by which, subject to the approval of the ct., the Crown consented to the wife's having a general power of appointment over the whole of the marriage settlement funds & over the father's residuary personal estate to the extent of £21,140, being the amount provided by the wife out of her own money as a maintenance fund for the children, upon the wife's abandoning all claim to the rest of her father's residuary estate, valued at about £285,000, & agreeing to supplement the income of the maintenance fund for the benefit of the children as theretofore:—Held: there was no ground justifying the ct. in making a settlement in respect of the wife's father's residuary estate, for no injustice would be suffered by the wife within sect. 171 (1) (c), if each child's share of the property was allowed to devolve as on an intestacy on his or her death, nor ought the trusts to be altered under sect. 171 (1) (b); but as the Crown did not oppose a settlement of the marriage settlement funds, orders would be made for settlements of the two children's shares so as to give the wife a general power of disposal over the funds. The provision of the maintenance fund of £21,400 did not afford a ground for directing settlements under sect. 171, but the wife would remain free to apply for recoupment under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 117, if so advised.

An application for a settlement was made by a widow, aged eighty-one years, & first cousin of the patient, who was sixty-two years of age. The only other near relatives of the patient were two first cousins, who were born in 1847 & 1850 respectively & who were & always had been resident in South America. Appct. stated that by reason of her own great age & that of her two cousins in South America any settlement which the ct. might be pleased to direct would not be of any material benefit to the patient's next of kin, unless its scope were extended to include children of any deceased first cousins of the patient's mother:—Held: there was no sufficient ground shown for directing a settlement to be made.

A patient had made a will in 1887, by which he had disposed of his residuary estate equally between his wife & children as a class. The wife had since died, as had also one of patient's sons, leaving issue. The patient's family were desirous that the deceased son's issue should be in no worse position than they would have been if their father had survived the patient:—Held: the case was a proper one for the exercise by the ct. of its discretion under sect. 171, by directing a settlement.

The property of a patient was derived under the will of his maternal grandfather. It had been settled by the patient's mother on her marriage with his father, whom she had divorced in 1877, & who had not since been heard of. The object of an application for a settlement was to exclude any claim by the father or his family:—Held: a settlement ought to be directed.

A patient had made a will in 1922, leaving the whole of his property to his wife, & in 1925 became of unsound mind. The will had been lost. On an application by the wife for a settlement, evidence was produced which satisfied the ct. as to the fact of the loss & as to the contents of the will:—Held: a settlement carrying out the terms of the will ought to be directed.—*Re GREENE, Re WHITWORTH, Re E. 1378a. ———.]—On May 26, 1927, the receiver of a lunatic's estate, who had been authorised to continue the lunatic's business, obtained an order from the master directing him to distribute £1,800 amongst certain scheduled creditors of the business whose debts had been incurred subsequently to the date of the receivership order. Th scheduled creditors were not parties to the order. On May 29, three days after the order was pronounced & before it was completed, the lunatic died. The order was subsequently completed on June 14. In July the exors. of the lunatic's will applied for an order for payment out of ct. to them of the fund representing the lunatic's residuary estate, & on July 28 the master refused to make the order except upon the terms of effect being given to the order of May 26. Subsequently to the making of this order an order was made for the administration of the lunatic's estate:—Held: (1) the order of May 26 was a mere direction to the receiver to make the payments in question which might have been varied or rescinded at any time by the master before it was finally completed, & it gave the creditors no equitable charge on the £1,800 thereby ordered to be distributed among them; (2) the jurisdiction in lunacy ceased on the death of the lunatic, & the master had no jurisdiction to direct that effect should be given to the order of May 26; (3) the exors. were entitled to the fund in ct. without regard to the order of May 26, but inasmuch as an order had since been made for the administration of the lunatic's estate, the fund must be paid to the credit of the administration action.—Re WHEATER, [1928] Ch. 223; 97 L. The justices dismissed the summons. The wife appealed, & submitted that as one of the sitting justices was a member of the same trade union as the husband, that justice must be regarded as an interested person, & therefore the decision was null & void :—Held : it would be stretching the law to say that a magistrate could not sit if one of the parties happened to be a member of the same trade union as he in a matter in which no trade dispute was involved.—*STEVENS v. 500a. — Not necessarily right of property.

—A local Act authorised the corpn. to make a bye-law prohibiting the playing of mechanical organs anywhere in the borough. In 1892 the corpn. made such a bye-law. The applt. was summoned for playing such an organ in the borough in breach of that bye-law on Apr. 7, 1928. He claimed a right so to play the organ by virtue of a licence which had been given to him by the lord of the manor, & contended that the jurisdiction of the justices was thereby ousted. The justices convicted him, & stated a case.—Held: the appeal must be allowed & the conviction quashed, because of opinion that under Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1879, s. 11, an officer of the customs & excise must be the complainant.—Held: the objection was unsustainable as Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1924, s. 9 (2), authorised the A.-G. to prosecute in any ct. of summary jurisdiction in all cases in which a prosecution is not instituted by a minister, dept. of State, or authorised person.—*A-G. v. The appeal was dismissed; & the ct. ordered applt. to pay costs to resp., "forthwith." A blank was left in the order, as to the sums, which the clerk of the peace had not time to fix before the sessions adjourned. The sessions adjourned to the next November. Before the adjournment day, the clerk of the peace fixed the costs, & filled up the order. After the adjourned sessions had terminated, but before the next sessions, which were held on the next Jan., payment was demanded of applt., who did not pay. 1229a. Appeal by clerk of urban district council - Recognisance entered into by clerk - Validity.]—On the application of a clerk of an urban district council for a case to be stated for the opinion of the High Ct., the clerk himself entered into the recognisance conditioned to prosecute the appeal, rendered necessary by Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (c. 43), s. 3. On a preliminary objection at the hearing of the appeal, that the recognisance should have been entered into by the clerk on behalf of the council, so as to render their goods liable, for the reason that the council had by resolution authorised the clerk to lay the original information &, if unsuccessful, to carry the proceedings further, & that the clerk "duly authorised" had sworn the information, & entered into the recognisance "as principal":—Held: the recognisance was good, in that in fact the clerk as informant was applt., being at liberty by virtue of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 259 to institute & carry on any proceedings which the local authority was authorised to institute, & the above words of authorisation were surplusage.—*LAWRENCE v. The lighter was moored to resps.' ship, & was used by them during the day in loading the ship. During the night the lightermen negligently left the lighter, which got adrift, & owing to the absence of the lightermen, was carried out to sea, ran ashore, & broke up:—Held: the lightermen being under the orders & control of resps. during the night as well as during the actual loading, resps. were responsible for negligence & were liable to applts. in damages.—BULL (A. Pltf. was convicted of driving the car to the common danger & was fined, & his driving licence was suspended for three months. Defts. terminated pltf.'s employment, on the ground that these facts constituted misconduct justifying dismissal. In an action for wrongful dismissal defts. also pleaded that, before the agreement was made, pltf. ought to have informed them that he had previously been convicted of being drunk when in charge of a motor car & been sentenced to imprisonment for driving it in a manner dangerous to the public:—Held: (1) there was no obligation on pltf. to disclose his previous conviction for a motoring offence; (2) the conviction during the currency of the agreement, even although pltf.'s licence was suspended, was not a ground for terminating the agreement, as pltf. could have got someone to drive the car.—HANDS v. 2127a. Probability of future support.]—A cab-driver was regularly employed at £2 5s. per week but, on the death of that employer, remained out of work for eighteen months. At the end of that time he obtained occasional employment driving to funerals, but his wages at this form of work only averaged 5s. a week. On returning from driving to a funeral he fell from the seat of his cab, & died from a fracture of the skull. At the time of his death he was wholly, & his widow mainly, dependent on a son's assistance. On a claim for compensation brought by the widow, as a dependant, the county ct. judge, in making an award in favour of the employer, said that he must be satisfied that there was a partial dependency at the time of death before he could speculate as to what the future might or might not bring forth. The dependant appealed: Held: the probability of the workman, if he had lived, regaining full employment, & once more supporting the dependant being a factor to be considered in deciding whether there was dependency, & it being doubtful whether this factor had been taken into account, the case must go back to the county ct. judge to consider such a probability. —*LEE v. 2143a. Motive of marriage immaterial—Marriage while in dying condition.—In 1913, the sister of the wife of a workman came to live with both of them. In 1915 the wife died & the sister-in-law stayed on as the workman's housekeeper, becoming entirely dependent on him for her support. In Dec. 1925, the workman was operated on for scrotal epithelioma, but resumed work in June, 1926. In Mar. 1928, he was certified as suffering from an industrial disease & underwent another operation. In Apr. he went to hospital, but was discharged after four days on the ground that his case was incurable, & it was then thought that he was in a dying condition. On June 7, he married his sister-in-law with the view of making her a dependant within the Act. On July 21, 1928, he died. At the time of his death he was in receipt of a weekly payment of compensation from his employers. The widow claimed compensation on the ground of total dependency. The county ct. judge found that the widow would not have been a dependant at the time of his death but for the accident, & therefore, refused compensation. The widow appealed:—Held: appet. having proved that, if the workman had not been incapacitated from earning wages, she would at the time of his death have been totally dependent upon him, & having also proved that at that time she was in fact his wife, she was entitled to an award. The fact that she married him after he had become incapacitated was immaterial, & any motive she may have had for marrying him was irrelevant.—BRAZEWELL v. EMMOTT & WALLSHAW, LTD. (1929), 140 L. The county ct. judge found that the agreement in the letter was a thing done for income tax purpose, & that applt.'s earnings must be treated as £450 a year, & that he was not a workman within Workmen's Compensation Acts:—Held: as there was no evidence as to what applt.'s expenses in fact were, the judge's decision was right.—*SKIDMORE v. 2310a. — — — Anthracosis.—A platelayer employed by a railway co. worked in tunnels on an average of two days a week. From May 10 to Aug. 2, 1924, he was at work continuously in a long tunnel where a considerable amount of work was being done, & the full train service was running. On Aug. 2, he coughed up a lump of black stuff, & consulted a doctor, who, on Oct. 1, certified that he was suffering from anthracosis, a form of dust disease. He obtained light work as a gardener, but abandoned that on Oct. 9, 1925, & did no further work. No notice of any accident was given, nor was any claim made, until he commenced proceedings for an award some three years after he had given up work as a platelayer. The county ct. judge held appet. had not discharged the burden of proving that his past or present incapacity was due to injury by accident which arose out of or in the course of his employment by resps.:—Held: the judge was bound in law to come to the conclusion to which he did, & there was no misdirection.—*COLE v. sb. Heart failure caused by strain—No evidence of excessive strain—Whether injury by accident.—A workman, who was employed as a brusher in a mine, began a shift at 11 p.m. on Dec. 30. It was the last shift of the year, & the man worked more vigorously than usual in order to finish early for his own purposes. About 12.20 a.m. on Dec. 31, he complained of a pain in his side. He collapsed while at work about ten minutes later, & died shortly afterwards. Death was due to heart failure, caused by the strain of the whole work of the shift operating upon a diseased condition of the heart. There was no proof of any particular or exceptional strain, & it was not proved that the extra vigour with which the deceased had been working caused his death:—Held: the arbitrator was entitled to hold that the workman's death was not caused by injury by "accident" within Workmen's Compensation Acts.—*MILLAR v. 2317a. Workman with heart disease—Death from strain.—A workman, employed in a mine, exerted himself in the ordinary course of his employment in lifting & replacing the wheels of a tub which had left the rails. He immediately complained of pain. He went to work the following day, & on his way home fell dead. Death was due to the bursting of the right auricle, owing to the walls of the heart having steadily become thinner over a period of years. Medical evidence was given to the effect that the strain of lifting would tend to make the workman's condition more critical & so lead to the collapse. The county ct. judge held the workman's death was caused by an accident, & he awarded compensation:—Held: it was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding.—FLANAGAN v. ACKERS WHITLEY & Co. (1926), 19 B. W. C. C. 399, C. A.

— — — — —]—A stevedore, who for many years had done his work without ailing, while employed unloading a ship had to fill a tub with iron ore, & at a certain point in the transit of the tub to defect it so as to allow it to clear an obstacle. While pulling the tub into the right position he suddenly said "Oh!" & ceased work for a moment, but, recovering, put some iron ore into the tub, when he again felt ill & stopped. He lay down, & within half an hour from his saying "Oh!" was dead. On a post mortem examination it was found that he suffered from coronary disease of the heart, which sooner or later would have caused death:—Held: death resulted from a strain incurred in the ordinary exercise of the man's work, & this amounted to an accident, as to establish an accident it was not necessary to find a sudden or special strain, & an award should be made in favour of the dependant.—

2331a. — — — — —]—A workman, employed as a ripper, was subject to the disease of osteo-periostitis, rendering his bones brittle & even liable to a spontaneous fracture, but he was able to do his work, & in 1919, by an accident whilst so employed, suffered a fracture of his right femur. He received compensation, but in 1920 resumed work, & continued so to work until 1924, when the seam on which he was employed was shut down & he ceased to work. In Aug. 1925, he was out for a walk, & after walking two or three miles & while standing still his right tibia suddenly snapped, & he claimed compensation for the injury, on the ground that it was attributable to the accident suffered by him in 1919. The medical theory advanced was that, after the injury suffered from the accident in 1919, the muscles of the leg became inelastic, & if he slipped his power of recovering himself would be affected. There was no evidence that he did slip when the tibia snapped in Aug. 1925. The county ct. judge held the injury was due to the first accident in 1919, & awarded compensation:—Held: there was no evidence to support the finding, & the award must be set aside.—WERRIN v. 2368a. — No obligation to use conveyance.—Employers used female labour for the picking of potatoes on their farm. In order to induce women to come from a distance they provided a horse lorry to convey them to & from their homes, but the women were under no obligation to use the lorry. The usual course was for the women, when they had finished their work, to walk back to the employers' yard, where the lorry was waiting. On a particular day the worker, having finished her work, was standing in the yard with her fellow-employees, & the employers' foreman told them to load up on the lorry. The women sat as usual with their legs dangling over the side of the lorry. As the lorry left the yard one of the worker's legs was crushed between the lorry & a gate-post. The county

ct. judge held that the worker was not in the yard under any express or implied term of her contract of service, that the yard was not within the ambit of her work, & that it was unnecessary for her to be there either for the performance of her duties or for the purpose of going home, & made an award in favour of the employers. The worker appealed:—Held: the case was covered by authority, & the accident arose out of & in the course of the worker's employment. It is sufficient for a workman to show that an accident occurs when he is on his employer's premises & travelling by a permitted route.—Anderson v. Hickman H. & Co., Ltd. (1928), 21 B. W. C. 2384a. ——A butcher's boy was allowed to go home for his tea, for which there was not a fixed time, & generally he was told to deliver or take orders from customers on his way there or back. If he had orders to deliver, he rode a bicycle, & on Dec. 17, 1926, he was told he might go for his tea, & was to deliver an order on the way, & take two orders coming back. He delivered the order, had his tea, & was bicycling back, but before he had called for the two orders he was knocked down by a motor lorry & injured. The county ct. judge found that at the time of the accident the boy was engaged on his own affairs in returning from tea, & that the accident did not arise out of & in the course of his employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding, & no misdirection.—Lye v. British & Argentine Meat Co. (1923), Ltd. (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 341, C. A.

2384b. ——A workman employed on a night shift was permitted to leave the premises to get his supper. There was no necessity for this, & he could do as he pleased. He did in fact leave the premises for his supper & met with an accident in a public street:—Held: the accident did not arise out of & in the course of the employment, because at the time of the accident the workman was not doing anything in discharge of a duty which he owed to his employers.—Moule v. Marmite Food Extract Co. (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 446, C. A.

2388a. ——A watchman was employed on an estate in which sewers were being constructed in a trench by the side of a highway. He could go anywhere on the estate, but had to give special attention to the open trench & to look after the red lights at night-time. He was provided with a watchman's box & a coke brazier. During one of his watches, which was twenty-four hours in length, he took the brazier into a workman's day shelter on the estate, but 300 yards from the trench, covered the shelter completely over with a tarpaulin, took his boots off, & lay down to sleep. He was later found dead in this situation, having been suffocated by the fumes from the coke brazier. On a claim by the widow the county ct. judge held that, as the deceased was on his employer's premises in pursuance of his duty, the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment. The employers appealed:—Held: there was, on the evidence, no causal connection between the employment & the death, & therefore, the accident did not arise out of & in the course of the employment.—*BUCKLAND v. 2430a. — Taking short cut through danger area.]—The deceased workman was a general labourer employed by resps. as a stand-by man around a mechanical navyy to assist the engine-driver. During a short interval when he was not required at the navyy, he went away to a neighbouring kiln to warm his hands or to warm himself, which he was entitled to do. He returned to his proper place for his work by taking a "short cut" which brought him under the bucket of the navyy. This he had been warned by his employers not to do. As he was proceeding back to work by this "short cut," the engine-driver's foot slipped off the controls, with the result that the bucket fell on the workman's head & killed him:—Held: the workman was performing the work which he was employed to do in a way in which he was warned not to do it, but he was, nevertheless, doing something for the purposes of his employment. The case therefore came within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), & the widow was entitled to compensation.—BROTHERTON v. JACKSON (J. & A.) (1928), 98 L. J. K. B. 76; 140 L. 2439a. Farm hand adjusting mower.]—A workman employed as a harvest hand on a farm was engaged in driving a two-horse mower with a cutting-blade for cutting the corn, & had occasion to replace a chain which had become detached from the back-band of one of the horses. He did not put the cutting-blade out of gear, but stood up from his seat on the machine & attempted to walk out on the pole between the horses in order to reach the detached chain. There was no express prohibition against walking on the pole, but the customary & proper method of replacing a chain was to stop the mower, put the cutting-blade out of gear, fasten the reins, dismount from the machine & walk to the horses' heads. The weight of the workman on the pole caused the horses to start, setting the cutting-blade in motion. He fell on to the blade & was seriously & permanently injured. In a claim for compensation the arbitrator found that the injury sustained was not due to an accident arising out of the employment. On appeal by the workman it was held by the Second Division of the Ct. of Session that there was evidence on which the arbitrator could make that finding. The workman again appealed:—Held: the accident arose from an added peril to which the workman had voluntarily exposed himself & consequently did not arise out of his employment.—*STEPHEN v. There was also a regulation forbidding any porter to do what he was doing at the time of the accident. The county ct. judge held the accident did not arise out of the employment, & as the act that caused it was not done for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, the accident was not to be deemed to have arisen out of the employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the award, & no misdirection.—*PAINTER v. 2460a. Farm labourer—Carting turf to own cottage.]—Applt. was employed by resp., his cousin, as a farm labourer. He had all his meals in the farmhouse & was paid 10s. a week. Resp. allowed him to cut turf & use it for his own purposes, & also allowed him to have the use of a horse & cart to cart the turf to his cottage. While so carting it, he was run into by a motor car & received serious injuries:—Held: the accident did not arise out of & in the course of applt.'s employment.—STANDEN v. SMITH (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 305, C. A.

2460b. Leaving premises to purchase provisions.]—Deceased was employed as the only shop assistant in a shop, & used to have his tea in the shop & went to fetch the milk for his tea from across the road. The shop was left open during his tea hour if he liked. While crossing the road to get the milk, he was knocked down by a motor cyclist, & was killed. Deceased paid for his own milk for his tea, & if he chose to might have got his tea out:—Held: the injury having occurred at the time when deceased had left the place of & the course of his employment to get the milk for his tea at his own cost for his own purposes, the accident did not arise out of & in the course of his employment, as he was not within the test laid down in *Parker v. 2479a. ———.—]—A young girl was injured while cleaning a machine for pulping cheese. She was employed to dust bottles & sweep the floors & not to do any work in connection with the machine, & permission to help on the machine had been refused:—Held: as the girl was injured when doing something entirely different in kind from what she was employed to do, the accident did not arise out of or in the course of her employment, & Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 7, did not apply to such a case.—*JENNISON v. 2488a. Riding on engine.]—The duty of C., a workman in the employ of the S. Railway, required him to go from point A. to point B. on their premises. Instead of going by a public road he proceeded to walk along the permanent way, a shorter route, in disregard of an emphatic prohibition. It was a common practice, acquiesced in by the railway's responsible officers, though forbidden by their rules, for workmen passing between A. & B. to travel on an engine if one happened to be running at a convenient time. When C. had walked about three-quarters of the distance along the line an engine going in the same direction passed him at a low speed, & to save himself the trouble of completing the journey on foot, he attempted to mount the engine in motion, with the result that he was seriously & permanently injured. The county ct. judge found that, although the prohibition was a very real one, C. was entitled to compensation, as he was acting "for the purposes of & in connection with" the railway's business within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2):—Held: the above sub-sect. did not extend compensation to workmen who were not in their employment at all, & as C. in going into a definitely prohibited area, had gone outside his sphere of employment, he could not recover.—*CLARKE v. 2492a. ———.—]—Some miners had been conveyed from their work at the face to the shaft in a train of tubs provided by the employers. Some conveyance was necessary in order to enable the men to leave the pit within the limit of seven hours permitted for each shift. Subsequently the employers provided a "spake," i.e., a train of special vehicles containing seats. On the occasion of the accident the driver in charge of the spake, for some purpose of his own, did what he had sometimes done before, namely, instead of using the spake used a train of tubs for conveying the miners, who knew that riding on tubs was prohibited, but did not complain. The train of tubs broke & overturned, & two of the miners were killed, & one was slightly injured:—Held: the prohibition was of the class that dealt with conduct within the sphere of the employment, & Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), applied. It was necessary for the employers that the men should leave within a specified time, & the act was done for the purposes of the employers' trade or business, & compensation should be awarded to the dependants of the two miners who were killed, but not to the slightly injured miner, who was, for that reason, not covered by sect. 1 (2).—EDWARDS v. GWAUNCAEGURWEN COLLIERY CO., JAMES v. SAME, JENKINS v. SAME (1926), 96 L. J. K. B. 337; 136 L. T. 494; 20 B. W. C. C. 75, C. A.

2494a. —[—A shunter was employed to accompany a short train & to get down to open gates, through which the train had to pass, & also to do the necessary shunting. He should have ridden in the front waggon, but used to ride by means of his coupling stick on the buffer so as to enable him to get off & on more easily. Whilst so engaged the train went over a stone & jolted him off, & the injury he received resulted in the loss of a leg. Riding on a waggon by means of a coupling pole was prohibited:—Held: the prohibition was not one defining the sphere of the man's employment, though the breach of it, apart from Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), would have prevented the accident arising out of the employment. There was evidence to support the finding of the county ct. judge that the act done was for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, & the accident, by sect. 1 (2), was to be deemed to arise out of the employment.—*JAMES v. 2506a. —[—S., a stoneman, was employed by resps. driving a drift through rock by shotfiring & was found dead within three yards of the working face, his body being very badly damaged & his left arm practically blown off, he being a left-handed man. The drill & ratchet were found burnt, broken, & twisted a few yards from the working face, & the standard some way from the face & undamaged. The drill & ratchet together with the standard were used for drilling holes to put the shots in, but if a shot misfired & the stemming was drilled out the standard was not used. S. was a licensed shot firer, & his duty would be to deal with the case of a misfire, but the use of a hole in which a shot had misfired was prohibited, as also the drilling out of it the stemming in order to put in another charge, it being directed that a fresh hole must be bored not less than a foot from the old hole. There was no evidence that there had been any attempt to drill a fresh hole. The county ct. judge held the man was killed whilst doing a prohibited act, but, as his motive was to save himself the trouble of drilling a fresh hole, he was not at the time of the accident doing an act for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), & his dependant was not entitled to recover compensation:—Held: the personal motive of the man in doing the prohibited act was not a criterion as to whether he was doing it for the purposes

b i. —[Fireman converting electric detonator into fuse detonator.]—Held:

the workman, when injured, was doing an act not within the scope of his employment, & even assuming it was done for the purposes of the employer's business, it was not an act to which Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 7, applied.—MC_CORQUINDALE v. CARNBROE COAL CO., LTD., [1927] S. C. 14.—SCOT.

d i. —[Allowing burning material to lie about mine.]—Held: (1) a smouldering cigarette was "burning material" within Coal Mines General Regulations, 1913, r. 12; (2) there was evidence on which the arbitrator was entitled to hold that the workman had been guilty of serious & wilful misconduct, in respect that the facts showed that he had created a dangerous situation as a result of a deliberate act of the will.—*SMITH v. 2512b. Riding on journey of trams. A miner & his son, working on the same shift, had to return to the pit shaft by the main drift along which journeys of trams were being hauled. While they were returning, the cable of a journey of trams broke & ran back some twenty yards. The son was then found to be pinned underneath the corner of an overturned tram & the father was found lying across another derailed tram, holding the signal rope & seriously injured. The boy died immediately & the father died two days later. The widow claimed compensation on behalf of herself & her surviving children. The county ct. judge found that the workman had been riding on the journey of trams contrary to the prohibition contained in Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 43 (2), & consequently was not acting in the course of his employment at the time of the accident. He therefore made an award in favour of the employers. The dependants appealed: Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—EDWARDS v. OCEAN COAL CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 254, C. A.

2515a. Workman entering prohibited place by mistake.—A series of cubicles for electrical works were in course of being fitted up, some of which had been completed & contained live electrical machinery, & were locked. There was an express order to the workmen not to enter the completed cubicles. The cubicles being worked upon were quite close to those finished, being in the same series. The workman, a very competent man at his job, was very short-sighted, & was found electrocuted in one of the completed cubicles, he having unlocked the others. The county ct. judge drew the inference that the workman had entered a completed cubicle by mistake, & was there for the purposes of his employers' trade or business, & that the accident arose out of & in the course of his employment:—Held: there was evidence to support this inference of fact, & although the workman was acting contrary to a prohibition, the accident must be deemed to arise out of & in the course of the employment.—CARTER v. BRITISH THOMSON-HOUSTON CO., LTD. (1927), 137 L. T. 329; 20 B. W. C. C. 331, C. A.

2552a. Drowned when using boat not provided by employer.—Five sailors got leave to go on shore. The bo'sun said that they were not bound to be back in the ship until 6.15 a.m. A launch had been provided to take the sailors on leave to the shore & back again, & the captain told the men that the last journey to the ship by the launch would be made at 8 p.m., & that if they came back later than that, they would have to find some other means of returning to the ship. The men desired to enjoy their leave till later than 8 p.m., & tried to arrange with the man who worked the launch to come for them at 10 p.m., offering to pay him 2s. each, but the launch never came for them at 10 p.m., so they got into the first boat handy, a dinghy, & borrowed a scull with which they propelled the dinghy from the stern. The dinghy, though the men were unaware of it, was rotten & sank, the result being that three of the five men were drowned:—Held: there was no contractual obligation on the deceased men to return to their ship by the boat they used, which was not provided by the employers, & as no such duty was on the men to use that boat, the accident by which they lost their lives was not in the course of performing some duty arising out of their contract of service, or, in other words, in the course of their employment.—ROBERTSON v. 2552b. Standing up in boat to take hold of gangway—Boat sinking.—M. & W. were members of the crew of a ship lying in a river about twenty-five feet from the wharf. The ship provided no boat for the purpose of going to or from the shore. A game of football was being played on shore, at which the captain & some of the officers were present & in which M. took part. On returning to the wharf after the game M. hailed W., who got into a canoe at the foot of the gangway & fetched M. When M. got up to take hold of the gangway, the canoe filled, & both men were drowned. The county ct. judge held the accident was occasioned by a reasonable attempt to get hold of the gangway, & such attempt involved more than an ordinary risk of navigation to which any passenger would be exposed, & was an act specifically connected with his employment on the ship, & he made an award in favour of the dependants in both cases, on the ground that both men had been drowned in an accident arising out of & in the course of their employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding.—MORRISON v. ABOUKIR (OWNERS), Woods v. SAME (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 163, C. A.

2561a. Seaman crossing barges instead of using boat.—A sailor who was on shore on leave from his ship returned to the ship by walking over barges which lay between it & the quay, & while doing so, fell into the water & was drowned. The employers had provided a boat & boatman for the members of the crew to get from & to the ship, but most of the crew used the way over the barges, & that was acquiesced in by the officers:—Held: the sailor being under no obligation or duty to his employers to return by this means, was not in the course of his employment in so doing, & therefore the accident did not arise in the course of the employment.—BLACK v. HESPERIDES S.S. OWNERS (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 295, C. A.

2574a. ——J.—Deceased was a mosaic worker employed by applts., who had a flooring contract at K., & deceased was carrying out at K. mosaic work for the purposes of the contract. It was the duty of deceased to travel by train from L. to K. daily, & he was paid by applts. for the time occupied in so travelling, & his railway ticket was also paid for by applts. Deceased, having gone to sleep, got out of the train whilst it was in motion leaving K. & slipped on the platform as he landed, fell heavily on his back, his head striking the platform violently, & died of the injuries received:—Held: though deceased was in the course of his employment while travelling in the train, he was com-sphere of the employment, & his widow was entitled to compensation.—ALTOBELLI v. JOHN ELLIS & SONS, LTD. (1926), 136 L. T. 602; 20 B. W. C. C. 190, C. A.

2589a. ——J.—A porter employed by furniture & upholstery makers claimed compensation for injury by accident arising out of an assault committed upon him in the course of his employment. Whilst engaged in loading furniture into a railway van outside resp.'s premises an altercation arose between appct. & the van driver in consequence of a suggestion made to the driver that he should assist in expediting the work. The driver struck appct. in the face, & so injured one of his eyes that it had to be removed. The county ct. judge dismissed the application, finding that though the assault was an accident, it was not one of the risks of appct.'s employment that he should be assaulted, & it was not the result of doing anything of service to his employer, & it was not an accident arising out of the employment:—Held: the decision was right, as there was evidence upon which the judge could support his decision, & no misdirection.—*LEE v. The accident happened when he was engaged in carrying food, it being no part of his duty to do so, on that night. The county ct. judge found that the workman must have crawled through the ropes round the hold without having any duty whatsoever to do so, & held the accident arose neither out of nor in the course of his employment:—Held: the judge could have come to no other conclusion on the evidence, & there was no misdirection.—*WATSON v. 2612a. Splinter in finger—Workman making packing-cases.—A workman engaged in making wooden packing-cases complained to a welfare worker in his employers' works that he had a splinter in the little finger which did not arise out of the employment, but under the above sect. it must be deemed to arise out of & in the course of the employment as having been done in pursuance of & for the purposes of the employers' trade or business, & the act done was not so contrary of his right hand, but she could find nothing except a small black speck. It was a frequent occurrence for a workman to request the welfare worker to remove a splinter from a finger, & this particular workman had done so on several occasions. The finger became red & swollen, & five days later a doctor found a small bleb on it containing pus. The workman was feverish & was sent to hospital, where he died of septic pneumonia ten days after his complaint to the welfare worker. In his evidence the house-surgeon of the hospital said, "There was no sign of a foreign body. In my view there must have been some injury or crack at place of bleb. Crack might be microscopical or it might be a foreign body entering there. The latter is the most usual." There was no evidence that the workman did any work at home which might cause a similar injury. On a claim by the dependants, the county ct. judge found the following facts: (a) sepsis was due to the entry of a foreign body, the point of entry being indicated by the bleb. (b) deceased had previously got splinters in his hand, such as led to festering, (c) such a splinter would be likely to produce the condition of deceased's finger. From these facts he drew the inference that the deceased was infinitely more likely to get a splinter at work than elsewhere, & that he, therefore, died from an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings of fact, & the county ct. judge was entitled to draw from those facts the inference which he did.—HURST v. WALTER'S PALM TOFFEE CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 215, C. A.

2618a. Scratches—Furniture remover.—A workman, employed to drive a lorry & move furniture, frequently received scratches in the course of his work, but usually took no notice of them. On returning from his work one evening he showed his wife that his fingers were scratched. He suffered great pain under the arm during the night & died within seven days of septic poisoning. He had no hobby or occupation at home which exposed him to scratches. The county ct. judge found that death was due to an injury arising out of the employment. The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—PIPER v. DE'ATH BROS. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 73, C. A.

2619a. ———.—A commercial traveller was killed by a falling tree while motor-cycling upon his employers' business. The fall of the tree was apparently caused by a gale of unusual force:—Held: as deceased was brought into a danger zone by reason of his employment, the accident arose "out of the employment" within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925

There was no explanation of how he met with the accident, but when last seen shortly before he was acting in the course of his duty. The county ct. judge drew the inference from the facts before him that the workman was acting in the course of his employment:—Held: the county ct. judge was entitled to draw the inference he did, & there was no misdirection.—*STROUD v. 2668a. ——— Dispenser—Scratch.—Appet. was employed by two doctors in partnership as a dispenser, her duties being to fill medicine bottles & clean instruments. On Nov. 9, 1926, at 10.30 a.m., whilst so employed, she noticed that her right thumb was bleeding, but was not sure how the scratch which caused the bleeding had occurred, & she had not felt pain. She inferred that she must have knocked it at the time on a rough bit of wood at the side of the sink or on the edge of a cork box. She applied iodine, but as the bleeding did not stop she went to the assistant, who bandaged her thumb, & she continued at work until 11.30, when she went to one of the partners, who dressed the wound. On Nov. 16 she felt too unwell to go to work, & subsequently was in the infirmary until Jan. 18, 1927, suffering from septic poisoning:—Held: (1) there were sufficient facts proved before the county ct. judge to enable him to draw an inference one way or the other, so that there was no necessity for surmise, conjecture, or guess; (2) the employers had had knowledge of the accident, & notice was not necessary.—GILL v. PERROTT (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 9, C. A.

2668b. — Workman moving gutters with sharp edges.—On May 16 a workman was employed as a labourer in moving semi-circular rain gutters with somewhat sharp edges, & returned home with a slight wound in his right shoulder. On the following day he told a fellow-workman that he was "feeling his shoulder," but he continued at work until May 21. A doctor was called in on May 23, but the workman rapidly grew worse & died on May 25 from septicæmia. The widow spoke to the employers' time-keeper of the death & gave formal notice on June 11. The county ct. judge held he was entitled to infer an injury resulting from an accident which arose out of & in the course of the employment, & also held the employers were not prejudiced by any delay in giving notice:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection.—*FLETCHER v. He alleged that a foreign body had entered his right eye, but at the time of the alleged accident he made no complaint of anything having entered his right eye. A doctor, who examined him, diagnosed the case as one of chronic glaucoma. The county ct. judge found that the workman was at all material times suffering from chronic glaucoma, & that there was no injury by accident arising out of or in the course of his employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding, & no misdirection.—*WARSAWA v. 2719a. ——A miner, who was known to be suffering from valvular disease of the heart, returned to work against his doctor's advice. His condition was such that he was liable to collapse or sudden death at any moment. He went down the mine at 10.30 p.m., & was alive & well at 3 o'clock. At 4 o'clock he was found dead in his stall, lying back as though asleep. There was no evidence of any fall of roof, & he had no pick in his hand. He was alone at the time of his death, & there was no evidence of what the man was actually doing:—Held: there was no evidence that the man's death was caused by any strain at work, & no evidence that death resulted from any injury by accident arising out of the employment.—*MUSCROFT v. 2734a. ——A miner was about to insert a fuse in a detonator in the course of his duties when the detonator exploded & injured him. The sheriff-substitute held that the cause of the explosion was not proved & the workman having discharged any onus laid on him by proving that the explosion caused the injury, found that the accident arose out of the employment & made an award in his favour. The employers appealed. The First Division of the Ct. of Session by a majority affirmed the award. The employers appealed to the House of Lords:—Held: it followed from the facts of the case that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment.—*LOCHGELY IRON & COAL CO., LTD. v. 2735a. — Seaman stooping in course of duty — Burst blood-vessel.—The chief officer of a vessel, fifty-eight years old, while on duty on the bridge, stooped to get some string out of a cupboard in the course of his duty & then stated to the captain that he felt queer, sat down, & later fell unconscious on the bridge. He recovered consciousness in five minutes, but died about eight hours afterwards. There was no inquest or post mortem. At the hearing of a claim by the widow the doctors on both sides agreed that he died very probably from cerebral hæmorrhage. His own doctor, who had attended him for twenty-five years, said he was a healthy man, & there was no evidence of anything wrong with his heart. The county ct. judge found that the cause of death was the breaking of some blood-vessel due to the stooping which caused the fall which subsequently led to the death, but held that he would not be justified in making an award for the dependant. The dependant appealed:—Held: on the finding that death was due to the stooping, it followed that death resulted from injury by accident arising out of the employment.—*HORE v. - 2823a. ———.]—A workman strained the five months. He also suffered from septic teeth. Acting on their doctor's certificate his employers stopped compensation & the workman filed a request for arbn. The employers answered that, if the workman was still incapacitated, the incapacity was due to natural causes. The workman's doctor had advised him to have his teeth out, as their condition retarded his recovery, but he had refused to have this done, & at the hearing the county ct. judge was advised by the medical assessor that the condition of the teeth had perpetuated the injury. The county ct. judge found that the workman had acted unreasonably in not having his teeth removed, as by that means he would probably have fully recovered by the time that the employers had stopped compensation. He found "that appet. had failed to prove that his continued incapacity was due solely to the accident." He made an award of a penny a week, allowing the workman the costs of the arbn. The workman appealed from the award of a penny a week, & the employers cross-appealed on the question of costs:—Held: the county ct. judge was justified in awarding only a penny a week, because he found that he could not otherwise assess the quantum of incapacity due to the accident so long as the effect of the septic teeth remained, also the award as to costs could not be disturbed because he had found that there was some incapacity due to the accident.—RUDDY v. 2849a. Contents:—All injuries need not be specified.]—The mere fact that notice has to be given does not imply that all injuries must be specified.

A workman gave notice of an accident, in which he complained of injury to his ribs, & his employers paid him compensation. He returned to work after two months. He then began to suffer with his hip, & eventually had to cease work on that account. His employers resisted a second claim for compensation, on the ground that no injury to the hip was specified in the notice of the accident. The county ct. judge found that the injury to the hip was due to the original accident, that the employers had not been prejudiced by any failure to mention the hip in the notice of accident, as they had paid compensation to the workman after an examination by their own doctor:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection.—*WILES v. She refused, on the ground that he would be a necessary witness on her behalf in any arbn. proceedings. The employers applied for suspension of weekly payments until the examination had taken place. The county ct. judge granted the application, on the ground that the reason given for the refusal was itself unreasonable:—Held: to find that the refusal was unreasonable merely because the workman objected to being examined, at the instance of the employer, by a consultant at the hospital at which she had been treated, was not sufficient. The matter must be further inquired into to ascertain (1) whether this consultant was the only medical adviser available to the workman, & (2) whether the woman's case, if it went to arbn., would be imperilled by reference to this particular consultant.—TELEPHONE MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. ABEL (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 289, C. A.; subsequent proceedings (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 84, C. A.

2968b. — Reasonableness of refusal.—An injured workman was treated in hospital by a consultant of the hospital. She returned to work, but ceased work again owing to the injury. She was then requested by her employers under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 18, to submit to an examination by the same consultant acting as their medical adviser. She refused on the ground that he would be a necessary witness on her behalf in any arbn. proceedings. On an appln. by the employers under sect. 18 to suspend the weekly payments, the county ct. judge held that her refusal was unreasonable & granted the appln. On appeal the case was remitted for further inquiry to ascertain (a) whether this consultant was the exclusive adviser of the workman, (b) whether the workman's case, if it went to arbn., would be imperilled in any way by reference to this particular consultant, & (c) whether the employers' request that the workman should be examined by this consultant was reasonable. The county ct. judge found in favour of the employers on all points. The workman appealed:—Held: on the evidence the workman was reasonable in refusing to submit to examination by this consultant at the instance of the employer, & the county ct. judge's findings could not be supported. *TELEPHONE MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. He felt pain & reported that he thought he had ruptured himself, but he continued at work until June 17, 1927, when he became very ill after attempting to lift a heavy article & went to bed. On the following day he was found to have a hernia. He made a claim for compensation on Aug. 3, 1927, giving the date of the accident as Jan. 5, 1926. The employers contended that no claim had been made within six months of the alleged accident. The county ct. judge held that there was reasonable cause for failing to make a claim within six months, because the workman believed that the pain was temporary, & that he would soon recover. The employers appealed:—Held: there was misdirection, & the workman had shown no reasonable cause for failing to make a claim within six months.—BROWN v. AVELING & PORTER, LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. 3031a. —.]—On Apr. 16, 1926, a workman fell & injured his knee. He was paid full wages, although incapacitated, until Sept. 3, when he was summarily dismissed from employment for misconduct. In the hope of being reinstated, he threatened to bring an action for wrongful dismissal, but made no claim under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), until two days after the statutory six months had expired. The county ct. judge found that the workman never intended to claim within the necessary period of six months, & there was no reasonable cause for the delay, & he refused to award compensation:—Held: the evidence supported the findings, & there was no misdirection.

When the workman knows that the injury he suffers from was occasioned by an accident giving him a right to compensation, & fails to make a claim within six months, if that failure was prompted by his own interests, & was not induced by any action of the employer which would lead him to believe he could get compensation without making a claim, he shows no reasonable cause (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—*DREWITT v. 3033a. Expectation of compensation without necessity of making claim.]—In Apr. 1925, a chef severed the ligaments of his right hand in handling a dish which broke, but he continued his work at his full wages. His employers knew of the accident, but were not aware the chef could not do his full work. In July, 1926, he was dismissed, & in that month made a claim for compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman did not refrain from making a claim because he formed the view that he would receive compensation should incapacity supervene in the future without the necessity of making a claim, & that the employers did nothing to encourage such a view, & there was no reasonable cause for not making the claim within six months of the accident:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection.

There would be reasonable cause for not making a claim within six months, if the workman could prove that there was a tacit understanding that the employers knew all about the possibility of a claim & were prepared to give him compensation, even though his claim might fall outside the six months (LORD HANWORTH, M.R.).—*SOYER v. The employers gave notice of termination of the weekly payment, on the ground of recovery as certified by their doctor. The workman replied with a counter-certificate of his doctor. The matter was submitted to the medical referee, who certified that the man was fit for most forms of work. The employers ceased making the weekly payments, & the workman appealed to the county ct. judge as to the effect of the certificate. The judge, sitting with the same medical referee as assessor, who explained his certificate as being one of complete recovery, held the man was fit for work on the date when compensation ceased, but awarded compensation from the date of cessation of the weekly payment to the date of his award:—Held: (1) compensation was not payable after incapacity had ceased; (2) the certificate of the medical referee was sufficient & conclusive.—*PULLEN v. The county ct. judge refused to treat the certificate as conclusive, & received evidence as to the nature of the respective occupations, the parties having objected to the certificate being sent back to the medical referee for explanation or correction:—Held: the certificate being ambiguous was not conclusive, & the parties having refused the opportunity of the ambiguity being explained by the medical referee, the judge was entitled to hear the evidence tendered & act upon it.—*AUSTIN v. The county ct. judge, after hearing evidence, interpreted that certificate as meaning that the workman was unable to do work which involved continuous stooping, such as his old employment necessitated, & made an award on the basis of partial incapacity:—Held: the judge had properly treated the certificate as conclusive, & interpreted it rightly, & was justified in hearing evidence as to the amount of stooping that would incapacitate the man in order to make an award for the proper compensation.—*TAYLDER v. Where, therefore, upon an application by the employer to end the compensation, the workman lodged a minute informing the ct. that skiagrams taken since the last certificate of the medical referee had disclosed conditions not apparent on external examination, & that there was a reasonable probability of a recurrence of incapacity:—Held: it

In a subsequent application by the workman to have a memorandum of agreement recorded, the arbitrator, on the application of the employers, made a remit to a medical referee. On Feb. 2, 1928, the referee reported that the workman's condition was such that he was not "at present" debarred from doing labouring work. The arbitrator granted warrant to record the memorandum, but suspended compensation as from Apr. 5, 1927, until the further orders of the Ct.:—Held: the arbitrator was not entitled, on the evidence before him, to suspend compensation as from Apr. 5, 1927, & in view of the circumstances disclosed, the capacity of the workman as between Apr. 5, 1927, & Feb. 2, 1928, should be inquired into by the arbitrator rather than by a further remit to the medical referee.—*M'LELLAN v. In Aug. 1926, the employers stopped compensation after serving notice under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12, on the ground that the workman no longer suffered from the disease. A counter-notice having been served, the issue was referred by the registrar to the medical referee, who certified that the workman was totally incapacitated, but that such incapacity was due to other causes than nystagmus. On an application by the workman for an arbitration in Jan. 1929, evidence was tendered that nystagmus had once more become active, but the employers raised the preliminary objection that the medical referee's certificate was conclusive against the workman, & destroyed the effect of the certifying surgeon's certificate of Dec. 1925. The county ct. judge upheld the objection & made an order dismissing the application for arbitration. The workman appealed:—Held: the certificate of a medical referee being only conclusive as to the matters therein certified, & miner's nystagmus being a recurrent disease, the certificate was not of itself a bar to the claim of the workman for compensation, & it was for the county ct. judge to decide whether there had been in fact any recrudescence of the original disease.—*LEWIS v. On Nov. 5, 1926, the workman signed a receipt for payments in the form of an agreement, by which he agreed that the payments were to be continued only so long as he was totally disabled, but that the amount of payment in respect of any subsequent partial incapacity should be settled if & when the question arose. In Jan. 1927, he applied for registration of an agreement in the terms of Form 24, that the weekly payments should continue during partial or total incapacity or until the same should be ended or diminished in accordance with 1925 Act. The employers objected to that agreement being recorded, on the ground that the terms of the real agreement of Nov. 5, 1926, were not therein correctly stated, & thereupon the workman filed a request for arbn. on Feb. 23, 1927. The boy obtained work as a messenger boy on Feb. 11, 1927. The county ct. judge ordered the document of Nov. 5 to be recorded as the agreement between the parties, & dismissed the request for arbn.:—Held: a totally incapacitated workman in receipt of full compensation under an admission of liability was entitled, either to a recorded memorandum of agreement stating his rights in the terms of Form 24, or, if the employers objected to that, he was entitled, on the question so raised, to apply in arbn. proceedings for the judge to grant an award in such terms; the document of Nov. 5 did not give the workman his full rights as expressed in Form 24, & was not binding on the workman, being an infant, & when the employers objected to the recording of a memorandum in the terms of Form 24 a question was raised fit for arbn., & an award should have been made having regard to the terms of Form 24, & there was no power on the proceedings to order a memorandum of agreement to be recorded,

The employers then applied for a review on the ground that he had partially recovered. At the hearing the workman was not called, but the county ct. judge examined his arm. The only evidence given was that of two doctors, one called by each side, who agreed that the workman was suffering from a 40 per cent. incapacity. The judge made an award diminishing the compensation payable, in which he said that he was unable to find on the evidence that the workman was either an "odd lot" or came within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4). The workman appealed on the ground that no sufficient evidence had been given that he had regained sufficient capacity to work to take him out of the category of "odd lot," & that, therefore, the onus was upon the employers of proving that there was in fact work available at which the man could earn wages which onus had not been discharged:—Held: taking into consideration

While so working he was injured by an accident. The county ct. judge said that he did not accept the evidence which had been given as to the inability of the workman to do the full work of a contractor, & refused compensation:—Held: it was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding, & no misdirection.—*JONES v. result that the finger had to be amputated. Compensation was paid, but was determined upon the certificate of the employer's doctor that the workman was no longer incapacitated. In proceedings instituted by the workman medical evidence was given on his behalf that his grip was weakened, that the muscles were still tender, & that he was still partially incapacitated. The doctor called on behalf of the employers agreed that the grip was weak, but stated that the workman was capable of doing some work which would be beneficial. The county ct. judge found that the workman had fully recovered, & made a declaration of liability only:—Held: there was no evidence to support the finding, & the case must be remitted for compensation to be assessed.—*BUCK v. 3235a. ————]—The amount of the average weekly earnings of a workman before accident was 50s. After the accident he returned to lighter work, but was paid at exactly the same rate as before the accident. He, however, only earned an average weekly amount of 37s. 8d., owing to slackness of trade. He brought a claim for compensation at the rate of 6s. 2d. a week, being one-half the difference between his pre-accident & post-accident earnings. The county ct. judge made a declaration of liability only on the ground that he found no loss of earning capacity

3228 iii. ————]—A workman was awarded compensation in respect of total incapacity in Feb. 1925. On May 13, 1926, he became fit for light work. He made efforts to obtain such work, but, owing to abnormal economic conditions, he was unable to do so. If he had obtained light work the effects of his injury would have worn off, & he would have recovered full capacity by Sept. 13, 1926. Owing, however, to his failure to obtain light work he was still partially incapacitated at the latter date. Apart from this failure to obtain work, his condition was not due to any failure on his part to take reasonable measures to promote the recovery of capacity. The arbitrator having suspended payment of compensation as from Sept. 13, 1926:—Held: the continuance of incapacity, not being due to any unreasonable conduct on the workman's part or to the intervention of any new cause apart from economic circumstances, was still attributable to the original accident; &, accordingly, that the arbitrator was not entitled to suspend payment of compensation.—*KENNEDY v. 3235 i. Whether incapacity within the Acts—Slackness of work.]—A workman, employed as a drawer in a mine, who had been injured, was paid compensation first as for total, & later as for partial, incapacity. He then obtained work with the same employers as a pump engineman at wages higher than he had earned as a drawer, & compensation was suspended by agreement. The pit in which he was employed as a pump engineman having been closed, the workman was thrown out of employment. He was unfit, owing to his injury, for his former work as a drawer, but he was fit for various jobs, including that of pump engineman, at which he could earn his former wage. He was unable to find work owing to the state of the coal mining industry & not owing to his injury. The arbitrator having ended compensation in the meantime as at the date when the workman obtained work as a pump engineman:—Held: as the workman was fit for work at which he could earn as high wages as he had earned as a drawer, he was not entitled to compensation.—*INVERARITY v. The county ct. judge held, although totally incapacitated from June 14, the workman would not, in any case, have been at work owing to the strike, & refused compensation:—Held: if a workman was totally incapacitated by an accident, it was immaterial that he might also have been prevented from earning money by some other cause.—*WILLIAMS v. 3243b. ———.]—A coal miner, who had worked for many years underground, became, by reason of an attack of nystagmus, only able to do surface work at a lower wage. This work was unavailable, owing to the state of the labour market, though the workman, but for the nystagmus, would probably have been able to obtain employment underground:—Held: the effect of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 43), s. 16, which was re-enacted as Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4), was necessarily to exclude the idea that the words "able to earn" in Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), Sched. I., applied to any circumstances not personal to the workman himself. It dealt expressly with the case of the man who could not find work, & it set the criterion whether the failure to find work was due wholly or mainly to the accident, but failure to find work due solely to the state of the labour market was expressly excluded by the sect., & it was impossible to say that *Cardiff Corpn. v. 3247a. ———.]—A blacksmith was injured while at work by a splinter of iron entering an eye, & impairing its vision by one-half. He returned to work for a short period, but did not do overtime, & threw up the work on the ground that it was unsuitable. He was nervous of losing the sight of the other eye. The employers called medical evidence that he was fully able to do his work. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the workman on the basis of partial incapacity. 3269a. ———.]—A collier suffered a succession of accidents, but was given work with partial compensation until, in 1921, he left the colliery & became a club steward at higher wages. In 1922 he was granted a declaration of liability against the colliery co. In 1928 he was dismissed from his position of club steward & failed at three clubs where there were vacancies to obtain the position of a club steward. He claimed that he was unfit to work as a collier at the coal face, & his old employers refused to employ him otherwise. He therefore made a claim for compensation against his old employers in the form of a review of the declaration of liability. The county ct. judge made an award in his favour of 7s. 6d. a week on the grounds that, although he could do surface work, he was unable to work at the coal face, & that the job of a club steward was not a well-known branch of the labour market, & should therefore be disregarded:—Held: there was no evidence on which the county

ct. judge could find that the work of a club steward was exceptional; it was a well-known class of employment in which the man was capable of working. The case must be remitted for a rehearing, taking this fact into consideration.—STATHAM v. OXCROFT COLLIERY CO., LTD. (No. 2) (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 330, C. A.

3269b. — After retirement.—A workman lost the use of an eye by accident & wore a shade over it in consequence. Liability being admitted he received full compensation until he was able to do his ordinary work again. An agreement was recorded whereby the employers undertook to provide the workman with employment, & admitted their liability to pay compensation "as & when their liability shall arise." The workman continued doing his work without compensation until having reached the age of sixty-six he was compulsorily retired under his employers' superannuation scheme, but at the same time became entitled thereunder to a pension of 10s. per week. After his retirement the workman filed a request for arbitration, claiming to be entitled to be paid full compensation as from the date of his retirement. He gave evidence that he had tried to obtain work since his retirement but had failed. The county ct. judge held that although the workman was physically capable of performing his old work with his old employers, his age & the loss of the eye prevented him getting fresh work in the labour market. He made an award in his favour of 10s. a week. He found the workman's average weekly earnings before the accident to be £3 5s. & his post-accident earnings £2 2s. The first figure included payment for overtime & the second did not. Furthermore there had been a fall in the rate of wages since the accident. The employers appealed on the grounds that the workman was not incapacitated, & that, if he was, compensation had been calculated on the wrong basis, because the judge had not taken into consideration the question of overtime & fall in the rate of wages:—Held: there was evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that the workman was partially incapacitated, but, in arriving at the amount of compensation payable he had not taken into account the high rate of pre-accident wages & overtime. Also the question of pension must be considered.—STEVENS v. BIRMINGHAM CORPN. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 311, C. A.

3274a. — —.]—A workman, whose left eye was defective, suffered, in 1919, an injury to his right eye while working as a miner, for which compensation was received until the beginning of 1924, when he was given work underground. This was found to be unsuitable, & he was given surface work on the screens, & was paid compensation for partial incapacity. He left this work at the commencement of the stoppage due to a dispute in the coal trade in 1926, but was not re-employed at the conclusion of the stoppage, in Dec. 1926. In Feb. 1927, the workman applied to have his compensation increased, on the ground that the work on which he had been employed was a special kind of surface work found for him by his employers. The county ct. judge held resps. were not liable to pay compensation as claimed on the grounds set out in their particulars. The particulars referred to in resps. answer contained the allegation that the workman was not incapacitated from doing ordinary surface work:—Held: the award must be taken to mean that the judge had found as a fact that the workman was capable of doing ordinary surface work, & there was evidence to support such a finding.—CUSHION v. TREDEGAR IRON & COAL CO., LTD. (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 454, C. A.

3275a. — —.]—A miner, in 1916, lost his right eye by accident, & received compensation. He subsequently returned to work at the face, but in June, 1924, had another accident through which his left eye was injured, & he was paid compensation. In Mar. 1925, he returned to light work, receiving also a weekly sum by way of compensation. On July 1, 1925, the employers applied for a review & termination of the weekly payments. The workman stated in evidence that he was afraid to work below ground again, & the county ct. judge held work at the coal face was not suitable, & the man's refusal to do it was reasonable:—Held: the case must go back for the judge to decide whether the unsuitability of the work resulted from the first accident or the second, or both, & to assess the compensation payable only in regard to incapacity from the second accident.—ASTON COAL CO., LTD. v. STANCIL (1926), 20 B. W. C. C. 198, C. A.

3283a. Accident to Infant Inability to do work of employer on becoming adult.—An infant employed by a railway co. lost his left foot in an accident while at work. He was fitted with an artificial foot & given suitable employment until he came of age. His employers, being then unable to find him work in an adult grade, dismissed him. The workman claimed compensation as a totally incapacitated adult worker, but the employers refused to pay except on the basis of partial incapacity. The county ct. judge held that the workman was not entitled to be treated as totally incapacitated either as an "odd lot" or under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (1). The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—BARNES v. LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 205, C. A.

3289a. Unable to find former employment.]

—A miner who had lost the sight of his right eye in an accident recovered sufficiently to be fit to resume his old work. Although he had taken all reasonable steps to obtain work as a miner or quarryman, he failed to obtain any. The sheriff-substitute found that the workman's failure to obtain employment was mainly a consequence of the injury & treated his incapacity as total under sect. 9 (1). On appeal to the First Division of the Ct. of Session the decision of the sheriff-substitute was reversed on the ground that sect. 9 (1) did not apply to a case where the workman had recovered sufficiently to be fit for his former employment. The workman appealed to the House of Lords:—Held: the words "employment of a certain kind," in sect. 9 (1) are applicable although the employment which the workman is fit for & is attempting to obtain is his pre-accident employment.—TANNOCH v. BROWNIESIDE COAL CO., [1929] A. C. 642; 98 L. J. P. C. 156; 141 L. T. 599; 45 T. L. R. 599; 73 Sol. Jo. 499; 22 B. W. C. C. 383, H. L.

3290a. —[—] In May, 1923, a miner suffered a permanent injury by accident to his left foot & was paid compensation. In May, 1924, he was given by his employers light employment as a signaller, together with compensation for partial incapacity, & he continued to do the work satisfactorily until the general stoppage in 1926. His services were then dispensed with, & he was unable to obtain employment elsewhere. At the hearing it was proved that the workman could not do work which involved activity of the feet. The sheriff-substitute found that the workman was fit only for a special & limited class of work which he would have no chance of obtaining in the competitive labour market, & awarded him compensation for total incapacity. On appeal this decision was affirmed by the First Division of the Ct. of Session. The employers again appealed:—Held: there was ample evidence to support the finding of the arbitrator.—WEMYSS COAL CO., LTD. v. WALKER (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 366, H. L.

3295a. —[—] In 1911, a workman lost his right arm as a result of an accident. From 1913 to 1922 his employers engaged him on light work. In 1922 it was agreed that he should in the future be paid 7s. 6d. a week compensation in respect of the estimated difference between what he could earn at light work & what he would have been earning if he had not been injured. After 1924 he was given the work of record-keeping. On

Dec. 24, 1927, he was discharged, the works being closed on account of trade difficulties. On Jan. 9, 1928, after sixteen days, he was re-engaged on light work on the terms of the 1922 agreement. The workman received unemployment benefit for the period he was unemployed & also the weekly compensation of 7s. 6d., & did not try to obtain other employment. On May 13, 1928, he filed an application for arbitration, claiming an increase of compensation during the period he was unemployed on the basis of total incapacity. It was agreed that the amount recoverable in these proceedings, if successful, was 55s., being two sums of 35s. a week less the two payments of 7s. 6d. The arbitration was begun in Aug. 1928, & continued in Oct. In his evidence the workman said that he was "a storekeeper plus messenger," & that he could act as a watchman-gatekeeper. At the hearing in Oct. the county ct. judge intimated that he was prepared to accept the argument put forward on behalf of the workman that he was an "odd lot," but again adjourned the case to Feb. 1929, for further consideration. In Feb., after hearing further argument, the county ct. judge found that the workman was partially incapacitated, that there were classes of employment in which he could earn his pre-accident wages, & that 7s. 6d. was sufficient compensation during the two weeks in question. The workman appealed:—Held: the findings of the county ct. judge amounted to a finding of fact that the workman was not an "odd lot," & there was evidence to support such a finding & no misdirection.—EVANS v. EBBW VALE STEEL, IRON & COAL CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 274, C. A.

3315a. —[—] A workman was employed as a seaman on a fishing-boat at £3 a week. On Feb. 11, 1926, his finger was cut by a rope, & he was paid compensation until July 2, when he was certified fit for light work. He then obtained a situation on a trawler, until Sept., payment being on a profit-sharing basis, & his share of the profits being £21. He next worked on another trawler until Feb. 1927, payment being on the same basis, but there were no profits. On Nov. 5, 1926, he filed a request for arbn. claiming half the difference between his pre-accident wages & what he was able to earn on the trawlers on the profit-sharing basis. The county ct. judge assessed his weekly earning capacity since July 2, 1926, at £2 5s., & awarded him 7s. 6d. a week compensation:—Held: (1) there was no evidence that the workman suffered any loss of earnings by reason of his injury, & no evidence to support the award; (2) the workman had not discharged the onus of showing a reasonable probability that incapacity would ensue in the future, & was not entitled to a declaration of liability.

3359c. How calculated.—Period of calculation — Posthumous child.]—A workman having been killed by accident arising out of his employment, his widow claimed compensation for herself & her posthumous child born some ten weeks after the workman's death. The employers paid a sum of money into ct. in respect of the child's allowance based on 15 per cent. of £2 a week for 780 weeks or fifteen years:—Held: the child was entitled to a sum calculated by taking 15 per cent. of £2 a week over a period from the death of the workman to the date when the child in fact would attain the age of fifteen, which, in this case, was some ten weeks more than fifteen years.—ATHEY v. 3359d. ———. Amount of lump sum.]—A workman died as the result of an accident, having previously received from his employers £65 5s. 5d. in weekly payments as compensation. On his death his employers paid into ct. £534 14s. 7d., made up of £234 14s. i.e., £300 less £65 5s. 5d., for the lump sum payable to the widow, & £300 for children's allowance. The total amount to which the children would have been entitled, if not limited in any way, was calculated to be £617 14s. The county ct. judge decided that the amount paid in was reasonable &, at the request of the widow, made an order for payment out of part of the amount:—Held: (1) the amount paid into ct. by the employers was insufficient, & the dependants were entitled to the full £600, since if the lump sum calculated under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 8 (2), was reduced below £300, then, if the figures warranted it, the children's allowance under sect. 8 (3) might exceed £300, provided that the lump sum & the children's allowance together did not exceed £600; (2) the widow was not deprived of her right of appeal by having accepted payment of part of the amount paid in, because, although she might have approbated the order on her own behalf, she had reprobated it in the interests of her children. (3) Semble: a request for arbn., & not an appeal, was the proper procedure for the widow. MALCOLM v. BARBER, WALKER & CO., LTD. (1927), 137 L. T. 470; 20 B. W. C. C. 516, C. A.

3359c. — One child over fifteen partially dependent.]—A workman died as a result of an accident leaving a widow & two children under fifteen all wholly dependent, & also one daughter over fifteen partially dependent. The county ct. judge held the presence of the daughter over fifteen, & only partially dependent, required him to calculate the children's allowance on the basis of partial dependency:—Held: the children's allowance must be calculated on the basis of their being wholly dependent, & the existence of another member of the family over fifteen, who happened to be only partially dependent, did not affect the calculation.—GREEN v. of the household of which he was a member. The magistrate found that the cost of the keep of deceased came to more than the amount which he paid into the family & that appls. were not dependent on him:—Held: the magistrate was entitled to find that appls. were not dependent on deceased.—EDMONSTONE v. Under this agreement he agreed to obey the orders of the society & perform all his duties in accordance with official instructions. He was to be paid a weekly salary calculated on a percentage basis. The workman suffered an accident in the course of his employment as a fitter. The county ct. judge, in order to compute his average weekly earnings, added together the weekly payments received from both sources. The employers appealed on the ground that the relationship between the society & the workman was that of principal & agent, & not master & servant, & that his payments under the agreement should not be taken into account:—Held: the judge had rightly construed the agreement as establishing the relationship of master & servant between the society & the workman.—ROBERTS v. He accordingly ceased to work till Dec. 8, when he was re-employed by resps. On Jan. 11, 1927, he met with an accident causing total incapacity. On an application for compensation, the county ct. judge held the interruption was a normal incident & there was no break in the employment, & he awarded compensation on the basis of applt.'s earnings for the twelve months prior to the accident:—Held: the interval was not one of the incidents of a discontinuous employment, & there was a break in the employment, & the case must go back to the judge to assess compensation on that basis.—GARDNER v. Within twenty-four hours of putting to sea, the workman suffered an accident. In the course of subsequent proceedings regarding the payment of compensation, an issue was raised between the parties as to whether the weekly payment should be calculated on the earnings of a boatswain or a deck-hand. The county ct. judge held that at the time of the accident the workman was employed in the grade of a boatswain, & awarded compensation on that basis. The employers appealed:—Held: the judge had rightly directed himself as to the grade of the workman at the date of the

He was paid full compensation until May 5, 1927, when the employers gave notice of their intention to reduce the weekly compensation to 10s., & did in fact so reduce it. The workman applied for 30s. to be continued. The employers in their answer submitted to an award of 10s. a week to continue. The county ct. judge found that the man was able to do his full work on May 5, 1927, but ordered that compensation should be paid at 30s. up to July 4, 1927, & then terminate altogether :—Held : the award was inconsequent, & the case must be sent back to the judge for a rehearing.—*SHEAY v. The county ct. judge held they were not entitled to terminate the weekly payments, as the workman was still partially incapacitated, but such payments should cease, & no such payments should be made so long as they employed & continued to employ the workman at a wage equivalent to his pre-accident wages, with liberty to either party to apply. He also ordered the employers to pay the costs :—Held : (1) the order was a right order, as liberty to apply carried out the effect of a declaration of liability ; (2) the employers having failed to establish their right to termination of the weekly payments, the judge rightly exercised his discretion in ordering that the employers should pay the costs.—*SIDNEY LEE (EXETER), LTD. v. able under the registered agreement. The workman claimed that he had not been paid his full old rate of wages under the second agreement & was entitled to have them made up to the old rate, & further, that by reason of this agreement the employers had no power to review the payments payable under the registered agreement. The county ct. judge held the employers' application to review was in breach of the agreement in the correspondence, & dismissed the application:—Held: the employers had expressly reserved their rights under the registered agreement to have the weekly payment reviewed. The workman's attempt at work having been successful, the employers' application to review was a proper one, & the judge was wrong in dismissing it. 3571a. Consideration for agreement—Sufficiency.]

—An underground colliery workman left his employment in Mar. 1921, on account of illness. On July 18, 1922, he was certified to be suffering from nystagmus, the disablement, according to the certificate, being deemed to commence on that day. The workman applied for compensation, & the employers paid full compensation for total incapacity for four years, & then ceased payment. In proceedings for an award, instituted by the workman, the case was treated by both parties on the basis of an agreement to pay compensation as for total incapacity having been made, but the county ct. judge held there had been no consideration on the part of the workman for the agreement, & as the workman was not entitled to any compensation since he had not been employed by resps. during twelve months prior to the date of the certificate, the agreement was outside Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), & could not give jurisdiction within the Act:—Held: there had been good consideration, inasmuch as the workman had forborne to take steps, either by applying to the certifying surgeon, or by appeal to the medical referee, to get the date of the certificate of disablement altered, & the agreement was binding upon resps., & the workman was entitled to an award.—*REES v. Validity.]—A workman was injured by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. Resps.' doctor gave his certificate that the man had partially recovered, & resps. served notice on the workman in pursuance of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 14, that they would cease payment of compensation within ten days. No counter-certificate by the workman's doctor was served in pursuance of the sect., but the workman filed a request for arbn. The county ct. judge awarded 8s. a week on the basis of partial incapacity from the date of the hearing in the county ct., & not from the date of termination of the weekly payment, on the ground that the workman had not complied with sect. 14, & was not entitled to compensation from that date:—Held: the notice was bad, in that it purported to end compensation when the workman was certified to be partially recovered only, & the compensation of 8s. a week for partial incapacity was payable from the date the employers ceased payment of compensation.—*HOWARTH v. 3686 i. Limit of preferential payment—Under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, s. 5 (3)—Not where liability accrued prior to liquidation.]—Held: the workman was entitled to the whole of the amount due to him for compensation as a preferential debt, without any limitation to £100 as mentioned in s. 5, sub-s. 3, Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the liability for such compensation having accrued before the receivers were appointed or took over possession of the assets of the co., & whether or not the accident occurred before Jan. 1, 1924 (i.e. the date on which the Workmen's Compensation Act (N. The workman filed a request for arbn. claiming (inter alia) a declaration of liability, alleging that he was still incapacitated. Resps. offered to accept an award of a declaration of liability, & before the hearing offered the sum by which the weekly payments fell short of the proper amount that was due in respect of the two days. The county ct. judge was satisfied the workman had recovered & was able to do his work, & held, payment for the two days having been offered, there was no further liability on resps., & made the declaration of liability offered:—Held: the notice was good, & was not invalidated because the payments were not made for the full period of ten days from the date thereof.—COOPER v. After the employers had commenced proceedings for a review, the workman admitted that the incapacity had ceased on Sept. 3, but claimed compensation up to the date of the award:—Held: the county ct. judge had no jurisdiction under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 14, to award any payment after the incapacity had ceased, & he ought to make a retrospective award terminating the weekly payments as from the date of recovery.—OCEAN COAL CO. v. 3701b. ———.]—A workman was injured by an accident & was paid compensation by his employers for total incapacity. On receipt of their doctor's report that the workman was fit for light work, the employers made two offers of light work to the workman at the same rate of wages as before his accident. After the second refusal, the employers ceased to pay compensation. The county ct. judge held the workman was unreasonable in refusing the offers of light work & applying Ocean Coal Co. v. Davies, No. 3701, ante, the employers were entitled to stop payment of compensation when they did:—Held: the evidence supported the findings, & the judge had correctly applied Ocean Coal Co. v. Davies, No. 3701, ante.—LOWE v. ESSEX COUNTY COUNCIL (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 452, C. A.

3701c. Failure by workman to adopt procedure—Application for review—Right to amend.]—Employers, using the machinery provided by Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12, stopped weekly payments to a workman on their doctor's certificate. The workman did not avail himself of sect. 12, but began fresh proceedings for an arbn. by way of review, asking for an order that the weekly payments should be continued. At the arbn. the employers, at the close of the workman's case, objected to the method adopted by the workman & submitted that there was no case to answer. The workman applied for leave to amend, to turn the proceedings into an original appln. under sect. 21 of the Act, but the county ct. judge refused to allow this, & upheld the employers' objection, making an award in favour of the employers. The workman appealed: Held: the county ct. judge should have allowed the amendment, so that the case could have been considered on its merits.—ROBINSON v. VICKERS-ARMSTRONG, LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 171, C. A.

3702a. ———.]—A workman met with an accident, which he alleged caused an inguinal swelling. He was paid full compensation until Sept. 20, 1926, when the payments were reduced. The workman filed an application claiming compensation at the old rate, & the employers filed a counter-application for termination of compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman had entirely recovered on Sept. 20, 1926, & that the swelling from which he suffered at the date of the trial was not a result of the accident, & made an award for the employers on both applications:—Held: the employers, by paying compensation, were not estopped from saying that the injury was not caused by the accident, & there was evidence to support the judge's findings, & no misdirection.—THORPE v. SADLER (A. L.) & SON, SADLER (A. L.) & SON v. THORPE (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 488, C. A.

3702b. ——.]—On May 15, 1927, a trimmer met with an accident on board a liner causing hernia. He received compensation until Nov. 12. On receipt of a medical report that he was fit to resume work, his employers gave notice on Nov. 2, that the weekly payments would be terminated. The workman did not obtain a counter-certificate, but, on Nov. 24, his solrs. wrote suggesting that he had not been examined for hernia, that an operation would be necessary, & that the notice of Nov. 2 should be cancelled. The employers thereupon requested the workman to present himself for further examinations, & as a result of these examinations again repudiated liability to pay compensation. The county ct. judge found that there was no incapacity on Jan. 7, 1928, but he made an award of compensation for eight weeks from Nov. 12, 1927, on the ground that compensation was not properly terminated on that date, in that the employers by subjecting the workman to further examinations had shown that they did not rely on their first medical report. He estimated the period during which the employers were satisfying themselves after Nov. 12 as to the workman's condition at eight weeks:—Held: the workman had not discharged the onus of proving incapacity after Nov. 12, 1927. The judge, in awarding compensation to the workman, in fact, for the trouble he had been put to by the employers after notice of termination had been given, had misdirected himself.—*DODD v. Ultimately a doctor reported that pltf. had recovered, & defts. stopped the payments & applied for a review thereof, & paid into ct., with a denial of liability, the amount of the weekly payments up to that date. While the county ct. proceedings were still pending, pltf. brought an action, alleging that he had not recovered from his injury, & claiming (1) a declaration that under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12, defts. had committed a breach of their duty by stopping the payments otherwise than in pursuance of an agreement or arbn., & (2) an injunction restraining a continuance of the breach:—Held: under sect. 21 the only tribunal to determine the question of incapacity was the county ct., & as that question had not yet been determined by that tribunal, pltf. could not show that his incapacity was continuing since the date when defts. stopped the weekly payments, & the action failed.—*CATTON v. 3702d. Power to make interim award—Payment into court.]—A workman suffered injuries through an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, & his employers paid him weekly compensation until a certain date. They then terminated the payment, on the ground that his incapacity had ceased, but there was no award or recorded agreement. The workman had not returned to work, & his employers had not served on him a notice under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12 (3). On the termination of the payments the workman, on the ground that his incapacity was still continuing, applied for an award of weekly compensation & for an interim award of weekly compensation until the question of the liability of his employers should be decided. The arbitrator made an interim award of a weekly payment, & authorised the employers to pay the money into ct. instead of paying it to the workman:—Held: under sect. 12 the workman was entitled to an interim award, & the arbitrator had no power to authorise the employers to pay the money due thereunder into ct. instead of paying it to the workman.—*ANCHOR DONALDSON, LTD. v. sc. "Weekly payment"—What is.—In order to make a payment a "weekly payment under the principal Act" within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 14, it must be shown (a) that there was an admission, express or implied, of liability under the Act, & (b) that the payment was made in respect of that admission.

Where employers paid a sum of money to a workman, who signed a receipt bearing that the payment was made without an admission of liability on their part:—Held: as it did not appear that the payment complied with the above requirements, sect. 14 did not apply.—*LAFFERTY v. 3710a. —.]—A miner was certified on Nov. 22, 1919, as suffering from nystagmus & received compensation. After some years the employers requested a review, on which the county ct. judge terminated the weekly payments as from Aug. 21, 1925, the date of his award, on the ground that the workman had recovered from his disablement & was able to do his ordinary work as a miner. There was no appeal by the workman from this award. Three years later, on June 12, 1928, the workman obtained from a certifying surgeon a certificate to the effect that he was suffering from nystagmus, & thereby disabled from earning full wages at his old employment. The date of the commencement of disablement not appearing on this certificate, the workman went to the medical referee, who issued a certificate confirming the certificate of the certifying surgeon, & fixing Nov. 22, 1919, as the date of the commencement of disablement. The medical referee also certified that the workman was only fit for surface work. On that the workman commenced arbn. proceedings, claiming compensation for partial incapacity as from 1925 & a declaration of liability. The employers contended that the matter was res judicata, & this contention was accepted by the county ct. judge. The workman appealed:—Held: the award of Aug. 21, 1925, was final between the parties & could not be affected by the certificate of the medical referee. —*WILLIAMS v. CRAWSHAY BROS. 3734a. Workman generally more fit for work.—A colliery repairer had a series of hernia & operations for hernia commencing in 1922. In 1927, on the workman's appln. for compensation, the county ct. judge found as a fact that he was not fit to do the work of repairer, & awarded compensation. In 1928, the employers applied to terminate the weekly payment, & the matter was referred by the judge to the medical referee, who reported that the workman was fit for his former work as a repairer. The judge said that, on this occasion, he accepted the evidence of the employers' doctors which he had rejected at the former hearing & made an award terminating the weekly payments. The workman appealed on the ground that the judge had merely reversed his first decision without any change of circumstances. In view of this argument, the judge was written to & asked what change of circumstances he found which justified him in coming to his decision in 1928. In reply the judge said he had found that the workman was generally more fit for work:—Held: there was evidence that the man was fitter generally, & there had been, therefore, such a change of circumstances as justified the later award.—*PARTRIDGE, JONES & PATON JOHN, LTD. v. Apart from that sect. the principle does not apply to cases under the Act, the provisions of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), Sched. I. (3), with regard to partial incapacity, having been repealed by Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42).—CALOW v. SHELTON IRON, STEEL & COAL CO., LTD. (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 125, C. A.

3737b. —.]—General fall in wages.—A collier being partially incapacitated by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, entered into an agreement with his employers by which, after reciting that the workman's average weekly earnings for twelve months before the accident were £3 19s. 4d., it was agreed that the employers should find him suitable employment & pay him the wages which he could earn therein &, in addition to those wages in each week, half the difference between his said average weekly earnings & the wages he could earn at the said employment by working while the pit was at work, but not in any case exceeding £1. After weekly payments under the agreement had been made for some years, the rate of wages having fallen, the employers applied to have the payments reviewed under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), Sched. I., s. 16:—Held: a change in the rate of wages, being one of the events contemplated & provided for by the agreement, was not such a change in the circumstances as entitled either party to have the weekly payments reviewed.—BARBER, WALKER & CO. v. FLINT, [1929] 1 K. B. 256; 98 L. J. K. B. 83; 140 L. T. 154; 21 B. W. C. C. 428, C. A.

3745a. —.]—A workman, who was paid compensation for the loss of three fingers, & who had returned to light work, was discharged owing to the closing down of his employers' works. He registered with the Labour Exchange & for some months received unemployment benefit, together with a proportionate amount of compensation from his late employers. When the unemployment benefit ceased he claimed full compensation, proving that he had made genuine attempts to obtain work but had failed owing to his injury. The county ct. judge awarded a sum, less than the full compensation, to date from the application for review & not from the cessation of the unemployment benefit:—Held: the workman was entitled to compensation on the basis of total incapacity as from the date when the unemployment benefit ceased.—KING v. 3766a. Particulars—Contents of.—Upon an application by an employer to review a weekly payment & diminish it, or terminate or diminish it, the appropriate form is Form 5, under which certain particulars are to be given. These do not include particulars of the extent to which diminution is asked for, but the county ct. judge has a discretion to order or to refuse such further particulars under r. 29 (2). His decision on the point is not a decision on a question of law, & there is no appeal therefrom. Semble: such particulars ought to be sparingly ordered, & not with the object of compelling the county ct. judge to give costs to one side or the other, & there is much greater reason for asking for particulars of the extent of diminution of a weekly payment where termination is not asked for, than where the employer is asking for termination or diminution.—VICKERS, LTD. v. 3801a. — Scheme inapplicable where employment occasional—What is occasional work.—By Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, clause 2, the scheme is made to apply to all workmen employed in the grinding of metal by mechanical power or in glazing, when such glazing is carried on in the same room as the grinding, but by proviso (a) thereof the scheme is not to apply, if such employment is occasional only, & for not more than eight hours in any week. A workman, employed by knife-blade manufacturers, superintended the girls in the glazing shop, & also worked on the processes of glazing known as rebufing & whitening.

In the course of his work he used an abrasive wheel in the whitening shop, whitening involving the raising of silica dust. He became totally disabled from silicosis & was certified accordingly. The county ct. judge found that the work done by the workman in rebufing & whitening was "occasional only & for not more than eight hours in any week," & was, therefore, within the above proviso, & that he was thereby precluded from the benefit of the scheme. The workman appealed:—Held: for the employment to fall within the proviso it must be both "occasional only" & "for not more than eight hours in any week." In this case the workman was called on, under his ordinary employment, to do the work, & therefore, such work was not "occasional only."—MAKIN v. NERDHAM, VEALL & TYZACK, LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. county ct. judge held the two certificates being inconsistent, the certificate of the medical referee must prevail to the effect that the workman was not disabled after Jan. 30, 1928:—Held: there was no vital inconsistency between the two certificates, bearing in mind the intermittent character of dermatitis, & the certificate of Mar. 10 was consistent with dermatitis having broken out again.—*MACY v. 3819a. Certificate incomplete—Death of certifying surgeon—Subsequent certificate by successor—Validity.—On July 12, 1926, eighteen months after the workman had left his employment, Dr. S., the certifying surgeon of the district, certified that the workman was suffering from lead poisoning. The certificate did not comply with the regulations as no date of disablement was filled in, nor were the words "I certify that the disablement commenced on the day of " struck out. Before the workman could see Dr. S. to have the omission put right the doctor died. After Dr. F. had been appointed in his place the workman, on Aug. 12, 1926, obtained a certificate from him in which the date of disablement was filled in as Nov. 23, 1924. In answer to the workmen's request for arbn., based on Dr. F.'s certificate, the employers denied liability to pay compensation on the ground that, as Dr. S.'s certificate did not specify the date of disablement, such date was deemed to be the date of the certificate, & was final & conclusive, & Dr. F.'s certificate was accordingly invalid, & as the workman had not been in their employment for more than twelve months prior to that date of disablement, he could not recover compensation. The county ct. judge upheld that contention:—Held: the first certificate was incomplete in that it had not dealt with the date of disablement in either manner provided by the regulations & was invalid, & the workman, not being able by reason of the death of Dr. S. to have the matter put in order, was entitled to rely on the second certificate. *POWELL v. 3821a. ———.—A certificate was given by the certifying surgeon that a workman was suffering from lead poisoning. A leading symptom of the disease was stated on the form to be dupuytren's contraction. Full compensation was paid until an application by the employers to review the weekly payments. The workman was still incapacitated by dupuytren's contraction. The county ct. judge refused to treat the certificate as conclusive as to dupuytren's contraction being a symptom of lead poisoning, &, on contradictory medical evidence given at the hearing, & also on knowledge he had acquired some years before while sitting on a commission to consider industrial diseases, including dupuytren's contraction, held the symptoms, though still the same as those set out in the certificate, were not due to the certified disease, & reduced the compensation to 1d. a week. The case involved a point of law, &, early in the hearing, counsel called attention to that fact, but the judge omitted to take any notes of the proceedings:—Held: (1) the certificate that the symptoms were due to the certified disease was conclusive, & evidence to the contrary was inadmissible, & there was no evidence of any new factor or new disease to support an award in reduction of compensation. (2) Observations on the judge's duty to take a note. CAULDON POTTERIES, LTD. v. JOHNSON (1926), 20 B. W. C. C. 42, C. A.

3821b. As to cause of death or incapacity.—A workman, employed as a painter, was from July to Sept. 1927, laid up with an ulcer on his ankle & with heart trouble. From Oct. 19 onwards he became unfit for further work with loss of power in his left arm & leg, he became mentally incapable, his memory failed, & his heart got worse. On Nov. 15 he was admitted to hospital, where the medical superintendent found that he had long-standing disease of the heart caused by kidney trouble. On Nov. 23, the certifying surgeon visited the hospital, & on Nov. 28 certified that the workman was suffering from lead poisoning or its sequelae, & had been disabled as from Oct. 19. The medical superintendent was ignorant both of the visit & of the certificate of the certifying surgeon, when the workman died on Dec. 23, certified that the cause of death was cerebral haemorrhage caused by valvular disease of the heart. The county ct. judge held he was not bound to find that death was due to the disease certified by the certifying surgeon, & refused to make an award in favour of the dependants, on the ground that they had not discharged the onus of proving that lead poisoning either caused, contributed to, or accelerated death:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding, & no misdirection.—YOUNG v. KEEBLE, LTD. (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 294, C. A.

3821c. ———.—An odd job man in spinning mills was certified as suffering from epitheliomatous ulceration of the skin due to mineral oil. He died five months later. An appeal by the employers against the certificate was dismissed by the medical referee. In an arbn. the arbitrator, after a proof, held that the disablement had commenced on a date earlier than that certified by the certifying surgeon, & more than twelve months before the workman entered his new employment & refused compensation:—Held: the date of disablement stated in the certificate of the certifying surgeon was conclusive.—*TENNENT v. 3860a. Effect of agreement for compensation—Facts as to agreement not presented in county court.—On an application for review & redemption of weekly payments a workman alleged that he had negotiated with persons representing a new co. which had taken over the business of his employers, & the new co. had agreed to pay him £650 in full settlement of his claims. The county ct. judge had previously decided in a similar case that the workman could not rely upon such an agreement with the new co., as such agreement was only with a third party, & not with his employers. The parties treated the case as governed by that decision, & the question of the agreement was not gone into at the hearing. The application was then proceeded with as an application for review & the judge held the workman had recovered, & by his award stopped further weekly payments. The workman appealed, on the ground that the judge could not terminate the payments in view of the agreement:—Held: (1) the ct. could not entertain an appeal as to the effect of the agreement, as the facts as to that agreement had not been presented in the county ct., & there were no materials before the ct. on which they could come to a decision; (2) the question whether the workman had recovered was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding, & there was no misdirection.—EAST KENT COLLIERY Co. v. 3901a. ———.]—A workman, who had suffered an injury to his knee, was paid compensation by his employers for a time. He underwent a successful operation & his compensation was stopped. He later suffered another injury to the same knee, & brought proceedings for further compensation. After hearing evidence, the county ct. judge came to the conclusion that he was not satisfied as to any further injury after the cessation of compensation. The county ct. judge then considered the question of a declaration of liability &, while doing so, asked a medical man, who happened to be present in ct., whether there was any probability of further injury to the workman. The opinion of the medical man was not given as evidence on oath nor was he called by consent of the parties. The county ct. judge then made an award to the effect that the workman had recovered from his injury on the date when compensation was stopped, but granted a declaration of liability by consent. The workman appealed:—Held: although the procedure followed with regard to the doctor was undesirable & irregular, it had not been detrimental to the workman, because the county ct. judge had already made up his mind on the main question before him. There was ample evidence to support his finding on the question.—RANSOM v. FULHAM FOOTBALL & ATHLETIC CO., LTD. (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 375, C. A.

3904a. ———.]—A workman, whose compensation had been stopped, claimed a continuance of compensation on the basis of total incapacity, & it was argued on his behalf that he was entitled to be paid on this basis under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4). The county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman was partially incapacitated as a result of the accident but had, since the payment ceased, been doing work which he did before the accident. He held that sect. 9 (4) did not apply, but gave no reasons for so holding beyond stating that the workman refused work offered him on the ground that he could not do it when in fact he could have done it. He, therefore, refused to find total incapacity but gave a declaration of liability. On the appeal by the workman it was argued that, the county ct. judge having found partial incapacity, the case should be remitted to him to assess the amount of such incapacity:—Held: although the finding of the county ct. judge on the point was not too clear, the case had been argued & dealt with under sect. 9 (4) alone. The issue as to partial incapacity, not having been raised on the claim, in the ct. below, or in the notice of appeal, could not be taken in the Ct. of Appeal.—PLUMB v. RALEIGH CYCLE CO. (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 378, C. A.

3927a. Date of termination of incapacity.]—A fireman had to have his right thumb amputated as the result of an accident in the stokehold of a ship. On Nov. 5, 1928, his employers obtained a certificate to the effect that he was fit to return to his work, & thereupon gave notice to terminate the weekly payments on Nov. 15. The weekly payments were stopped on that day although a certificate had been furnished by the workman which stated that he was not fit to resume his old occupation, but also stated that there was plenty of other work he could do. The workman applied for an arbn. The arbn. took place on Jan. 29, & Feb. 5, 1929. On Mar. 1, the county ct. judge made his award in which he found as a fact that the workman was able to earn his pre-accident wages, & that up to the date of the hearing there was a dispute whether he had recovered. He did not give a finding as to the date on which the workman had become able to earn his pre-accident wages, but ordered the employers to continue to pay the full amount of weekly payments as from Nov. 15, 1928, to Feb. 5, 1929. The employers appealed:—Held: the judge should have found in fact the date when incapacity ceased. If by fixing Feb. 5, 1929, as the date down to which compensation must be paid, he intended to hold that incapacity continued to that date, there was no evidence to support such a finding. *MOCKBILL v. Whether workman within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4).]—An employer having reduced a workman's compensation to 12s. 3d. a week, the workman applied for an arbn. on the ground that, although he was only partially incapacitated, he was unable to earn anything. At the hearing the workman said that it was impossible to say what he could earn if he could get light work. On that evidence it was submitted on his behalf that he was brought within sect. 9 (4). The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the employer that the workman was only entitled to 12s. 3d. a week as from the date of reduction. An appln. was subsequently made to the county ct. judge on behalf of the workman for an amendment of his note, or for a new trial, on the ground that sect. 9 (4) had not been properly considered at the hearing. The county ct. judge refused to grant a new trial, but said that he had not considered sect. 9 (4) until the end of the case. The workman appealed from the award & from the refusal to grant a new trial:—Held: the appln. was clearly made under sect. 9 (4), & the county ct. judge must be taken to have realised that fact in making the award which he did.—*STORER v. 3993a. —[—]—Denial of liability.]—A workman having been injured by accident, his employers applied for a reference to a medical referee under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 19, on the ground that there was a dispute as to whether he was fit for his employment & as to whether any incapacity from which he might be suffering was due to the accident. Four days later the workman filed an objection to the reference on the ground that, as the employers were refusing to admit that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment, the matter should be dealt with by arbn. & not by reference. On the same day he filed his appln. for arbn. The sheriff-clerk allowed the reference to the medical referee & his decision was not appealed from. The employers filed an answer to the workman's appln. for arbn., in which they objected to the arbn. proceedings on the ground that the matter had already been referred to a medical referee, & further alleged that the workman was not entitled to any compensation because the accident had not arisen out of & in the course of the employment. The medical referee reported that the workman was partially incapacitated, & two days later the parties arrived at an agreement for settlement. On argument as to the costs the sheriff-substitute held that the workman's appln. for arbn. was premature, unwarranted & unnecessary, & while awarding no costs on the reference to the medical referee, gave the costs of the alleged abortive arbn. proceedings to the employers. On appeal it was held by the Second Division of the Ct. of Session that the sheriff-substitute was wrong in depriving the workman of the costs of the arbn. proceedings on the ground stated by him, & remitted the question of costs to him for further argument. The employers appealed:—Held: the medical referee having no power to decide whether the accident arose out of or in the course of the employment, it was perfectly proper for the workman to take the earliest opportunity of getting that point determined by arbn., & was entitled to act as he had done.—BARR & HIGGINS, LTD. v. The county ct. judge reduced the weekly payment to 10s., & ordered the employers to pay the costs:—Held: on the correct reading of the letter stating the diminution claimed the employers were successful on the award given, & the order as to costs should be set aside, & by consent of the employers, each party was ordered to pay their own costs.—MIDDLETON ESTATE & COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. 4062 i. Jurisdiction to vary order as to costs—Judgment specifically dealing with costs.—An award was made by an arbitrator under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1916, in favour of a workman who was allowed a certain weekly payment & the costs of the arbitration. From this award the workman appealed, & that appeal was dismissed with costs. Subsequently an application was made on behalf of resp. employer for an order that the costs incurred by him in the appeal should be made costs in the arbitration:—Held: although the order asked for might have been made on the hearing of the appeal, the Ct. had now no jurisdiction to make it.—*LAURER v. 4137a. When right arises—Payment by guardians pending settlement of claim By arbitration or agreement.—In an action brought by debenture holders against a co. to realise their security receivers were appointed of the assets comprised in the debentures. At the date of their appointment there were a number of workmen in receipt of weekly payments from the co. as compensation for accidents suffered by them causing total or partial incapacity. These payments having ceased on the appointment of the receivers, the workmen were paid outdoor relief by the guardians. On an application by the guardians under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 41, for repayment of the money so expended by them:—Held: the words "pending the settlement of his claim" in sect. 41 did not refer to the settlement of the workman's claim by the payment of a lump sum, but to the settlement of compensation by an award or by agreement between the workman & the employer; therefore, as the claims of the workmen in the present case had long since been settled by the co. by the weekly sums, the guardians were not entitled to the repayment they claimed.—*Re LEWIS MERITHEER CONSOLIDATED COLLIERIES, LLOYDS BANK v. arising out of & in the course of his employment. On Feb. 4 his wife received from his employers £3 as compensation for two weeks, & on Feb. 13 she received 30s. as compensation for a further week. She had no authority from the workman to apply for or obtain compensation, & while he knew that she had received the payment of £3, he did not know that it had been paid as compensation. He knew, however, that the payment of 30s. made to his wife on Feb. 15 was a payment of compensation, & he allowed her to retain & use the money. The workman having subsequently brought an action against a third party to recover damages in respect of his injuries:—Held: he was barred from suing for damages, in respect that he had already recovered compensation within sect. 30 (1) of the 1925 Act.—*REID v. It was proved that no skill in chemistry was needed or used in the process of manufacture of the preparation. It was composed mainly of ox blood & marrow. Its predominant constituent as a health preserving & restoring commodity was hemoglobin, an article which was frequently recommended by medical men to supply deficiencies of red blood corpuscles in their patients, & was used especially in cases of anemia. It was advertised & sold to the public as a tonic food, & the labels on the bottles stated that medical men from every part of the world described it as a marvellous success in the immediate restoration of health.—Held: the method in which the preparation was manufactured, used, & sold rendered it liable to duty under the Act.—ADAM v. "drug," yet, even in such a case, an accused physician must nevertheless bring himself within the requirements of sect. 6 of the Act by showing that the "drug" was required for medicinal purposes or was prescribed for the medical treatment of a person under professional treatment by such physician. Where a diseased condition is proved, or the medical evidence is such that the physician be given the benefit of the doubt on the point, the question whether one of the other two conditions which permit of the furnishing of the "drug" existed is not to be decided by accepting the physician's own judgment & evidence as conclusive, but the ct. must determine each case on its own facts as disclosed by all the evidence.—*R. v. - 327a. ———.]—In considering whether it is in the national interest to grant ancillary rights to facilitate the proper & efficient working of minerals under Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20) the Railway & Canal Commission is entitled to take into account not only difficulties which physically obstruct the getting & carrying away of minerals, but also economic difficulties which militate against their effective marketing.

The expressions “carrying away” in sect. 1 (2), & “conveyance of minerals” in sect. 3 (2) (b), of the Act are to be construed not in a technical sense, but broadly as entitling the person to whom ancillary rights are granted under the Act to transport the minerals from the land where they have been won for sale elsewhere.

The Railway & Canal Commission made an order granting to a colliery co. the ancillary right under the Act to construct an aerial ropeway over the land of other persons from their colliery to Dover, a distance of seven miles, which would enable them to transport their minerals more cheaply & more conveniently than by other means:—Held: the Railway & Canal Commission had jurisdiction to make this order. —Re THIMANSTONE (KENT) COLLIERIES, LTD., [1928] 1 K. st. Chattels appurtenant to lease—What are.—Pltf. obtained an option on several mining leases. The ground had previously been worked by one H., who constructed a water system for washing the gravel, but after operating for a time abandoned the property, leaving certain chattels used in connection with the water system on the ground. Upon pltf. co. commencing operations it purchased the chattels from H.'s estate & used them until it in turn abandoned the properties. The owners took possession & refused to give up the chattels, claiming that the water licences authorising pltf. to use water were together with all works constructed appurtenant to the lease, & could not be separated from the property:—Held: defts. had not satisfied the burden of proof which was upon them to show that these chattels were in fact to be regarded as part of the works which are appurtenant to the leases. They were in fact parts of the mining machinery & appliances for recovering the gold, not of the water system, & were quite separate & distinct from those works, & not attached in any way to them or to the soil.—*ENNIS GOLD MINING CO. v. In sinking wells, which did not produce oil in commercial quantities, resps. found natural gas. They tapped the gas by pipes & for six years used it for their own purposes:—Held: applt. was not entitled to compensation for the gas so taken since (a) that right was not included in the right to royalties upon the oil won; & (b) the lease on its true construction was not merely a lease for the purpose of winning oil, & applt. having no property in the gas, resps. were entitled to reduce into possession & use it, provided they did so without injury to the leased property.—*U PO NAING v. The parties failed to agree as to the interpretation of the decision, & representative workmen then brought an action against representative employers for declarations, (a) that on the true construction of the decision the subsistence allowance ought to be calculated for each shift separately, & (b) as to the method of reckoning overtime for the purpose of calculating subsistence allowance. The judge in chambers, on the grounds that the wages agreement incorporating the conciliation agreement amounted to a submission to arbitration, & that the chairman's decisions were awards, made an order that the action be adjourned & that the awards be remitted to the chairman to deal with the two questions raised by the pleadings. The Ct. of Appeal set aside the order of the judge & granted the declarations claimed :—Held : the chairman had decided both questions in favour of plffs. & they were entitled to the declarations claimed.—CARDIFF COLLIERIES, LTD. v. - 445a. ———.]—Pltf. desired to be present at the first performance of a play at a theatre. He knew that, in consequence of his having made certain serious & unfounded charges against some members of the theatre staff, an application for a ticket in his own name would be refused. He therefore obtained a ticket through the agency of a friend, who bought the ticket at the theatre without disclosing that it was for pltf. By order of deft., the managing director of the theatre, pltf. was refused admission to the theatre on the night in question. Pltf. claimed damages from deft. for maliciously procuring the proprietors of the theatre to break a contract for the admission of pltf. to the theatre, alleged to have been made by them with pltf. by the sale of the ticket :—Held : the non-disclosure of the fact that the ticket was bought for pltf. prevented the sale of the ticket from constituting a contract as alleged, the identity of pltf. being in the circumstances a material element in the formation of the contract, & the action failed.—Said v. the western boundary of the land, or as to the amount of timber upon the land; but deft. did represent to pltf. that there were two springs upon the land, which was not the truth, as he knew, & that this misrepresentation was material, was relied upon by pltf., & constituted fraud & deceit which rendered deft. liable in damages. sg. Extent of onus of proof.—In order to succeed in an action to recover back money paid under a mistake of fact pltf. must prove, not only the mistake of fact which induced him to part with the money, but also that under the particular circumstances the law is able to impute to defl. the fiction of a promise to repay it. In 1924 & 1926 B. made further advances to Mrs. J., who was the owner in fee, upon the same securities. Mrs. J. died in 1926. In Jan. 1927 her trustees applied for & were granted a further advance on the same securities by B., whose solrs. had attended to the previous transactions. The deed secured an immediate advance, & it also secured all the previous existing securities, although the old securities had been kept on foot for the purpose of preserving priorities, & there was a new proviso for redemption. B.'s solrs. carried in a bill for taxation, the charges being according to the scale in Sched. I., Part I., of the General Order under Solrs.' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), for "investigating title & preparing & completing deed of security." The taxing master took the view that Sched. I. did not apply, & taxed the bill accordingly:—Held: there had been an "investigation of title" within Sched. I., & the matter must be referred back to the taxing master. —Re COWARD, CHANCE & Co., [1928] Ch. 379; 97 L. J. Ch. 234; 139 L. T. 113; 72 Sol. Jo. 225.

One of the conditions of the licence was that defts. should make good all damage done to premises X. by reason of the demolition operations. 33 xxv. ———.]—An action of damages was brought against a firm of ginger beer manufacturers on behalf of two children who had been injured through drinking a bottle of ginger beer, manufactured by defenders, which contained the decayed body of a mouse. The bottle was bought from a retailer, but the mouse, unknown to the manufacturers, was in the bottle when it left their factory. It was possible for mice to enter empty bottles at a factory, but the manufacturers' system of cleansing & inspecting the bottles before filling was the best system known in the trade. There was no affirmative proof of carelessness by any of the manufacturers' servants in carrying out the system:—Held: defenders fell to be absolved: on the ground that, as defenders neither knew that the contents of the bottle were dangerous, nor were dealers in articles per se dangerous, they owed no duty to the consumers, who had not contracted with them.—MULLEN v. 457a. — .]—A boy four years of age was killed by being crushed in the terminal wheel of a haulage system belonging to a colliery co. The system, which was used for depositing ashes on a bing situated in a field adjoining the colliery, consisted of an endless wire cable operated from time to time, as might be necessary, from the pithead by an electric motor, while at the other end of the system, which was not visible from the pithead, there was a heavy horizontal iron wheel round which the cable passed & returned. The field was surrounded by a hedge, which was quite inadequate to keep out the public, & it was, to the knowledge of the colliery co., used as a playground by young children. The colliery officials at times warned children out of the field, but their warnings were disregarded. The wheel was dangerous & attractive to children, & at the time of the accident it was insufficiently protected. The accident occurred owing to the wheel being set in motion by the colliery servants without taking any precaution to avoid accident to persons frequenting the field. The boy had been warned by his father not to go near the field or the wheel. In an action for damages by the father against the co.:—Held: the boy was a trespasser & went on the colliery premises at his own risk, & the co. owed him no duty to protect him from injury.—ADDIE R. & SONS (COLLIERIES) v. - 636a. ———.—Pltfs., stevedores at the port of Tampico, in Mexico, undertook to load a steamship of defts., the Essex Isles, with kerosine & gasoline. The cargo being of a dangerous character, pltfs., who had had much experience in handling such cargoes, stipulated that they should have entire control of the loading. While the loading was in progress an explosion occurred, which killed & injured many of the workmen engaged & destroyed the ship. There was no direct evidence as to the cause of the explosion. Pltfs. brought an action against defts. for damages, & it was found as a fact that the explosion was caused by a spark made by a beam which fell into the hold, the fall of the beam being caused by a blow from a tray which was being hoisted by pltfs.' men from the hold. Pltfs. contended that if the beam had been properly secured by bolts it would not have fallen, & they said that defts. had been negligent in leaving the beam unbolted. Defts. contended that the proximate cause of the explosion was the negligence of pltfs. in not hoisting the tray with proper care, & they counter-claimed for the loss of their ship :—Held : on the facts the ship-owners had not been guilty of negligence in leaving the beam unbolted, or that if they had been guilty of negligence in so leaving it pltf. stevedores knew, or ought to have known, that the beam was unbolted, & took the risk ; & the stevedores themselves had been negligent in failing to use proper care in hoisting the tray.—*COMPANIA MEXICANA DE PETROLEO EL AGUILA v. - 662a. ———.—A firm of stevedores employed by a shipowner & a portage co. employed by the consignee of the ship's cargo were engaged in unloading a ship. The cargo consisted of bags of maize, which were made up into loads by the stevedores & held together by rope slings provided by the stevedores, & the bags were then raised by the stevedores from the hold to a steelyard on the deck. The stevedores' duty ended with the deposit of the bags on the steelyard, from which they were transported to the dock by the portage co. by means of a dock crane. The stevedores gratuitously permitted the portage co. to use their slings, which were already round the bags, for the transport of the bags to the dock, & it was a matter of mutual convenience that the same slings should be used throughout. The stevedores employed a servant specially charged with the duty of inspecting the slings, & as the stevedores knew, the porters relied on the care of the stevedores for the safety of the slings. A sling broke while the bags were being transported from the steelyard to the dock, & the bags fell & killed a servant of the portage co. In an action of damages brought by his dependants against the stevedores :—Held : in the special circumstances of the case the firm of stevedores owed a duty to the porters to see that the sling was in a fit condition to take the weight of the load entrusted to it, & on the facts, the finding of the Lord Ordinary that they had failed to discharge that duty ought not to be disturbed.—*CHAPMAN OR OLIVER v. - 98a. Hotel kitchen.—The making or causing of such a noise on premises as materially interferes with the ordinary physical comfort of a neighbour constitutes an actionable nuisance; & it is no answer to say that the best known means have been taken to reduce or prevent the noise complained of or that the cause of the nuisance is the exercise of a business or trade in a reasonable & proper manner. In accordance with these principles an injunction was granted in an action by the occupier of a house abutting on a highway to restrain the owners of a neighbouring hotel from causing a nuisance to plff. by noise arising from the hotel kitchen.—VANDERPANT v. when he should receive an application for the acceptance of a complete specification to consider such injunction a "lawful ground of objection" to the acceptance of the complete specification within Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 7 (3), objecting to his duty prescribed by the Patent Acts being in any way interfered with by the ct., the ct. granted an injunction restraining the Comptroller-General from accepting the complete specification, as under sect. 9, on such acceptance, the matter would be thrown open to public inspection, the specification being concerned with some of the processes which, as between plff. co. & appct., appct. had been restrained from disclosing, & because the Comptroller-General might accept the complete specification on the footing that the injunction against appct. would not constitute a lawful ground of objection within sect. 7 (3). On appeal the S.-G. on behalf of the Comptroller-General undertook that the injunction granted against appct. would be properly considered in deciding whether the specification should be accepted as being something which might constitute "a lawful ground of objection" to such acceptance, & by consent the order against the Comptroller-General was discharged, notice of discontinuance to be served upon him. - 66a. ———— Survivor of Queen Victoria's descendants living.]—By his will dated June 14, 1921, & confirmed by a codicil of Feb. 2, 1926, testator, who died on Sept. 6, 1926, gave his property to his trustees upon certain trusts as to income & capital for his participating issue as therein defined, using a well known common form so as to tie it up in such a way that the capital was not to vest until the expiration of "the period ending at the expiration of twenty years from the day of the death of the last survivor of all the lineal descendants of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria who shall be living at the time of my death":—Held: though the existing lives selected were very numerous & it would be extremely difficult & expensive in the future to ascertain the date of the survivor's death, it could not be said to be so impracticable or beyond the scope of the ordinary legal testimony probably then available as to avoid the trust ab initio for uncertainty or perpetuity, & the trust was valid.—Re VILLAR, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. 652a. Commencement during twenty-one years from testator's death.—Testator, who died in 1893, gave his net residue, subject to certain life annuities which did not exhaust the income, in trust for a bachelor's children who should attain twenty-one with a gift over in default. On Mar. 11, 1896, the surplus income was ordered to be accumulated for twenty-one years from testator's death, i.e., until Nov. 6, 1914, or until the bachelor's previous death without leaving issue. During this twenty-one years' period the bachelor married & died leaving three children, two of whom were still living. Temporary orders for maintenance were made. On Nov. 12, 1914, it was declared that as from Nov. 6, 1914, the two children then living were entitled to maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43 (1) but that notwithstanding sect. 13 (2) any income not so applied passed as on an intestacy. On July 20, 1927, the elder child attained twenty-one, & her contingent moiety vested in possession. The question having arisen whether, having regard to Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 165, the order of Nov. 12, 1914, ought still to be acted on with regard to the younger child's contingent moiety:—Held: (1) the effect of sect. 165 was that the years accumulation, which commenced during the twenty-one years' period, were not to be reckoned in ascertaining that period, the income of the younger child's contingent moiety must in the first place be applied for her maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43 (1), & the balance could be validly accumulated under sect. 43 (2); (2) quite apart from sect. 165, the moment the elder child attained a vested interest as a member of the contingent class, there could be no question of intestacy as to any part of the capital or income.—*Re MABEL, WARD v. 24a. Overseer becoming transferred officer—Removal—Powers of rating authority.]—By Local Government Act, 1894 (c. 73), s. 5 (1), the power of appointing & revoking the appointment of an assistant overseer for any rural parish having a parish council is transferred to & vested in the parish council.—An assistant overseer so appointed by a parish council which was subsequently transformed into an urban district council, became a “transferred officer” under the Rating & Valuation Act, 1925 (c. 90). He was summarily dismissed by the urban district council as the rating authority:—Held: the council could dismiss the officer without notice or cause, & without affording him a hearing, provided that in so dismissing him they did not act dishonestly, corruptly, or in bad faith.—BROWN v. DAGENHAM URBAN COUNCIL, [1929] 1 K. B. 737; 98 L. J. K. B. 565; 140 L. T. 615; 93 J. P. 147; 45 T. L. R. 284; 73 Sol. Jo. 144; 27 L. G. R. 225.

In Feb. 1927 applts. made a written application to resp. for repayment, & in Aug. 1927 summonses were issued against resp. & against his employers to recover the amount due. The justices held, as more than six months had elapsed since the date when the last instalment of the loan was advanced, they had no jurisdiction by reason of Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 11, & they dismissed the summons:—Held:

—On July 20, 1920, A. signed an agreement at C. in the parish of F., by which she was to undergo a year's free training in nursing under the C. Nursing Assocn. & thereafter to remain in their employment for three years. She was sent to D. on the same day for her training & returned to C. on July 9, 1921. She remained at C. under her contract till July 2, 1924, on which day she was allowed to go on holiday, & had no intention of returning, as her three years expired during her holiday. She subsequently became chargeable as a pauper lunatic:—Held: since she had not resided physically in the parish of F. for three complete years when she left on July 2, 1924, & had then no animus revertendi, she had not acquired a settlement there, there being no evidence that she resided there between July 20, 1920, & July 9, 1921.—*FARNHAM UNION v. the principal moneys of his estate, at such times & in such proportions as she might see fit, whether by will or otherwise, for the benefit of his children or grandchildren; but in the event of E.'s marriage or death, the trustees of the will were to divide the estate ratably amongst testator's children share & share alike. E. executed a deed poll appointing a portion to a child, a portion to a grandchild, & a further portion to trustees in trust for the child :—Held : all these appointments were valid executions of the power.—*JOB v. Subsequently, a power was created whereby she was given a power to appoint a life interest in certain trust funds to her husband, & subsequently to the creation of such power, the testatrix made a codicil confirming her will in respect inter alia to the exercise of such power :—Held : there was a valid exercise of the power of appointment of such life interest in favour of her husband.

(2) Subsequently to the date of the codicil another power was created, whereby the testatrix was given a power to appoint a life interest in other trust funds to her husband, but before her death she made no other will or codicil nor executed any other instrument whereby she exercised such other power :—Held : there had been no valid appointment of such life interest in such other trust funds in favour of her husband.—*Re BOWER, BOWER v. marriage. Four years after the marriage the mother appointed a sum to be paid to the trustees of the daughter's settlement, upon the uses therein expressed, in satisfaction of the daughter's share & interest under the marriage settlement of the father & mother :—Held : this was substantially an appointment to the daughter, & valid.—*LIMBERT v. The contract of sale referred to was for a sum of £100,000, of which £20,000 had already been paid. The contract of sale was subsequently rescinded on the purchaser paying a further sum of £20,000 :—Held : in the events which had happened, the principle that, where a person disposing of a sum among different persons acts on the assumption that he is dealing with a fund of specific amount, & gives part of the fund to one or more persons & the residue to another, if the fund falls short, all the gifts abate proportionately, would not apply, & the sons would get nothing under the gift of the "remainder."—*A'BECKETT v. built a number of houses upon land situate within the jurisdiction of defts., had not complied with defts.' bye-laws as to the drainage, with the result that differences arose between the parties. Subsequently, by agreement, defts. appointed a sub-committee to settle all outstanding matters, & an agreement was arrived at between plffs. & the sub-committee. One of the terms of that agreement was that plffs.' drainage scheme should remain, although it was contrary to defts.' bye-laws. Defts. having repudiated the agreement to which their sub-committee was a party, plffs. brought an action claiming specific performance :—Held :

as it had not been established that the building of the houses by plffs. was, or formed part of, a housing scheme to which Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), s. 99, applied, the verbal contract made by the sub-committee was not binding on defts., for the reason that defts. could not confer upon the sub-committee a power of entering into any such contract. Neither had the Minister power under sect. 99 to relax the bye-laws in a private building scheme. WILLIAM BEAN & SONS, LTD. v. FLAXTON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1929] 1 K. B. 450; 98 L. J. K. II. Act, 1875, s. 253, takes the place of Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), s. 73, which enabled "any person" to recover penalties for offences against that

Act, & therefore except in the case of information by a party aggrieved or the local authority for the district, the consent of the A.G. is now a condition precedent to proceedings for the recovery of penalties under the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89). — *SHEFFIELD CORPN. v. Mar. 1924, & July, 1926:—Held: upon the evidence, these premises had throughout the period in question been continuously occupied by pltfs. as a slaughter-house & used as such. decreeing the co. to maintain them when made; (2) the agreement did not bind the co. to erect sheds, or to keep one of their servants in attendance at the siding, but it obliged them to construct a proper siding, with approaches & a wharf or raised platform for the loading & unloading of goods; (3) “necessary approaches” meant “proper approaches.”—*LYTTON v. breach of statutory duty, the judge directed the jury that a regulation of the co. under which the foreman of a gang was entrusted with the duty of seeing that a look-out man was provided whenever he or any of his gang were at work upon the line was a compliance with r. 9. The jury found that the co. had not omitted to perform their statutory duty of providing a look-out man, & that the foreman's death was caused by the negligence of one or the other or both of the men, & judgment was entered for the co. :—Held : (1) a motion for a new trial, on the grounds of misdirection & that the verdict was against the weight of evidence, must be refused ; (2) the rule does not require the look-out man provided to be some one who is not a member of the gang itself, but is appointed additionally. (3) Seemle : the duty of the railway co. under the rule in any case of danger is an absolute duty to provide a look-out man & to see that he is instructed to act. The co. does not comply with the rule by merely making regulations under which the foreman of a gang is entrusted with the duty of appointing a look-out man ; & if the foreman fails in that duty, the co. may be made liable for injury happening to a member of the gang other than the foreman himself.—*VINCENT v. it involved the exclusion from consideration of charges at dock warehouses or storage spaces where none of the goods stored therein used railways, & all charges in respect of the conveyance on railways in docks in whatever circumstances the rails were laid or charges were made for their use ; (2) (BANKES, L.J.) under sect. 58 (1) of the above Act the Tribunal has to take into consideration the different operations which go to make up the business of a dock undertaking, for which operations separate & distinct charges are made ; (3) Seemle (SCRUTTON, L.J.) : warehousing on a dock undertaking goods exported or imported, storing such goods in the open on dock lands, the use of transit sheds, & services such as cooping, are dock & not railway charges.—MANCHESTER SHIP CANAL CO.'S DOCK & HARBOUR AUTHORITIES ASSOCN.'S APPLICATIONS, [1927] 2 K. 978a. ———— ]—A railway co., as owners of a canal, were under a statutory obligation to keep it open for navigation. By agreement with the co. a county council pulled down an old bridge crossing the canal & substituted a new one, covenanting "well & sufficiently to maintain & repair" the bridge. The bridge, canal & towing path were, as both parties knew, situate in a mining area liable to subsidences. Later, subsidences occurred, resulting in the headway between the bridge & the towpath level being so reduced as to render the latter useless, & thereby preventing the navigation of the canal. The railway co. contended that the county council were liable to restore the old headway:—Held: (1) the construction of the bridge did not afford any evidence of an intention to provide for the raising or jacking-up of the bridge if it subsided; (2) the covenant to "maintain" did not impose upon the council an obligation to raise the bridge so as to restore the proper headway.—GREAT WESTERN RY. v. - 37a. —. —. —. Defts. were the overseers of a parish. Within the parish was a building, the property in which was vested in pltfs., managed by them in the early part of 1926 as an industrial school. After Mar. 1926 the building was no longer used as an industrial school & pltfs. removed their stores furniture. The removal was completed in Apr. 1926, except that a caretaker was left in possession with a few articles of furniture for his use. In Mar. 1927 pltfs. decided to use the premises partly as an elementary school & partly for other purposes. Defts. rated pltfs. in respect of the building for the two periods ending Sept. 30, 1926, & Mar. 31, 1927, & it was admitted that the rate was duly made & confirmed. Pltfs. objected that the rate was invalid, as there was no beneficial occupation by them. Upon their refusing to pay, defts. complained to the justices, who issued a distress warrant, & defts. seized a tramcar belonging to pltfs. Pltfs. did not appeal to quarter sessions, but took proceedings in replevin :—Held : (1) pltfs. were not in beneficial occupation during the relevant period, & were not ratable; (2) the jurisdiction of the justices to grant a distress warrant depended on the question of actual occupation within the parish & not on that of beneficial occupation, & as pltfs. had failed to show that the distress was unlawful, the action of replevin failed.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. - 675a. House let out in apartments or lodgings—Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), s. 7.—By Representation of the People Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 102), s. 7, where the owner is rated at the passing of this Act to the poor rate in respect of a dwelling-house situate in a parish wholly or partly within a parliamentary borough, instead of the occupier, his liability to be rated for the future shall cease; & after the passing of this Act no owner of any dwelling-house so situate shall be rated to the poor rate instead of the occupier, except as hereinafter mentioned. . . . When the dwelling-house shall be wholly let out in apartments or lodgings, not separately rated, the owner of such dwelling-house shall be rated to the poor rate.

- Appl. & five other persons each occupied a room in a six-roomed dwelling-house in a parish within a parliamentary borough, & had the use in common of the street door, passage, staircase & domestic conveniences; the owner did not occupy any part of the premises, nor retain any control over the tenants, each of whom had the exclusive possession of his own room. At the time of the passing of above Act the owner was rated in respect of the whole house, instead of the occupiers, by virtue of Small Tenements Act, 1850 (c. 99). After the passing of above Act, the overseers of the parish made a rate, in which each of the six occupiers was separately rated :—Held : the owner of the house, & not the several occupiers, was rateable : for that the house came within the exception in sect. 7.—STAMPER v. SUNDERLAND OVERSEERS (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 388; 37 L. J. M. C. 137; 18 L. T. 682; 32 J. P. 439; 16 W. R. 1063.

675b. ---. ---. ---. Resp. was rated & assessed to a general rate in respect of a house which was situate in the parish of H., which was, at the date of the passing of Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), & had ever since been, situate in a parliamentary borough. Resp. did not occupy or reside in or exercise any supervision or control over the house, which was a private dwelling-house consisting of a basement, a ground floor & two other floors, & was let by resp. to, & was occupied by, three tenants. The rateable value of each of the tenements was under £20. Each tenant had a separate letting & a separate key, & had the exclusive use & occupation of the rooms let to him or her. On an appln. for a distress warrant against resp., it was contended on behalf of applt. that the borough council were entitled to rate resp. under Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), s. 7, inasmuch as the house was wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated. It was contended on behalf of resp. that the house was not wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated within the meaning of that section, & that the demand was bad, as no allowance, abatement or deduction had been made to resp. under Poor Rate Assessment & Collection Act, 1869 (c. 41). The justices were of opinion that the house was not in point of law a dwelling-house wholly let out in apartments or lodgings within the meaning of sect. 7 & they dismissed the summons :—Held : on the authority of *Stamper v. 675f. --- To what boroughs applicable.—
The council of a metropolitan borough, which became a parliamentary borough some years after the passing of Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), rated the owners of two dwelling-houses which were wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated, & allowed them the commissions or abatements authorised by Poor Rate Assessment & Collection Act, 1869 (c. 41). The local govt. auditor at his audit made a surcharge on the rate collector in respect of the amount of these abatements :—
Held : the words “ all boroughs ” in Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), s. 7, extended to all boroughs which had since the passing of that Act become parliamentary boroughs, & were not limited to boroughs which were in existence as parliamentary boroughs at the date of its passing ; the owners ought to have been rated under that sect. & were therefore not entitled to any commission, abatement or deduction from the amount of the rate ; & the surcharge was, therefore, rightly made by the auditor.—

675d. [— — — — —.] Appts. were the owners of tenements situate in a borough which in the year 1867 was, & ever since had been, a parliamentary borough. The tenements were wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated within Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), s. 7. Purporting to act under that sect., the rating authority rated appts. as owners, instead of the occupiers of the tenements, without allowing them any commission, abatement or reduction :- Held : appts. were properly rated as owners, instead of the occupiers, under Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), s. 7, & were, therefore, not entitled to any commission, abatement or reduction from the amount of the rate. That portion of Representation of the People Act 1867 (c. 102), s. 7, which provides for the rating of owners of houses wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated has not been repealed by implication by Poor Rate Assessment & Collection Act, 1869 (c. 41), or otherwise.—WHITE & HALES v. 1057a. ————]—Owing to depression in the coal trade, applts.' collieries had at the material date been for some time worked at a loss, & no one would have entered into a tenancy of them at any rent whatever except on the basis that his tenancy would continue for a term of years during which conditions might be expected to improve so as to show a profit on the average. In these circumstances applts., on appeal to Quarter Sessions against their assessments, contended that the assessments ought to be reduced to nil, or a nominal value. Quarter Sessions rejected that contention :—Held : in so holding Quarter Sessions had applied no wrong principle. The test was what a hypothetical tenant would give "from year to year," which was a very different thing from a letting "for one year & no more." Quarter Sessions were right in not excluding possibilities of improvement, & there were materials on which they were entitled to find that these collieries had a substantial value.—*CONSETT IRON CO., LTD. v. delegated shall be qualified for appointment as a member of the assessment committee."

A rating authority had appointed a sub-committee to fix the values of properties in the district for the purpose of the preparation of the valuation list. They appointed P. & G. members thereof, & subsequently appointed the same two persons as their representatives on the resp. assessment committee. The applicant had given notice of objections to his assessment to the resp. committee, & on learning the above facts, obtained a rule nisi for a prohibition to that committee from hearing & determining his objection:—Held: (1) a writ of prohibition would lie to an assessment committee; (2) within provision 12, the duties of the rating authority with respect to the preparation of the valuation list had been delegated to the sub-committee of which P. & G. were members, & consequently, they were disqualified from sitting on the assessment committee under provision 12, although at the time of their appointment thereto they were not disqualified; (3) P. & G. were not interested "otherwise" within provision 11, which refers to an interest ejusdem generis as that of an owner or occupier.—*R. v. Add the following case:—

1184a. Duty of rating authority to alter "then current rate"—On alteration of valuation list by assessment committee.—Appls., in Jan. 1927, gave notice of objection to the valuation list, & relief was refused by the assessment committee. In Nov. 1927 the new assessment committee which came into being on Apr. 1, 1927, reconsidered appls.' objection & granted relief, as from Apr. 1, 1926. They altered the valuation list accordingly, but the rating authority refused to alter the rate book, on the ground that the assessment committee could not make their reconsidered decision relate back to the earlier rating period in which the objection had been originally taken & decided:—Held: it was the duty of the rating authority to alter their "then current rate" on receipt of notice from the assessment committee, & "then current rate" meant the rate current at the date of the objection.—*KINGSTON MILL, STOCKPORT, LTD. v. county rate basis to "the next quarter sessions of the peace after such cause of appeal shall have arisen" must be brought to the next practicable quarter sessions after the parish is in fact aggrieved by the rate; the appeal is not to the next practicable quarter sessions to be held after the parish finds out that it is aggrieved.

A county rate which affected the parish of M. was made in Oct. 1904. In Jan. 1905, as the result of an appeal by a railway co. against their assessment to the poor rate in the parish of M., the rateable value of the parish for the purpose of the county rate basis or standard was reduced by a considerable sum. On Apr. 17, 1905, the parish council of M. gave notice of appeal to the next quarter sessions against such part of the basis or standard as affected that parish, & also against the rate existing upon that basis or standard, they alleging that they only knew of the result of the appeal by the railway co. & its effect on the county rate basis on Mar. 28:—Held: the parish council had not appealed against the county rate to the next quarter sessions after the "cause of appeal" had arisen within above sect., & therefore the quarter sessions had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal against the rate.—*WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL v. - 247a. —.—.—Under the will of her then husband made in 1902 & a separation deed & settlement made in 1903 V. was entitled to two annuities of £200 each. Testator, who was also the settlor, died in 1913, & V. afterwards married a Dutch subject, & for the remainder of her life resided in Holland. In 1927 the trustees of the will offered to redeem both annuities, & after some negotiations were informed by V.'s solrs. that they would advise her to accept £6,000 for redemption, the annuities to be paid in full up to the date of redemption. The trustees sent the solrs. a draft release for their approval. V. having informed her solrs. that she would accept the offer of £6,000, they sent her the release engrossed for her execution, & she executed it on Jan. 12, 1928. On Jan. 17 she died, but no notification of her death was received by her solrs. in London until Jan. 31. In the meantime, the trustees having been informed by V.'s solrs. on Jan. 24 that she had accepted the £6,000, on Jan. 30 paid the money to them, being in ignorance of V.'s death: Held: there was no concluded contract for the sale & purchase of the annuities, as the purchasers could not have intended their offer to be accepted by the vendor merely executing a document. But even assuming there was a concluded contract, there was a total failure of consideration, owing to the death of the annuitant before completion, & the trustees were entitled to recover back the £6,000.—KENNEDY v. B. subsequently by will gave her an annuity of £200, & directed that it should not be taken into account in regard to any other income, it being his express will & desire that it should be a clear beneficial addition to her income :—Held : the widow was not bound to include the £200 annuity in her computation of income, & was entitled to have a sufficient amount of the corpus sold to make up her income, independently of that annuity to £1,000.—Re HEDGES' TRUST ESTATE (1874), L. Part VI.—Excise Duties.

SUB-SECT. 1.—BETTING DUTY (Vol. XXXIX., p. 232).

Add the following case:—

93a. Who liable to duty—Club—Managing totalisator.—A limited co. was the proprietor of a club formed for social intercourse. Upon the club premises betting on horse races was transacted through the instrumentality of two machines, called totalisators, owned by the co. & worked by the co.'s servants. Any member desiring to use these machines for the purpose of backing horses applied to join the club pool, & if elected as a pool member, he became entitled on payment of a small subscription to operate, & for this purpose he was supplied with credit vouchers of varying amounts. Under the rules of the pool 10 per cent. of the gross amount of the stakes on each race was retained by the co. in respect of the facilities provided & the expenses of management, & the balance was divided among the backers, called in the rules "investors," of the winning horse in the proportion of their stakes. The winnings for each week were paid by the co. from its own funds irrespective of any possible loss owing to dishonour of the vouchers. The rules provided that the club acted simply as a distributing agent. Upon an information preferred by the A.-G. against the co. alleging that the co. was liable to pay betting duty in respect of wagers on horse races made by members of the club by means of these machines, it was admitted that the co. was a bookmaker & that the transactions in question were bets within Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 15:—Held: the bets were not made with the co., but by the members inter se, & the claim of the Crown failed.—A.-G. v. LUNCHEON & SPORTS CLUB, LTD., [1929] A. C. 400; 98 L. J. K. B. 359; 141 L. T. 153; 45 T. L. R. 291, H. L.

93b. — Employee of bookmaker.—A bookmaker, who held a bookmaker's certificate & also an entry certificate in respect of certain premises, had in his service at the premises an employee, who received a weekly salary & was the only person employed there. The employee had sole charge of the premises in the absence of the bookmaker, who attended race meetings in other towns during the flat racing season, & had on one occasion been absent from the premises for ten days consecutively. Although the employee had no authority to open new accounts in the absence of his employer, he could accept personal bets & bets over the telephone, & he had said that he had no responsibility, but answered the telephone & recorded messages. On a certain date the employee when in sole charge of the premises was seen to take two or three bets on the telephone & enter them upon a slip, he himself not holding a bookmaker's certificate. to the trustees of the settlement by separate transfers. Ad valorem "voluntary disposition" duty under Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 74, was subsequently paid or assessed, without dispute, in respect of the stocks, shares & marketable securities & policies of life insurance, with the exception of the Govt. stocks, which were exempt from duty on transfer by the General Exemptions from all Stamp Duties in the First Schedule to Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39). The comrs. held that the settlement was also chargeable with ad valorem "settlement" duty on the value of the Govt. stocks included in it. The settlor, however, contended that no duty was payable in respect of those stocks, as they were included in the settlement with other stocks in respect of which ad valorem transfer duty & not settlement duty was payable under Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 74 (4).—Held: the Govt. stocks were distinct matters, within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 1 (a), from the other property dealt with by the settlement, & therefore, the settlement could be separately charged, as if it were a separate instrument, with settlement duty in respect of the Govt. stock.—*ANSHELL v. - 669a. — Whether overriding powers of revocation & reappointment to be considered.—Appts., as the trustees of the P. settled estates, submitted to the comrs. a deed of resettlement dated Sept. 16, 1911, for their opinion as to the stamp duty with which it was chargeable. Owing to difficulties & events which had happened in the P. family there had been unavoidable delay. The comrs. on Feb. 12, 1929, assessed the stamp duty at £19,907. By the resettlement of 1911, which followed a settlement of the property made in 1870, by which powers of revocation & new appointment were reserved, freeholds in L., M. & D. were conveyed subject to (a) certain family charges & power of charging; (b) the prior life estates of the second & third Viscounts P., & the estate in tail male in the first & other sons of the latter; & (c) to the powers of revocation & new appointment contained in the deed of 1911 by reference to the prior deed of 1870. The comrs., in valuing the property, conveyed by the resettlement for the purpose of arriving at the stamp duty payable under Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 74, made an allowance in respect of items (a) & (b), but said that the powers of revocation & new appointment given by item (c) ought to be disregarded as an overriding factor, & valued the property at £1,990,700, the agreed value of the estates as a whole being £7,454,200. Exercising their powers under 1910 Act, sect. 74 (5), they found that the resettlement conferred a substantial benefit on the persons who took interests thereunder in remainder expectant on the determination or failure of the uses, & that consequently the deed fell within sect. 74 (1), & became chargeable to stamp duty as if it were a conveyance on sale with the substitution of the value of the property conveyed for the amount of the consideration for the sale. Appts. contended that the resettlement being subject to the overriding powers of revocation & new appointment was an ambulatory document, & was not a disposition within the meaning of sect. 74, also that in valuing the property conveyed the overriding powers of revocation & new appointment had to be taken into account, & such powers reduced the value of the property conveyed to a nominal sum, & that the ad valorem duty under sect. 74 should be assessed at 10s.:—Held: the comrs. had not in fact disregarded altogether the powers of revocation & new appointment, but meant that they did not consider that such powers were an overriding factor in arriving at the value of the property conveyed by the resettlement. Westmorland (Earl) v. Inland Revenue Comrs., No. 667, bound the Ct. to hold that the fact of the existence of such powers in the deed to be stamped ought to be estimated, & not treated as an overriding consideration, & that equally applied in the case as here, where the powers were to be found outside of the deed in question. The comrs. were right in so deciding, & also in their method of reaching the true value of the property conveyed by reference to the value of the estate in possession after deducting the value of the incumbrances & of the life estates.—STANFORTH v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1929), 98 L. J. K. B. 764; 141 L. T. 373; 73 Sol. Jo. 483, C. A.

- 430a. “Current prices.” By an agreement dated July 12, 1927, plffs. & defts. agreed that plffs. were to deal with defts.’ entire output of Jarrow pig iron available for delivery in Scotland, plffs. undertaking to push the sale of the same in Scotland in preference to any other brand. They were to base their prices on the current prices for Middlesbrough pig iron, free on truck makers’ works or l.o.b. makers’ wharf, excluding Tees dues, & to pay cash on Mondays for the previous weeks’ shipments. Disputes having arisen between the parties about the prices which plffs. ought to charge for the pig iron which they sold, defts. notified plffs. that they terminated the agreement as from Apr. 22, 1928. Plffs. brought an action for breach of contract, because, as they alleged, defts. refused to supply them at “the current prices for the Middlesbrough pig iron.” Defts. contended that the phrase “current prices” were the list prices which were published every week in a trade newspaper by a group or combine of iron foundries in Middlesbrough, but plffs. contended that “current prices” meant the price at which pig iron was actually being sold in Scotland by the sole agent of the combine:—Held: the expression “current prices” in the agreement meant the list prices which were published every week by the combine in Middlesbrough, & did not mean the price at which pig iron was actually being sold in Scotland by the sole agent of the combine.—JACKS & Co. v. 1376a. —. —. Delivery order not in accordance with contract—Agreement for delivery order “from bond”—Delivery order of goods in bond.—F., a financier, L., a distiller, D. & M., a firm of shipbrokers, & one A. were minded to load a ship with a cargo of whisky to be carried across the Atlantic & sold in the U.S. or at some point from which it could easily be smuggled into the U.S., in violation of the laws of that country. D. & M. entered into a contract to buy a steamer for £2,565; F. advanced £256 as a deposit on the purchase. On Oct. 26, 1927, an agreement was entered into between F., L. & D. & M., whereby L. agreed to sell to D. & M. 7,500 cases of whisky at 27s. 6d. a case free on board at Leith or Glasgow to be delivered ex warehouse not later than Nov. 26. D. & M. were to take delivery on board a vessel of a regular line of steamers. Payment was to be made by a bill for £5,500 drawn by F., accepted by A. & indorsed to L., & a second bill for £4,812 accepted by A. & D. & M., both bills to be payable ninety days from Nov. 26, & to be drawn & accepted on Oct. 26 & handed to L. to hold as security until he should hand the shipping documents or delivery order from bond on or before Nov. 26. L. agreed to lend D. & M. £2,500 for the purchase of the steamer, the loan to be secured by a first mtge. on the steamer. F. agreed to lend D. & M. £1,000 at 40 per cent. per annum interest to be secured by a second mtge. on the steamer. D. & M. agreed to insure the steamer for £1,000 against all risks, including seizure or confiscation, & £2,500 against marine risks & deliver to L. cover notes for £1,500 & £1,000, & to F. a cover note for £1,000. F. & L. agreed jointly to underwrite the insurance for £1,000 against confiscation at a figure to be agreed in the event of the ordinary market rate exceeding thirty guineas per cent. D. & M. agreed to provide £1,600, the estimated balance required for the equipment of the steamer for the voyage. Delay having occurred in naming a liner to take delivery of the whisky & in equipping the steamer for the adventure, L. gave to D. & M. a delivery order addressed to the keepers of the bonded warehouse where the whisky was in store. D. & M. immediately pledged the whisky for £500. F. hearing of this paid off the loan & took a transfer of the delivery order:—Held: L. by giving the delivery order to D. & M. had not committed a breach of the agreement, & if he had, F. could not complain of the breach after having himself taken a transfer of the delivery order.—*FOSTER v. 1812a. ——— Shipment of goods before contract—Ship visiting other ports before issue of bill of lading.]—A contract, dated July 2, provided for the sale of frozen rabbits & their shipment from Sydney c.i.f. Liverpool by a named steamer to sail during Aug. The bill of lading, which was dated Aug. 17, stated that the goods had been shipped by the steamer, then lying in Sydney. The steamer shipped the goods, or the bulk of them, at Sydney on June 25, when she proceeded to Queensland ports, thereafter returning to Sydney, & finally sailing from that port for Liverpool on Aug. 17. The buyers declined to take delivery of the goods, & the sellers claimed damages from them for breach of contract:—Held: the sellers were not entitled to recover, inasmuch as they had themselves committed breaches of the contract, by supplying goods the shipment of which had already taken place before the date of the contract of sale, & by tendering a bill of lading the issue of which had been delayed for so long as seven weeks after the shipment, the steamer having in the meantime visited other ports several hundred miles from the port of shipment. —FOREMAN & ELLAMS, LTD. v. BLACKBURN, [1928] 2 K. B. 60; 97 L. J. K. B. 355; 139 L. T. 68; 33 Com. Cas. 359; 17 Asp. M. L. C. 461.

1814a. ——— Date of shipment incorrectly stated.]—The seller under a c.i.f. contract tendered to the buyer a bill of lading which stated, not fraudulently, but contrary to the fact, that the shipment had taken place in the contract month. Being unaware of this fact at the time of the tender, the buyer accepted the shipment, & entered into sub-contracts for the sale of a portion of the goods, those sub-contracts containing a clause that “the bill or bills of lading shall be conclusive evidence of the date of shipment.” The sub-purchasers refused to take delivery, alleging that the shipment had not been made during the contract month. The buyer under the original contract having then ascertained that the goods had not been shipped during the contract month:—Held: (1) he was entitled to damages for the breach by the seller of his obligation to deliver a bill of lading stating the date of shipment correctly, the measure of damages being the difference between the market price & the contract price of the goods: (2) the buyer was not bound to enforce, for the purpose of minimising the damages, the contracts with the sub-purchasers, as to do so, after he knew that the shipment date was incorrect, might seriously injure his commercial reputation.—FINLAY (JAMES) & Co. v. - 2699a. ——— Loss of freight—C.l.f. contract—Policy not in accordance with contract—Refusal of insurer to pay.]—A quantity of copra was sold for shipment from Australasia to London on the terms of cost, freight, & insurance, & the contract provided : "Insurance including war risk on free from particular average terms to be effected by sellers at the contract price plus 5 per cent. on the net shipping weight. . . . Such insurance to cover the copra until delivered in the ordinary course of transit into warehouse at the port of destination." In policies taken out by the sellers the goods & the freight were valued separately, & there was a "freight contingency clause," as follows : "On freight payable at destination . . . being increased value of copra through payment of freight or from such time as freight becomes due at destination, this insurance being deemed to be part of the total amount insured on the copra valued at such total amount." By the bill of lading the freight was payable only if the vessel arrived at the place of destination. The vessel took fire on the voyage & with her cargo became a total loss. The insurance co. paid to the buyers the insurance on the goods, but refused to pay the insurance on the freight on the ground that it had never become covered. The buyers then claimed damages from the sellers on the ground that the policies did not comply with the contract :—LODERS & NUCOLINE, LTD. v. BANK OF NEW ZEALAND (1929), 45 T. L. R. 203.

1104a. Sale by vendor in specified capacity.]—Where, in a vendor & purchaser contract, it is stated that the vendor will make title in a specified capacity, the contract does not amount to a warranty that he will make title in a particular manner. The warranty is no more than a warranty that a good title shall be made; & the purchaser can be forced to accept such good title, even though made by the vendor in a capacity other than that specified.

By special conditions of sale, subject to which two houses were sold by auction, it was stated that the vendors were selling as "trustees for sale" under the will of A. On examination of the title by the purchasers, it appeared that no trust for sale was contained in the will:—Held: the above statement did not affect the powers of the vendors to make a good title as the legal personal representatives of A. Re SPENCER & HAUSER'S CONTRACT, [1928] Ch. 598; 97 L. Interest on unpaid purchase-money to be added to principal.]—Where, by a contract for sale of land, it was stipulated that, in the event of interest on the unpaid purchase-money being unpaid at the end of each year, the same should be added to the principal, the ct. refused to decree specific performance by the vendor on payment of the principal & simple interest only, or except upon payment of the interest according to the agreement.—HENDERSON v. DICKSON (1862), 9 Gr. 379.—CAN.

2475a. ——— Consent in favour of specified nominee.—On a sale of leaseholds by an original lessee, completion in favour of a solvent nominee of the purchaser can be enforced, unless it is shown that the sale was granted upon considerations purely personal to the purchaser, but the purchaser must join in the assignment for the purpose of guaranteeing the performance of the covenants.

Pltf. co. agreed to purchase from deft. property of which deft. was under-lessee. Her underlease contained a covenant not to assign without the under-lessor's consent, not to be withheld in the case of a responsible assignee. The under-lessor refused a licence to assign to pltf. co., but deft.'s solrs. were informed that a licence would be granted to complete in favour of a specified nominee. The licence was in fact available, but deft. never formally applied for it; & ultimately her solrs. returned the deposit paid by pltf. co., who thereupon brought this action for specific performance. Held: deft. could be compelled to complete in favour of the specified nominee.

LORD CAIRNS indeed seems to have considered that, if the phrase [subject to the title being approved by our solrs.] meant what the Ct. of Appeal thought it meant, it would follow that the purchaser was at liberty through the medium of his solrs. to decline the title from mere caprice; but none of the judges accepted this extreme view. It is reasonable, they thought, to imply good faith as a necessary ingredient. On the other hand, it seems to be putting an undue strain on the words to construe them, when used by a layman, as connoting not the approval of his own solrs., which is their plain, ordinary meaning, but the decision of a Ct. of justice after an unknown delay & at an unascertainable cost (MAUGHAM, J.).—*CURTIS MOFFAT, LTD. v. Where a claim & counterclaim are both dismissed with costs, upon the taxation of the costs, the true rule is that the claim should be treated as if it stood alone, & the counterclaim should bear only the amount by which the costs of the proceedings have been increased by it. No costs not incurred by reason of the counterclaim can be costs of the counterclaim. In the absence of special directions by the ct. there should be no apportionment. of her husband in the event of his surviving her. Afterwards she divorced her husband, & she died without having been remarried, leaving her divorced husband surviving her:—Held: the power could be exercised only in favour of a person who was the beneficiary's husband at the time of her death, & therefore the divorced husband did not take under the exercise of the power.—*BOSWORTHICK v. The wife, having been divorced, remarried in 1908, & exercised the power in favour of her second husband. In 1923 the second marriage was dissolved upon the husband's petition, & the wife again remarried. She died in 1928, leaving her first, second & third husbands surviving her:—Held: the second husband, although he survived his former wife, was not entitled to any interest under the appointment of 1908, as he had ceased to be her husband on the dissolution of the marriage.—*Re WILLIAMS' SETTLEMENT, GREENWELL v. The marriage was not solemnised, but the parties cohabited without marriage, & three children were born. to pay the income to the tenants for life therein mentioned, & directed that after the death of any tenant for life the share of that tenant for life should be held in trust for the grandchildren of the settlor in manner therein mentioned. One of the tenants for life died in the lifetime of the settlor. A summons was taken out by the Public Trustee for the direction of the ct. as to the application of the accumulations of income of the share of the tenant for life who died in the lifetime of the settlor, having regard to the facts that (a) no grandchild of the settlor had attained the age of twenty-one years, or being female had married, at the death of the settlor; (b) one of the grandchildren of the settlor was born after the dates, when two of such grandchildren had attained the age of twenty-one years, & (c) a grandchild of the settlor, who survived the settlor, died under the age of twenty-one years: Held: (1) the property from which the accumulated income arose must be regarded as the share to which the infant would become ultimately entitled, even though that share might be reduced by reason of other members of the class coming into existence; (2) the share of the grandchild, who had died under the age of twenty-one years, which had been provisionally assigned to that grandchild, ought to be treated as not having been properly assigned, & that portion of the money which had accrued while the infant was a member of the class, & which had not been applied in the maintenance & education of the infant, ought to be reassigned amongst the other persons who were at that time members of the class; (3) observations on the method of dealing with accumulations of income provisionally assigned to infant members of a class, having regard to Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43, & Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 31.—*Re KING, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. S. survived C.: there were two children of the marriage, of whom both died, without leaving issue, in the lifetime of S. No appointment was made:—Held: the remainder to S.'s brothers & sisters took effect, as it was not a limitation in remainder after the determination of the estates given to the children as tenants in common in tail by the limitation immediately preceding, but was an independent limitation to take effect in case there were, at the time of the death of the survivor of C. & S., no issue in whom any of the previous limitations could vest.—*DOE d. 1873. For the existing paragraph substitute the following paragraph:—

—[.]—Testator, who died in 1871, devised his real estate to his trustees upon trust to divide the income during a long period, namely during the joint lives & the life of the survivor of a large class of persons, amongst another class of persons, their respective exors., administrators & assigns; & declared that, on cesser of the period, the land should be sold, & the net proceeds of sale divided amongst a third class of persons only then ascertainable, & he gave his trustees a power of sale until the trust for sale arose. Immediately before the commencement of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), all the cestuis que vie were dead except one, & all the original participants in income were also dead except one, & the income for many years had been distributed amongst their respective estates or assigns:—Held: (1) the land was held in undivided shares within Law of Property Act, 1925, Sched. I., Part IV., par. 1.

The trustees having received, through their surveyor, a notice from the local authority that certain premises, forming part of the trust estate, were in a defective condition, carried out the necessary repairs, & temporarily paid the cost thereof out of the rents of the trust estate:—Held: (2) the trustees having asked the ct. for directions, the ct. was free to determine how the expenses ought to be borne; (3) the expenses should be borne by capital.—*Re ROHNS, HOLLAND v. 1873a. ——— Effect of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 28 (1).—The effect of above sub-sect. is (a) to give to trustees for sale powers of management of land, including the repair & rebuilding of houses, the cost of which, by virtue of sub-section 3 of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 102, is payable out of income, & (b) to give power to trustees to make improvements which, under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 84, coupled with the provisions of Sched. III, thereto, can be paid for out of capital. Therefore where trustees have a choice of powers under above sub-sect., they should be guided in their choice by the equitable principles laid down & applied in *Re Hotchkys, Freke v. In 1869 the persons who had then become absolute owners subject to the lease settled the property in strict settlement, giving to a trustee ample powers of management, with powers to grant leases with or without covenants for renewal, & to perform any covenant for renewal previously entered into by any previous owner, or by the trustee for the time being, so that in every such appointment, lease or demise the best rent be reserved without taking any fine or premium. During the continuance of a tenancy for life under this settlement two lives dropped, & on each occasion a heriot was paid & the lease renewed by the trustee at a fine in pursuance of the covenant:—Held: the powers given to the trustee did not affect the question, & the fines & heriots were casual profits payable to the tenant for life.—*BURSTOCKE v. Testator's estate was insufficient for payment in full of his legacies, & the realisation of his assets occupied several years:—Held: moneys from time to time received by the trustees & applicable to the legacy were divisible rateably between capital & income, so as to attribute to income £4 per cent. from testator's death on the amount attributed to capital.—

2738a. Restriction on power of letting.—Testator by his will, dated Nov. 22, 1927, directed his trustees to retain £3,000 & to apply the interest yearly in payment of the taxes, rates & repairs of his freehold house, & he desired that his aunt should “have the use of it & my furniture free of cost for her occupation during her life or so long as she may require them, but without the power to sub-let the same or any part thereof. On the termination of her occupation the house is to be sold,” & from the proceeds, added to the above £3,000, certain specific legacies were given. He also directed that when the house had been sold, his nephew, G. P., should have the furniture:—Held: (1) the provision forbidding the tenant for life to sub-let was void under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 106 (1), & the provision requiring the house to be sold & the gift over of the proceeds of sale upon the termination of her occupation was also avoided by that sub-sec., so far as that provision would operate in the event of her exercising any of her powers as tenant for life; (2) the gift over of the £3,000 was a provision which tended to induce her to abstain from exercising her powers of leasing as a tenant for life, & was void, therefore, in so far as it had that tendency; & that it should be read to take effect only upon her ceasing to reside for any reason other than the exercise of her powers of leasing as a tenant for life; (3) in the event of her selling the house she would not be entitled to be paid any part of the income of the £3,000; (4) she was entitled to the furniture during her life or until she ceased to occupy the house for any reason other than the exercise of her powers as tenant for life.—*Re PATTEN, WESTMINSTER BANK v. 2739a. — — — — —.]—By this will dated Jan. 4, 1918, the testator bequeathed his leasehold house, garden & grounds, W. Ct., together with the fixtures & fittings & all his furniture, pictures (except some), china, plate, linen, grand piano, & all chattels & other effects therein, to his trustees upon trust to permit his sister, E., to reside there after his death, if she should wish to do so, & to have the use & enjoyment thereof during her life free of rent or other payment, & he gave to his sister the use & enjoyment of his said house, garden, & grounds, & everything contained therein, for her life accordingly, & he directed his trustees after her death or during her life if she should not wish to reside or continue to reside there to sell the same (except certain articles therein), with power to postpone such sale as they might think proper, & divide the proceeds between certain charities. He died on June 26, 1918, & the lady entered into possession thereof immediately. In 1925 she went abroad temporarily for the benefit of her health, the place being left in charge of servants, & she paid the Sched. A. tax. In 1926, owing to severe illness, she was prevented from returning to England, & the house was let by her from time to time, & she still paid Sched. A. tax thereon. In 1927 she sold the house as tenant for life or a person having the powers of a tenant for life, & shortly after the contents, other than the excepted articles, were sold by the trustees. On a summons taken out by the trustees asking whether she had any, &, if any, what interest in the proceeds of sale of the leasehold property & the income thereof:—Held: on the evidence, it must be deemed that those powers were properly exercised by her. The power of sale in the trustees never arose, nor did they purport to exercise it. She had not therefore forfeited her interest in the proceeds of sale of the leasehold property or the income thereof. —Re ACKLOM, OAKESHOTT v. HAWKINS, [1929] 1 Ch. 195; 98 L. J. Ch. 44; 140 L. The settlement under which the land so stood limited was a compound settlement, consisting of various documents, including two deeds of 1911 & 1913. In due course a vesting deed was executed in favour of A. A. died on Dec. 4, 1926, & probate, limited to the settled land, was granted to the trustees of the compound settlement as his special representatives, on the footing that that settlement did not come to an end on his death. There were separate trustees of the two deeds of 1911 & 1913. Clause 11 of the 1911 deed gave to the trustees thereof all the powers conferred on a tenant for life by Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890:—Held: (1) the whole legal estate, the subject-matter of the settlement, was not held upon trust for sale; (2) in view of clause 11 of the 1911 deed the trustees of the two deeds of 1911 & 1913 were persons on whom Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 23 (1), conferred the powers of a tenant for life, & they were statutory owners under the compound settlement; & when they sold the land they would sell it as statutory owners & not as trustees for sale, & they must pay over the proceeds of sale to the trustees of the compound settlement.—*Re NORTON, PINNEY v. 3138. For the existing paragraph substitute the following paragraph:—

— Settled land.—By the will of testator, who died in 1884, his real estate was devised to trustees upon trust to permit his widow to receive the rents thereof during her life, & after her decease upon trust to pay same to or for the benefit of such of his two daughters, E. & M., as should be then living & should for the time being be single & unmarried in equal shares if more than one, & when both should be married upon trust as to both capital as well as income for all testator's children in equal shares. Testator's widow died in 1889, & on the death of E., in 1927, questions arose as to the respective interests of E. & M. & testator's children in the income & capital of the real estate. The ct. having decided that E. & M. were entitled to the income of the real estate during their joint lives in equal shares, & upon the death of E. her sister M. became entitled to the whole of the income during her spinsterhood, & upon her marriage or death the whole estate would become divisible in equal shares between the children of testator, the further question arose whether, on Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), coming into force, the devised real estate vested in the then surviving trustee of the will upon the statutory trusts under Sched. I., Part IV., par. 1 (1), or in her or the Public Trustee under par. 1 (3):—Held: (1) as the purposes of the trusts of testator's will were such as might continue beyond the life of his widow, the real estate devised by the will was, at the date of Law of Property Act, 1925, coming into force, by the effect of Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 31, vested in the then surviving trustee of the will in fee simple in trust for E. & M., who were then beneficially interested in equity until one of them should marry or die in undivided shares vested in possession; (2) although their interests were not absolute interests, the case fell within Sched. I., Part IV., par. 1 (1), & the real estate thereupon vested in the trustee of the will upon the statutory trusts; (3) when a case fell within par. 1 (1) it did not become necessary to consider whether it fell within any of the subsequent sub-paragraphs. Re Dawson's Settled Estates, [1928] Ch. 421; 97 L. 3138a. ———. ———.]—Testator, who died on June 16, 1881, leaving a widow & eight children, by his will gave all his estate to his wife & four children, whom he appointed exors. & trustees, upon trust to pay his debts, etc., & bequeathed the remainder of his personal effects to his wife & the income of his freeholds & leaseholds, subject to certain payments, & after her decease to pay such income to his four sons & daughters in certain shares, which were to cease at death, with a proviso as to four quarterly payments to widows of sons, & subject thereto, gave his estate to the longest liver of his children absolutely. The widow died in 1900, & on the coming into force of the Law of Property Act, 1925, the deft. & daughter, who had since died, were the surviving trustees. All parties interested in the estate now desired a sale, & the question raised by this summons was first, whether pltf. & deft. R., the surviving trustee, were together tenant for life for the purposes of the Settled Land Act. Secondly, if it be not settled land, whether the entirety was now vested in the surviving trustee, or in the Public Trustee on the statutory trusts:—Held: Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), Sch. I., Pt. IV., para. 4, added by the amending Act of 1926, was not applicable to the case; & secondly, having regard to Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 31, & following Re Dawson's Settled Estates, No. 3138, the entirety was now vested in the surviving trustee under para. 1 (1), upon the statutory trusts.—*Re BARRAT, BODY v. 3143a. ——— Only one trustee—Vesting of land in Public Trustee.]—Under & by virtue of the will of a testator who died in 1921, & of subsequent dispositions, acts in the law & events, the legal estate in certain freehold land was, immediately before the commencement of the Law of Property Act, 1925, vested in two persons for their lives share & share alike, the legal estate in remainder expectant upon the lives of those persons & the life of the survivor of them being vested in a single trustee upon trust after the death of the surviving tenant for life to sell the land & divide the proceeds between the testator's nephews & nieces. Upon a summons by the tenants for life, who were desirous of selling the land, to have it determined in whom, upon the coming into force of the Law of Property Act, 1925, the land was vested:—Held: (1) as immediately before the commencement of that Act the land was held at law & in equity in undivided shares, vested in possession, & the entirety thereof was settled land, Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), Sched. I., Part IV., para. 1, sub-para. 3, would apply, if there were more than one trustee of the settlement constituted by the will, in whom the land could vest as joint tenants; but that, as there was only one trustee, the land vested, under clause (i) of the proviso to that sub-para., in the Public Trustee upon the statutory trusts; (2) if, before the Public Trustee accepted the trust, the present trustee (who before the commencement of the Law of Property Act, 1925, was the trustee of the settlement constituted by the will for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts then in force) appointed an additional trustee or trustees of that settlement, the land would vest in the trustees of the settlement as joint tenants upon the statutory trusts.—*Re PRICE, PRICE v. Held: as the personal representatives then held the land in trust for the daughters in undivided shares vested in possession, they held it, after the Act came into force, upon the statutory trusts, by virtue of Sched. L., Part IV., sub-para. 1 (b) of the Act, with the result that the settlement trustees were not entitled, as, but for Part IV., they would be to call for a conveyance of the legal estate; but the personal representatives held the land on trust for sale & were entitled to sell the same, unless the daughters elected to call for a conveyance.—*Re FORSTER, SOMERVILLE v. upon trust to pay out of the income thereof four life annuities, & while any annuity remained payable to divide the surplus income amongst such of testator's grandchildren as should be living for the period during which any annuity remained payable; & on cesser of all the annuities, to stand possessed of the residuary estate in trust for his grandchildren & the issue then living of any then dead, as tenants in common according to the stocks. By a codicil power was conferred upon the trustees after the expiration of five years from the testator's death to sell his residuary estate or any part thereof by public auction but not by private contract. Upon a summons raising questions, whether the trustees or the persons entitled to the surplus income until cesser of the annuities were the proper persons in whom the land ought to be vested by the exor.; & if the trustees were the proper persons, whether the annuitants were persons whose wishes ought to be given effect to by the trustees for sale:—Held: (1) the land was held in equity in undivided shares; (2) the land was devised in undivided shares within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 34 (3), with the result that it was devised to the trustees, who were trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Act, 1925, upon the statutory trusts; (3) those trustees were the persons in whom the land ought to be vested.—*Re HOUSE, WESTMINSTER BANK v. 19a. — — —.]—Pltf. was the owner of a house & grounds on the X. estate, a leaseholder in 1900 & freeholder since 1920. Down to 1912 there was no drainage system for the estate, but in that year a system was established, which so far as affected this property was called "the northern system," by the then owners of the estate with an effective outfall, but without any reference to the local authority, which was maintained since 1920 by means of contributions from property owners to the owner of the part where the disposal works were situated. From these works the effluent passed into the river M., but owing to the filter bed ceasing to function, pollution of the river occurred, & this outfall being stopped by the action of the Thames Conservancy, the effluent was now carried over the adjoining land. In an action by pltf. for a declaration that the system vested in defts. & that they were liable to maintain it:—Held: the line of pipes which communicated with the disposal works was a sewer which vested in the local authority, but the remedy of pltf. was to appeal on behalf of the whole of the persons in the district to the Ministry of Health under P. H. Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 299.—CLARK v. EPSOM RURAL COUNCIL, [1929] 1 Ch. 287; 98 L. J. Ch. 88; 140 L. T. 246; 93 J. P. 67; 45 T. L. R. 106; 27 L. G. R. 328.

197a. — — —.]—Sewer laid above ground—By private owner—Maintenance by local authority.—Defts., who were the urban sanitary authority, served notices, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 23, 36, upon the owners of a row of houses within the district requiring them within a certain time to provide water-closets in the houses & to connect the same with the main sewer. By arrangement among the owners the work was carried out by the owner of two of the houses, one of which was occupied by pltf. A six-inch earthenware pipe was laid through the gardens at the backs of the houses to receive the drainage of each house & to discharge into the main sewer. This pipe was laid underground until it came to the garden of the house in which pltf. lived, where, owing to a fall in the land half the pipe appeared above the ground. About three years after the pipe was laid pltf. in going down her garden slipped on the pipe & was injured. In an action against the urban district council to recover damages for the personal injuries so sustained, the pipe being a "sewer" which was vested in them, the jury found that the sewer was constructed so as to be dangerous to the occupants of the house, that defts. had notice of its dangerous condition, & were negligent in not obviating the danger:—Held: as deft. council would have been entitled, if they had themselves constructed the sewer, to lay it above ground, they were not guilty of any breach of duty in maintaining the sewer in the same condition as it was when laid, & were therefore not liable to pltf.—MORRIS v. MYNYDDISLWYN URBAN COUNCIL, [1917] 2 K. B. 309; 86 L. J. K. B. 1094; 117 L. T. 108; 81 J. P. 261; 15 L. G. R. 453, C. A.

304a. Reconstruction of drain—What amounts to.—The L. C. C. made a bye-law that a person who should entirely or partially reconstruct any pipe or drain communicating with a sewer should deposit plans of the proposed work, with the proviso that plans should not be required in the case of any repair which did not involve the entire reconstruction of the pipe or drain; & another bye-law as to ventilation, which was to apply to every person who should reconstruct in an existing building any pipe or drain communicating with a sewer. Premises situate in the metropolis were drained at the rear by a line of pipes which took the surface water drainage of the premises through two gullies in the yard & which communicated with a sewer. This line of pipes was not laid upon concrete & was not ventilated, & the drain having become a nuisance, notice was served on the owner to abate the same. The owner opened up the ground, took up the pipes, most of which were defective or broken, & relaid the drain in the same line upon a foundation of concrete. He put in four new lengths of pipes & a new gully & connection, replacing in the drain one old pipe & gully only, & leaving in the ground an old pipe which was not defective:—Held: the work done to the drain was a "reconstruction" of the drain, & not merely a "repair" of it, & that the bye-laws applied.—AGAR v. NOKES (1905), 93 L. T. 605; 69 J. P. 374; 3 L. G. R. 1168, D. C.

319a. — — —.]—Liability of owner requesting local authority to lay connecting pipe.—Subject to the rights of a corpn. as highway & sewer authority, pltf. owned the soil of a public road with a sewer therein. Deft.'s property abutted on this road, as well as on another sewered road, & he was entitled under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 21, to cause his drains to empty into the corpn.'s sewers, on giving proper notice & complying with regulations. At deft.'s request & acting under their local Act, the corpn. connected deft.'s combined drain with the sewer in pltf.'s road, carrying the connecting pipe through a small portion of pltf.'s subsoil:—Held: the corpn.'s acts were fully justified by the local Act, even if not by Public Health Acts, & whatever right for compensation pltf. might have against the corpn. for damage sustained by reason of the exercise of their statutory powers, he had no cause of action against deft. for requesting the corpn. to exercise those powers.—*GRANT v. No entry of the offence had been made in the official log-book, & the justices dismissed the complaint on this ground for want of jurisdiction:—Held: the making of the entry in the official log-book was not a condition precedent to the hearing of the complaint. Even where no entry of an offence had been made, & there had consequently been default under the section, the Court was not without jurisdiction to proceed. The effect of 1894 Act, s. 228 (d), was to confer on the ct. in such a case a discretion either to receive other evidence or to refuse to do so & dismiss the complaint.—*PATTERSON v. 1780a. Breach of duty—Broker assuming to charter vessel to himself—Ratification of wrongful act.—*Pltfs., owners of the D., instructed H., a broker, to procure a charterparty for their ship. H. being minded, in breach of his duty as a broker, to make use of the ship for his own ends, purported to effect a charterparty dated Aug. 9, 1926, between pltfs. & an export co. of Danzig “& others” as charterers. This document was signed by H. “as agent only” for the owners & by H. “on behalf of the charterers as per separate chartering notes.” By one of the clauses of the document the shipowners were to have a lien for all dead freight & demurrage at the port of loading. H. had no authority to act on behalf of the export co., who knew nothing about the transaction. Defts., timber merchants in London, bought from S. & Co., shippers in Danzig, red wood at a price including cost, freight & insurance from Danzig to London. S. & Co. engaged cargo space for the wood on board the D., by means of chartering notes signed by H. purporting to act “by order of the owners,” but without their authority, & the wood was shipped on board the D. at Danzig under bills of lading signed by H. purporting to act for & on behalf of & with the authority of the master. Each bill of lading incorporated the terms, conditions & clauses of the so-called charterparty of Aug. 9, among which was the above lien clause. The bills of lading were indorsed by S. & Co. & tendered under the contract of sale to defts., who accepted them & paid S. & Co. for the goods. The D. left Danzig without a full cargo several days after the lay days had expired. When she arrived in London the master deposited the wood with wharfingers subject to a lien in favour of pltfs. for dead freight & demurrage, & pltfs. brought an action against defts. for a declaration that they were entitled to the lien :—Held : the lien clause in the document of Aug. 9 was incorporated in the bills of lading, on the grounds that (1) pltfs., by taking the cargo on board their ship & issuing bills of lading in respect of it after they knew of H.’s breach of duty in assuming to charter* their vessel to himself, had ratified his act & so validated the charterparty, & (2) the incorporation of the lien clause was not in any way dependent or contingent upon the charterparty being a valid or effective document, for in the absence of a condition to the contrary, one document, or part thereof, might be incorporated in another, although the first document had, of itself, no legal effect whatever; (3) defts. could not support a plea in avoidance of circuitry of action, because it was essential to that plea that the amount recoverable by deft. pleading it from pltf. in the action in which it was pleaded should be the exact amount recoverable by pltf. from him; & as S. & Co. were not parties to the action, it could not be averred that the damages, if any, recoverable by defts. from S. & Co. for breach of the contract of sale would be the same in amount as the sum recoverable by pltfs. from defts. under the terms of the bills of lading, & it did not appear that S. & Co. had any cause of action against pltfs., whose liabilities depended upon the bills of lading.—AKT. *OCEAN v. 2104a. — Damage sustained before making of charterparty.—*A time charterparty contained the following cesser clause: “In the event of loss of time from deficiency of men or stores, breakdown of machinery, whether partial or otherwise, collision, stranding, fire in ship & (or) cargo, damage or interference by authorities preventing the working of the vessel for more than twelve running hours, the payment of hire shall cease until she be again in an efficient state to resume her service at the place where the accident occurred. . . .” After the steamer came on hire she went into dry dock for four days to repair damage which she had sustained in collision before coming on hire. The owners allowed the charterers four days’ hire, & claimed to recover the amount so allowed from the defts. in the collision action :—Held : the above cesser clause applied to damage arising before as well as after the making of the charterparty; the charterers were entitled to deduct four days’ hire; & the owners were entitled to recover the amount so deducted from the defts. as damages for loss of use of their steamer.—THE ESSEX ENVOY (1929), 141 L. chartered his boat to the deft. for fishing in the north for 60 days or longer if required. At the end of the 60 days deft. informed pltf. personally at V. that deft. would not require the boat any longer, & undertook to notify his cannery manager to that effect, but the notification did not reach the latter before the boat had left for another of deft.’s canneries, & on arrival there the manager told the captain, & also the engineer who was representing pltf., that he would not release the boat & that they should fish at a certain place. Fishing was carried on for another 30 days :—Held : the charterparty had been put

The bill of lading was a clean bill, stating that a specified quantity had been shipped in good condition, & incorporating the terms of the charterparty, which provided that the statements in the bill of lading as to the goods having been shipped in good condition, & as to the aggregate number of pieces delivered to the steamer, should be conclusive evidence against the shipowner. At the time of signing the bill of lading the master signed a protest stating that part of defts.' goods was in bad condition. Defts. were indorsees of the bill of lading, & after the arrival of the steamer pltf. informed them that part of the cargo had been damaged before shipment. There being nothing to indicate to defts. that the damaged part belonged to them, defts. accepted the bill of lading, when presented, & they paid for the timber. 3649a. ——— No other goods to be discharged.—Certain cotton goods were carried from L. to B., where they were discharged into a lighter. Certain other iron goods, packed in a wooden case, were being lowered into the same lighter when the case broke & the iron goods fell out into the lighter & holed it. Sea-water entered & damaged the cotton goods. Under the contract of carriage ligherage was to be at the risk of the owners. The provisions of the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924 (c. 22), were also incorporated. The owners of the cotton goods claimed damages from the owners of the ship:—Held: (1) if the sea transit had ended when the goods were placed in the lighter, defts. were protected by the terms of the bill of lading. The sea transit, however, had not ended: the discharge into the lighter was part of the operation of discharge from the ship & was not complete as long as there were other goods to be discharged into the lighter; (2) the exception relating to loss due to insufficiency of packing in Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924 (c. 22), Art. IV. (2) (n), was wide enough to cover the case of the packing of other goods, though primarily it would apply to the goods themselves that were lost or damaged; (3) on the evidence defts. had shown no negligence on the part of themselves or their servants & were therefore exempt from liability under Art. IV. (2) (g).—GOODWIN, FERREIRA & CO., LTD. v. LAMPORT & HOLT, LTD. (1929), 141 L. T. 494; 45 T. L. R. 521; 73 Sol. Jo. 402.

3665a. "Reversible" working days—How interpreted.—Pltf., the owner of a motor-schooner, chartered her to defts. to make a number of voyages with cargoes of bricks from R., in Belgium, to London. The charterparty provided: "The cargo to be loaded & discharged together within five reversible working days, time to commence from first high water at or off loading or discharging berth. Charterer is entitled to keep the vessel on demurrage not exceeding ten days at the rate of 1s. per net register ton per day payable day by day." On a claim by the owner against the charterers, for demurrage—Held: the word "reversible" did not entitle the charterers to set off days saved on one voyage against days lost on another voyage under the same charter.—*VERREN v. 3920a. ——— "Per working hatch."—A charterparty on a modified Form A of the Chamber of Shipping Welsh Coal Charter, 1896, provided that a coal cargo was to be taken from alongside by consignees at the port of discharge at "the average rate of 125 tons per working hatch per day." A marginal note or memorandum stated that consignees were not obliged to take cargo at a higher rate than 500 tons per day. Despatch money was to be payable at the rate of £15 per day. The cargo, which consisted of about 4,600 tons of coal, was loaded in unequal portions in four holds. In a dispute between the shipowners & charterers as to the method of calculating the lay days & the consequential payment or non-payment of despatch money:—Held: the term in the charterparty "working hatch" denoted a hatch which could be worked because there was cargo in the hold underneath it waiting to be discharged; the charterparty provided for discharge at the average rate of 125 tons per each working hatch per available day & not 500 tons per day for the whole ship; when in the ordinary course one hold became empty the rate of discharge from the remaining holds remained at 125 tons & was not proportionately increased; & the lay days were in the circumstances easily ascertainable

4248a. ————Resps. insured claimant's steamer by a policy providing that general average was to be adjusted according to the York-Antwerp Rules of 1924. The ship was chartered to go to Bordeaux to load for Cardiff, the charterparty also providing that average, if any, should be settled according to those rules. During loading at Bordeaux the foremast broke, & damage was done to the ship. For the purpose of repair she was moved to another dock within the port, & the shipowners incurred expenses as follows: wages & provisions of crew, cost of handling & discharging cargo for the purpose of repairs, cost of coal consumed in going in & out & keeping steam up, expense of towing in & out & mooring & port expenses, & cost of coal consumed in shifting the vessel. While staying at Bordeaux the ship was in no danger. On completion of repairs & loading she left for Cardiff, & while she was at sea she fouled some wreckage without any negligence of those on board her, & though there was no immediate danger she was made unfit to encounter the ordinary perils of the sea, & the master put into Cherbourg, as a port of refuge, & had repairs effected. The expenses at Cherbourg were similar to those at Bordeaux:—Held: (1) the cost of repairs in each case was recoverable as particular average; (2) the other expenses at Bordeaux could not be claimed as general average, since no danger was in operation there; (3) the other expenses at Cherbourg could be claimed as general average since, though there was no immediate danger, the vessel was not fit, without repair, to encounter the perils of the sea.—VLASSO- owner of a motor boat for a contravention of 1894 Act, s. 271 (1), the evidence adduced was that on a certain occasion the boat carried a party of more than twelve persons, gratuitously, on a pleasure excursion on the Clyde, without a Board of Trade certificate :—Held : that the expression "passenger steamer" did not necessarily include every ship which on any occasion carried persons other than the owner & his family, & the master & crew; & accordingly, that it was not established that the motor boat was a passenger steamer, & that the sheriff substitute who heard the case was entitled to find the accused not guilty of the charge.—YOUNG v. 5608b. — Dumb barge.—Pltfs.' steamship S. was lying moored at a tier on the south side of the River Thames. Defts.' dumb barge P. was lying inside of the S. & attached to her by ropes fore & aft. When the work of receiving cargo from the S. ceased for the day the P. was left alongside the S. unlighted & unattended. The S. was exhibiting the usual anchor light. During the night some unknown craft came into collision with the P. & she filled & sank, & as the tide ebbed, the S. rested on the submerged hull of the P. & both vessels were damaged. Under bye-law 14 of the Port of London River Bye-laws, a vessel under 150 feet in length "when at anchor or moored" by night must exhibit a riding light; but by proviso (a) to the bye-law: "Where masted vessels are lying made fast at the moorings in the tiers, only the outermost off shore of such vessels in each tier shall be required to exhibit the riding light"; & by proviso (c), "... Lighters made fast at wharves, piers or jetties or alongside vessels thereat, shall not be required to exhibit the riding light":—Held: (1) it was not negligent to leave the P. unattended; but (2) not being a masted vessel nor made fast to a vessel at a wharf, pier or jetty, the P. could not bring herself within either proviso (a) or (c); accordingly there was nothing to take her out of the obligation imposed upon her under the main part of the bye-law to exhibit a riding light; (3) as defts. could not prove that the absence of the light was not a cause of the collision with the unknown craft, they failed to discharge the onus upon them, & there must be judgment for pltfs.—THE PRINCESS, [1929] P. 287; 98 L. 5648a. — Vessel under way—Meaning of "under way."—Under bye-law 28 (e) of the Port of London River Bye-laws, 1914–1926, in fog, a steam vessel under way about to turn & whilst turning round shall sound at intervals of not more than two minutes four short blasts in rapid succession, followed, if turning with her head to . . . port, by two short blasts." Bye-law 5 provides that "in these bye-laws . . . unless there be something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction . . . the expression 'under way' when used in relation to a vessel means when she is not at anchor . . . & includes a vessel dropping up or down the river with her anchor on the ground." In order to come to anchor on account of fog pltfs.' vessel Pakeha, bound up-river on the flood tide, sounded the appropriate signal under bye-law 28 (e), hard-a-starboarded her helm, & put her engines full speed astern. When she had swung two or three points the anchor was let go with thirty fathoms of chain & was reported to be holding. Her navigation lights were then switched off, the anchor lights switched on & the bell commenced to be rung for fog. The engines had then to be worked half ahead & full speed ahead for about a minute & a half to avoid a small vessel at anchor, & were then put full speed astern for about a minute & then stopped. About ten minutes after the anchor had been let go, & when the Pakeha had nearly swung head to tide, she was run into by defts.' steamship. Defts. alleged (inter alia) that the Pakeha was a vessel under way & turning in the river, & required, therefore, to continue sounding the signal of four short blasts followed by two:—Held: following the criterion laid down in The Esk, The Cilana, No. 5521, as the Pakeha was holden by under the control "of her anchor during all the time in question, she was not "under way," & was right in ringing her bell, the appropriate signal for a vessel at anchor in a fog.—THE PALEMBANG, [1929] P. 246; 98 L. Dockyard Ports Regulation Act, 1865 (c. 125), the Lords Comrs. of the Admiralty exercise authority over Queenstown Harbour as a dockyard port, but by Order in Council of Aug. 10, 1903, it was provided that a fairway would be kept through the inner man-of-war anchorage, & in 1909 the Cork Harbour Comrs., "in pursuance of the powers vested in them by the Cork Harbour Acts, 1820-1903," issued with the approval of the Board of Trade & the consent of the Admiralty, required by sect. 60 of the Cork Harbour Act, 1903, bye-laws for the regulation of navigation in Queenstown Harbour. By bye-law 41: "Any regulations for preventing collisions at sea for the time being in force, under the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Acts, shall be deemed to apply to the port, & shall be construed as if the following bye-laws, Nos. 42 to 52 (inclusive), were added thereto & the entire fairway shall be deemed to be a narrow channel." By bye-law 53: "The foregoing bye-laws, where they refer to any part of the man-of-war anchorages or any other part of the dockyard port, shall apply to any merchant ships that may be temporarily using such parts of the port." The interpretation clause prefixed to the said bye-laws defined "fairway" as "the space within the port for the time being reserved as a highway for vessels in motion." In 1916 the Harbour Comrs. issued a "Description of Fairway," para. 6 of which was as follows: "From the eastern limit of the inner man-of-war anchorage to the White Point Buoy there are two fairways - the northern fairway & the southern fairway. The northern fairway is bounded on the north by an imaginary line from 20 fathoms south of Copper Point Buoy to the western end of Queenstown Deep-water Quay, & thence towards White Point House until Rushbrooke Church bears N.W. by W. $\frac{1}{2}$ W., & thence to White Point Buoy showing fixed white light, & on the south by the line of Admty. battleships' mooring buoys. The southern fairway is bounded on the north by the line of Admty. battleships' mooring buoys, & on the south by the line of Admty. torpedo-boat & other mooring buoys along the north of Spit Bank & Haul-bowline." :-Held: subject to the general overriding jurisdiction of the Lords Comrs. of the Admiralty, the Harbour Comrs. have power to reserve space within the port as a highway for vessels in motion, & that the effect of the bye-laws, as explained by the reservation contained in the "Description of Fairway," was to constitute in the inner man-of-war anchorage two separate fairways, divided by the line of mooring buoys, in either of which vessels, whether proceeding up or down the harbour, were entitled to navigate, & pl'ts.' vessel was alone in fault for the collision for failing to keep on her own starboard side of the northern fairway, in compliance with art. 25.—THE ZULAH, [1929] P. 266; 98 L. 6628a. ——— Detention due to collision—Owner unable to use ship owing to contract during period of detention.]—On Mar. 12, 1927, resps.’ steamship suffered damage by a collision with appls.’ steamship, for which the appls. admitted liability. The damage did not render resps.’ vessel unseaworthy, & she continued trading without effecting repairs. While she was so trading her owners by a memorandum of agreement dated Dec. 21, 1927, contracted to sell her. The agreement set forth that the vessel was “due London on Dec. 24, thence H. & A., expected ready for delivery between, say, Jan. 10 & Jan. 31, & to be delivered to buyer at Antwerp or a U.K. port at seller’s option, but not later than Feb. 25, 1928, subject to buyer’s approval afloat & to bottom examination in dry dock, as specified in Clauses 4 & 5 of this contract . . . 4. The buyer shall commence the inspection of the steamer afloat within twenty-four hours of receiving notice of steamer’s readiness for inspection, & if on superficial inspection the buyer is satisfied with the general condition of the steamer, seller shall at his own risk & expense open up the engines, boilers & tanks for the inspection of the steamer afloat by the buyer. . . . The buyer shall declare acceptance or refusal of the steamer in writing within twenty-four hours after completion of such inspection afloat . . . 5. For examination of bottom &/or other water parts &/or tailend shaft, seller agrees to put the vessel into dry dock. . . .” The steamship arrived at Antwerp on Jan. 10, 1928, & her owners gave notice to the buyer of her readiness. On Jan. 16 they proceeded to open up the vessel’s engines, boilers & tanks for inspection, & while the vessel was in that condition & therefore unable to trade, they took the opportunity to effect the repair of the collision damage, which was of such a nature must be determined by the weight of evidence after consideration of the action of each vessel, having regard to rule 37.—“MANLEY” S.S. (OWNERS OF) v. “HECTOR” S.S. (OWNERS OF) & THE NORTHERN CONSTRUCTION CO., [1928] Exch. C. R. 42.—CAN.

sl. Effect of Maritime Conventions Act, 1914, s. 9.—The present action is one in rem against the tug S. for damages to pltf.’s canal boat, when in tow of the S., as a result of a collision between the said canal boat, a dumb tow, & the wall of the inner basin of the harbour of Quebec, which collision was alleged to be due to the negligent navigating of the S. :—Held : sect. 9 was not limited in its application solely to actions for damages due to collision between vessels, & the present action not having been commenced within two years from the date when the damages or loss or injury was caused should be dismissed.—“SPRAY” v. that it could be repaired while the ship was afloat. The repairs admittedly occupied four days, & were completed on Jan. 24. Subsequently the vessel was put into dry dock for bottom examination. On the reference to assess the damage caused by the collision resps. claimed (inter alia) loss & expenses in respect of four days' detention while their ship was undergoing repairs:—Held: inasmuch as resp. shipowners had entered into contractual obligations which prevented them from trading with the vessel & earning profits during the time when the repair of the collision damage was being executed, they had not suffered any loss by the detention of their vessel in consequence of the collision, & were therefore not entitled to recover from the wrongdoer.—THE YORK, [1929] P. 178; 98 L. The R. was the largest vessel which had been in those docks within the statutory period, but pltfs. also had a controlling interest in docks at F. owned by another limited co. in which a larger vessel than the R. had been docked :—Held : even assuming pltfs. exercised any power over the F. docks within 1900 Act, s. 2 (1), those docks were not within “the area” contemplated by the sect., namely, the area containing within it the particular dock in which the damage was caused; & pltfs. were entitled to a limitation decree based on the tonnage of the R.—THE RUAPEHU, No. 2, [1929] P. 305; 98 L. Before pltfs. arranged to send the vessel to the wharf the harbour master had in writing informed them that the berths were “perfectly safe for steamers to lie aground.” Defts. alleged that the vessel came to the wharf subject to printed conditions, known to the harbour master, whereby the railway co. did not represent, warrant or guarantee that the berths alongside the wharf were safe or suitable for the accommodation of vessels, & all vessels brought alongside remained at the sole risk of their owners & on the terms that the co. should "in no event whatever be liable for any damage . . . however caused to or suffered by any such vessel." The harbour master did not in fact know that the berth was defective:—Held: (1) even if the harbour master ought to have known of the defective condition of the berth, which was doubtful, it was not his duty to impart to pltfs. information, acquired as harbour master, which would be against the interests of defts. & of the harbour master to disclose; (2) the notice did not form part of the contract between pltfs. & defts., & afforded defts. no defence; & accordingly pltfs. were entitled to judgment.—THE HAYLE, [1929] P. 275; 141 L. 8715a. ——. Pltf., a lighterman, was in charge of a barge, which was being taken from a dock through a lock. The dock & lock were both the property of defts. While pltf. was navigating the barge under the orders & directions of defts., a rope attached to the barge broke & struck pltf., causing him personal injuries. Pltf. had no option to refuse to take the rope on board. Defts. relied on the terms of a notice, exhibited on the pierhead of the lock, to the effect that lightermen availing themselves of the facilities & assistance of defts.' servants must do so at their own risk, & upon the understanding that no liability whatsoever should attach to defts. or their servants for any injury from whatever cause arising to or by the craft or to or by any person on board thereof:—Held: the words of the above notice were prima facie adequate to exempt defts. from liability for the negligence of their servants, & the fact that pltf. was compelled to regulate the barge according to the directions of the dockmaster was in no way inconsistent with the fact that he was in the circumstances "availing himself of the facilities & assistance" of defts., & did not deprive defts. of the exemption afforded by the notice.—*WICKETT v. The society stipulated for freedom from liability, & the survey was conducted by two of the society's surveyors. Deflt., who was one of these two surveyors, was responsible for the mainmast. The society certified that the yacht had been reported to be in a good & efficient state & that she had been classed as

A1. In fitting out the yacht for sea pltf. found that the mainmast was rotten in places & wholly unfit for use, & he claimed damages from deflt. for negligence & breach of duty:—Held: there was no privity of contract between pltf. & deflt., & that independently of contract deflt. owed to pltf. no duty of care or skill with regard to the survey, & therefore the action failed.—*HUMPHREY v. sf. Whether solicitor entitled—On withdrawal of general retainer.—A solr. was retained by C. to conduct proceedings in an action against S. The retainer was not disputed. The solr. conducted the action until the judgment of the trial judge was given. C. decided to appeal & commenced proceedings for an appeal. From that time he took over from the solr. the conduct of & control of the proceedings & of the appeal, & thereafter the solr. merely performed such services as C. from time to time required of him. The solr. then delivered his bill of costs, & in due time obtained on præcipe an order for its taxation pursuant to Solicitors Act, s. 33 (c).—Held: C., by taking over the conduct & control of the proceedings put an end to the general retainer, as he had a right to do, & the solr. was thereupon entitled to claim payment of his costs, & in the absence of "special circumstances," to have a præcipe order for taxation of his bill.—Re SAVIGNAC, [1928] 4 D. 282a. Agreement subject to "model form of conveyance specially prepared"—Absence of model form.—Where one or more of the material terms of an alleged contract cannot be determined, either by interpretation or as being of a kind which the law will supply, there is no contract, even though there has been an act of part performance, & the ct. can grant neither specific performance nor damages.

Pltf. signed an agreement, in the form of a letter prepared on behalf of deft., to purchase certain premises subject to the conditions indorsed thereon, & to take the conveyance "in the model form of conveyance specially prepared" for use in relation to the same. The conditions stated (inter alia) that the property sold was subject to restrictions appearing in the model form, & that if the purchaser should not after notice withdraw any objection which the vendor could not or would not remove, the vendor might by notice in writing annul the agreement. The premises were part of property conveyed to deft. by three conveyances, among others, dated respectively 1908, 1910 & 1911. They were comprised in the 1908 conveyance, & were part of what was known in deft.'s agent's office as block 4, other parts of the property being there known as blocks with other numbers. Most of the property had come to deft. subject to restrictions against user for trade purposes. At the date of the agreement the restrictions were obsolete in regard to blocks 4, 7 & 9; but in all dealings with property comprised in those blocks deft. had imposed like restrictions. No model form had been prepared for use in dealings with block 4, & through a mistake of deft.'s agent, pltf. received one appropriate to block 8. Pltf. took possession before completion, & soon raised the question of turning the premises into a shop. After long negotiations, during which the question of restrictions was thoroughly discussed, deft. refused permission, maintaining that, despite his agent's mistake in sending the wrong model form, the restrictions against trade ought to stand; & a new draft conveyance, incorporating such restrictions, was prepared on his behalf. Pltf. refused to execute it, & sought by this action to enforce the original agreement subject only to restrictions in one of the schedules to the conveyance of 1908, & thus free from restrictions on trading:—Held: there was no enforceable contract, as by reason of the non-existence of the appropriate model form of conveyance there were missing from the original agreement material terms which the ct. could not supply, & also that damages could therefore not be assessed.—*STIMSON v. Agreement for possession & devise or conveyance in return for services].— Under an oral agreement between plff. & defts. the latter were to have exclusive possession of a parcel of plff.'s land in return for personal services to be rendered by them to her during her lifetime or until she sold or disposed of her adjoining property, & she also agreed to leave them said parcel by her will or, in the event of the sale of the adjoining property & the removal of her residence therefrom, to convey it to them. Defts. took up their residence on the land & built a house & other improvements thereon refer-able only to said agreement. Plff. brought an action to recover possession, & defts. counterclaimed for specific performance. The ct. dismissed the action & declared that defts. were entitled to specific performance on the death of plff. or upon her removing from the neighbourhood. Held on appeal, the dismissal of the action ought to be sustained, but the decree of specific performance was premature. — LYELL & CORMACK, [1928] 1 D. "May" is a permissive or enabling expression; but there are cases in which, for various reasons, as soon as the person who is within the statute is entrusted with the power it becomes his duty to exercise it. One of those cases is where he is applied to to use the power which the Act gives him in order to enforce the legal right of appet. (TALBOT, J.).—SHEFFIELD CORPN. v. LUX-

56 iv. ———.—Railway Passenger Duty Act, 1842, ss. 13 & 15, contain regulations for the prevention of overcrowding in any "stage carriage." The Act contains no definition of the term "stage carriage":—Held: a motor omnibus, which had been chartered by the secretary of a football club to convey a party of club supporters to a match at a fixed fare per passenger, was not a stage carriage on the occasion in question, in respect that it was not plying for hire from one stage to another, but was engaged in the performance of a private contract; & conviction of the conductor for overcrowding accordingly quashed.—*McKEE v. Whether order of Commissioners of Inland Revenue necessary.]—An information was preferred by a police officer against the conductor of a motor omnibus alleging that he had allowed the omnibus to carry at one time a greater number of passengers than it had been constructed to carry, contrary to Railway Passengers Duty Act, 1842 (c. 78), s. 15 :—Held : the prosecution was not a proceeding for the recovery of a fine or penalty under an Act relating to inland revenue within Inland Revenue Regulation Act, 1890 (c. 21), s. 21 (1), & it could, therefore, lawfully be commenced without an order of the Inland Revenue Comrs.—*KIRKBY v. Prior to the passing of the 1927 Act, various committees of a local authority passed resolutions, which were confirmed by the council, to the effect that certain of their employees be required to become members of one of the trade unions in the resolutions referred to. By that Act it was provided that it should not be lawful for any local or other public authority to make it a condition of the employment, or continuance in employment, of any person that he should or should not be a member of a trade union, & that any such condition should be void. Shortly after the passing of the Act instructions were given by a committee that only men belonging to a specified trade union should be employed in respect of certain casual labour; & an employee, who was dismissed accordingly, obtained a declaration in the county court that his dismissal was illegal. A member of the council thereupon brought forward a motion having for its object that instructions should be given that the resolutions of the committees should cease to be operative; but the motion was defeated:—Held: in the circumstances the ct. should declare that it was not lawful for the local authority to require any person, as a condition of employment or continuance in employment, to become or to be a member of a trade union.—A.-G. v. The salesman, after working under the contract, left the service & entered that of a concern selling competing goods; & his withdrawal was accepted by the pltf. as a breach of contract:—Held: the restriction was not intended to govern the

- 77a. ———.]—The Liverpool Electric Cable Co., Ltd., applied to register the words "Liverpool Cables" in Parts A. & B. of the register in respect of electric cables. The applications were refused on the grounds that, although evidence went to show that those words indicated to the trade the co.'s electric cables, the word "Liverpool" was not primâ facie capable of distinguishing those cables or of becoming distinctive of them; that Liverpool was one of a class of geographical names which were of such importance that the names ought not to be registered to any one trader; that the word "Liverpool" describes the common characteristic of vast quantities of goods, namely that they come from Liverpool, & that phrase "Liverpool cables" therefore meant, not the cables of the applicant co., but cables manufactured or dealt in at Liverpool :—Held : the Registrar had proceeded upon the right grounds, & that his decisions were correct; the Registrar is not bound to accept an application in Part B. to register upon proof of user or that the mark is in fact distinctive; it is part of his duty to consider as a judicial officer applications put before him: he may refuse registration if not satisfied that the proposed mark is capable of distinguishing; in considering whether a geographical name is registrable, both the locality & the goods must be taken into consideration; & the name of such an important commercial centre as Liverpool, even though it may in fact be distinctive of the goods in respect of which it is sought to register it, is not registrable.—*Re LIVERPOOL ELECTRIC CABLE CO. The registrar refused the application, on the ground that semolina & mustard prepared for use as food were goods of the same description, & appcts. refused to agree to the association of the mark with earlier marks in respect of mustard. Appcts. appealed to the ct. :—Held : mustard falls under the description of a condiment & semolina under the description of a cereal & the goods are not of the same description, & the registrar should be directed to reconsider the question as to what association with the cereal group only should be required.—*Re COLMAN J. essays & notes on the essays. In 1927 & 1928 the book was prescribed by the London University as one on which candidates for matriculation would be examined. One of defts. published & sold the other defts. sold a book entitled "Hazlitt's Selected Essays, Edition Hollingworth," containing twenty of such essays, including the thirteen selected by Sampson. Pltfs. commenced an action against defts., alleging that defts. had passed off the Hollingworth edition as & for the Sampson edition of pltfs. by representing that the Hollingworth edition was that prescribed for the London Matriculation Examination, & also alleging infringement of copyright in their selection of essays:—Held: if the fact were that a purchaser had been misled into thinking that defts.' book had been prescribed for a certain examination, that was simply a representation as to quality & would give pltfs. no right of action, there had been no passing off of defts.' book as pltfs.' & there was no infringement of copyright.—CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS v. 1120c. — Goods sent in reply to order by plaintiff.]—Pltfs., who had for some time used the device of a swan with the word "white" on labels on porcelain enamelled baths of their manufacture, applied on two occasions to register the device, first in class 1 in relation to enamel, secondly in class 13 in relation to baths & the like. Both applications were refused. On Jan. 25, 1926, the B. W. Assocn. registered under sect. 62, in respect of a standardised brass tap approved by the Ministry of Health, the device of a swan with the letter B. W. A. The attention of pltfs. was drawn to the sale by defts. of one of these standardised taps in Feb.; & later, upon ordering "½-in. brass globe cocks Ministry of Health pattern swan," pltfs. received a like tap from defts. Pltfs. thereupon brought this action to restrain defts. from passing off, & at the same time moved to rectify the register by removing therefrom the B. W. Assocn.'s standardisation mark:—Held: pltf.'s device of a swan was known to the trade as indicating, not taps, but porcelain baths of pltfs.' manufacture or merchandise enamelled with a particular characteristic enamel; the presence on the register of resps.' standardisation make, & the use of it upon brass taps made to the Ministry of Health specification was not calculated to deceive the trade into believing that such taps were merchandise or manufacture of pltfs.; the sending of one of such taps by defts. in response to pltfs.' order was a reasonable response to that order: pltfs. had proved neither that the device of a swan indicated their taps to the trade, nor passing off by defts.; & both the action & the motion failed.—WILSON'S & MATHIESON'S, LTD. v. injunction & damages. No case of actual deception was proved. The estimate of damages in particulars to the plaint which was verified by affidavit was Rs.25,000. The ct. awarded damages on the following basis: applts. were proved to have sold cloth bearing the marks complained of to the value of Rs.3,200,000; the ct. assumed that, if offered without these marks, only 40 per cent. of this quantity would have been sold, & gave as damages 9 per cent. as profit on the remaining 60 per cent., i.e. Rs.172,800. - 493a. — After variation of original settlement.—Testator bequeathed his residuary estate upon trust for his children in equal shares & declared that as to the share of his son E. a moiety thereof should be held upon trust to pay & make over the same to the trustees of a settlement dated Sept. 23, 1916, to be held by them upon the trusts of such settlement, so far as the same should be then applicable & capable of taking effect. By the settlement so referred to, which was made after the marriage of E. with his wife G., a certain fund was vested in the trustees thereof under which E. took the first life interest & upon his death G. took an interest during her widowhood with remainders over upon trusts for E.'s children by his wife G. or any future wife. Testator died in 1917, & in 1928 the marriage was upon G.'s petition dissolved, & an order was made under which the trusts of the settlement were varied; the effect of this variation being to deprive E. of any interest under the original trusts thereof, to give G. an immediate life interest, & to vest the settlement fund after her death in P., the only child of her marriage with E. :—Held : upon the proper construction of testator's will, the share of E. in his father's residuary estate ought to be held upon the trusts of the settlement as originally framed without regard to the order varying those trusts.—*Re GOOCH, GOOCH v. 1434a. Equitable estate of beneficiary becoming legal estate.—On July 5, 1802, B. & another trustee who predeceased him were admitted to certain copyhold plots upon trust out of the rents & profits to raise & pay an annual rent of £7 10s. to L. & his heirs & subject thereto in trust for W. & his heirs. Many years after B.'s death his customary heir C., since deceased, was admitted to two plots, but no one was admitted to the third; so that on Dec. 31, 1925, the best right to admittance was in the customary heirs of C. & B. On the same date the equitable title to the land stood vested in T. & X. as joint tenants in fee, subject to the equitable rentcharge then vested in Y., subject to proof of his title. On Jan. 1, 1926, the Law of Property Acts came into operation & the copyhold plots were enfranchised. The ct. being asked to determine in whom the legal estates in the land & the rentcharge vested:—Held: on the rentcharge becoming a legal rentcharge the trustees became bare trustees with no longer any active duties to perform.—Re KING'S THEATRE SUNDERLAND, DENMAN PICTURE HOUSES v. THOMPSON & COLLINS ENTERPRISES, [1929] 1 Ch. 483; 98 L. J. Ch. 109; 140 L. T. 463.

1499a. Acquisition from married woman trustee—In order to defeat judgment.—Where the ct.

in giving judgment against a married woman, who is a defaulting trustee, orders that the judgment be satisfied out of her separate estate, & execution proves useless, it is not open to pltf., in a new action, to obtain against her judgment in a different form for payment of the moneys into court. As against her the matter is res judicata. But if it appear that she has transferred the moneys to a person with knowledge of the proceedings against her, action will lie against the transferee as constructive trustee. Pltf. obtained against the first deft., a married woman, judgment for payment out of her separate estate of the sum in dispute & costs. Evidence disclosed that the first deft. had parted with the whole of the sum, having transferred most of it to her sister, the second deft., who was not a party to the proceedings but knew of them at the time. Execution in respect of the judgment thus proving useless, pltf. now brought this action, alleging that the first deft. had paid the money to the second deft. in order to defeat any judgment for the pltf., & that the second deft. received the money as constructive trustee:—Held: judgment could be given against the second deft., who had received the moneys as constructive trustee.—*GREEN v. Part III.—Administration of Trusts.

2033a. — Misapplication of trust funds—Payment to wrong person.]—The indemnity conferred on trustees by Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 30 (1), does not apply where a trustee, even though as the result of an honest mistake, has misapplied trust funds by paying them to the wrong person.

The selling agents of a colliery co., which had sold its undertaking & was being voluntarily wound up, claimed £19,088 damages for alleged breach by the co. of the agency agreements. There had in fact, as the ct. held, been no breach of the agreements. The liquidator consulted the solrs. of a large shareholder, who was opposed to the claim, & they said they had advised their client that there was a valid claim but that the amount of damages was uncertain. Without taking further advice or obtaining the opinion of the ct., a course the liquidator had recognised to be open to him, the liquidator settled the claim for £15,000. A summons was taken out by a contributory to obtain repayment of this sum to the co., on the ground that the liquidator had been guilty of misfeasance, & the liquidator, whose bona fides was not in question, claimed the benefit of the indemnity given to trustees by Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 30 :—Held :

without deciding whether the liquidator was a trustee within the meaning of the Act, even if he were : (1) he was not entitled to indemnity under sect. 30 (1), because that sub-sect. does not extend to a case where a trustee had misapplied trust funds coming to his hands ; (2) he was not, on the facts, entitled to relief under sect. 61.

Even if a liquidator is a trustee within Trustee Act, 1925, he is, as a paid trustee, disentitled to relief under sect. 61 (per cur.). —Re WINDSOR STEAM COAL CO. (1901), LTD., [1929] 1 Ch. 151 ; 98 L. J. Ch. 147 ; 140 L. T. 80, C. A.

By a codicil power was conferred upon the trustees after the expiration of five years from testator's death to sell his residuary estate or any part thereof by public auction but not by private contract. p i. — Failure to invest—Reliance on counsel's opinion.—Trustees were asked by a beneficiary to invest certain moneys, most of which were admittedly due to the beneficiary pending settlement of the account. At the same time the trustees were told that a claim for interest would be made against them if the moneys continued to lie idle. The trustees, acting on the erroneous opinion of counsel that they were not entitled to invest, omitted to do so:—Held: the proper course was for the trustees to invest as requested, but having referred what was a matter of law to competent counsel for his opinion & having acted on it, they were not guilty of wilful neglect & default so as to make them accountable for the loss.—*PERPETUAL TRUSTEE CO. v. so. Whether right to jury exists.—Defts., as exors. of a will, were directed by the will to sell lands of testatrix, & distribute the proceeds among her children & a grandchild. In this action, plffs., two of the children, alleged that defts., exors., had committed a breach of trust by selling the lands at a gross undervalue. Plffs. gave a notice for trial by jury, & the action was tried with a jury, & judgment entered upon its findings in favour of plffs. for the recovery of damages:—Held: the action being one which, before Administration of Justice Act, could have been brought only in the Ct. of Ch., plffs. had no right to give a jury notice, & the notice should have been struck out by the trial judge.—*DAVIES v. 22. Liability for loss—Valuation bonâ fide.]—Deft., a paid valuator, estimated the value of a certain property at $4,980, stating in the certificate of value that he held himself "responsible to you," plffs., "for the correctness of this report & valuation," which was enclosed in a letter stating "the houses are unfinished, & my valuation of $4,980 is on the supposition that they will be finished in a manner similar to those adjoining. A final inspection should, I think, be made." The houses never were finished similarly to those adjoining, nor was the deft. ever called upon to make any final or other inspection, & at a subsequent sale the property, which had been taken possession of by the mtgees. & allowed to become greatly out of repair, realised only $1,800:—Held: under these circumstances, there being no mala fides imputable to the appraiser, that he was not answerable for the loss sustained by the lender.—SCOTTISH AMERICAN INVESTMENT Co. v. Therefore, where testator, who died in 1912, by his will settled certain chattels including three family portraits to be held upon trusts which should as nearly as the rules of law & equity permitted correspond with the limitations of real estate in tail, & set out such limitations at length, but settled no real estate upon the same limitations :—Held : testator had attempted to create an entailed interest in the chattels but had not succeeded, & therefore the trustees of his will had no power to sell them under sect. 130 (5). But the ct., deeming it in the circumstances expedient, would make an order authorising the sale of the portraits by the trustees under Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 57.—*Re HOPE'S WILL TRUST, HOPE v. After a further bequest of jewellery, plate & portraits so as to devolve as heirlooms with the said mansion house so far as the rules of law would permit by (sic) the person or persons for the time being entitled to the possession or receipt of the rents of the same mansion house, testator thereby further gave, appointed, devised & bequeathed all the rest & residue of his real & personal estate unto & to the use of his trustees to such uses, upon such trusts, & for such ends intents & purposes as the Wick estate might, under the trusts of his will for the time being be held so far as the rules of law would permit. By a codicil dated August 4, 1927, after reciting that he was desirous of giving to his stepdaughter C. (pltf.) a residence in England, testator appointed, devised & bequeathed to her for her life his said house Wick Episcopi & all the furniture, books, linen, plate & effects therein or belonging thereto & also the land he occupied therewith. After testator's death in 1928 pltf. C. took out an originating summons to determine (inter alia) the question whether pltf. was entitled for her life to the whole or any & if so what part of the rents, profits & income arising out of the residuary real & personal estate of the testator or of the income of the proceeds of sale thereof, or whether deft. W. was entitled during her life to the said rents, profits & income or to some & what part thereof, or to whom the same were payable:—Held: testator intended by the codicil only to give certain defined property to pltf. for her life for the definite purpose, namely, the provision of a house in England, mentioned in the codicil & that the codicil could only be read as interpolating into the will an interest in favour of pltf. in respect of the property specifically mentioned in the codicil; & therefore deft. W. was entitled during her life to the rents profits & income of testator's residuary real & personal estate, & the proceeds of sale thereof. Further, the jewellery, plate, etc., included in the gift of heirlooms contained in testator's mansion house at the date of his death, were in the events that had happened, to be enjoyed by deft. 3047 I. General rule.—If a codicil framed to amount to a republication of a will is to have that effect, it is necessary that it should refer in its body to the will to which it is a codicil, & the fact that it appears in the same paper as the will itself to which it is sought to make it a codicil is not sufficient.—In the Will of ERSON (1927), 28 S. Part XIII.—Conditions.

- 2732a. ———.]—Testator, by his will, devised land to P. subject to the payment of certain annuities, of road-making charges for which testator was liable, & of estate & other death duties, & subject also to the proviso that if within twenty years of testator's death P. should desire to sell the land, he was to give the Governors of the N. Grammar School the option of purchasing the land at the price of £300 an acre, such offer to be subject to the payment by the Governors of the said annuities & road charges, & acceptance to be notified within three months. The land, of about 22 acres in area, was in fact worth £670 an acre at the date of testator's death. In accordance with the condition P. offered it to the School Governors at £300 an acre, & the offer was duly accepted & the land sold & conveyed to the Governors for £6,688. The value of the land for the purposes of death duties was assessed at £14,720. On a summons being taken out to determine whether the Governors were liable to pay a rateable proportion of the estate & succession duties levied upon the value of the property :—Held : the condition being one in restraint of alienation except to a particular purchaser was void for repugnancy, & not binding upon the devisee. The death duties payable must therefore be borne entirely by P., the devisee.—Re COCKERILL, MACKANESS v. PERCIVAL, [1929] 2 Ch. 131 ; 98 L. J. Ch. 281 ; 141 L. T. 198.

The husband survived both the parents, but predeceased testatrix. Testatrix left no issue of her own, but at her death there were six children of her husband's first marriage living :—Held : there was no implication of a gift over to those children on failure of the gift to the husband by lapse in any event, & therefore the residuary estate of testatrix was undisposed of & passed to her next of kin.—Re GRAHAM, *GRAHAM v. so. Condition as to confirmation.—A will provided for the payment of certain legacies on the legates becoming twenty-five years old, & also provided that the legacies should not be paid until the legates had been confirmed as members of the Church of England, & that, should any of them attain the age of twenty-five years without having been so confirmed, then his legacy should be divided between the others who had been so confirmed & another legatee :—

Held : the condition as to being confirmed was a condition precedent ; & that, if it was a condition subsequent, it was one which should not be disregarded as being against public policy, or, under the facts of the case, on the ground that its performance was impossible. Moreover, the fact that the legatee in question was so confirmed when thirty-one years old was not a substantial compliance with the condition.—Re FORBES, HARRISON v. COMMIS, [1928] 3 D. L. Therefore, the residuary property both real & personal passed by the gift either (a) on the ground that under Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), real & personal estate were now pari passu liable to the payment of debts, or (b) because when once it was clear that the word "monies," was not used in its strict sense the ct. could give effect to testator's manifest intention to include the whole of his property in the gift.—*Re MELLOR, PORTER v. 7389 i. Ascertainment at death of testator.—By his will testator, after a certain bequest to his wife, gave her a life estate in the whole of his residuary real & personal estate, & then provided that, after the death of his wife, all his real & personal estate should be converted into money, & such money should be handed over to my then living nearest of kin.—Held: the persons who were entitled in remainder on the death of the life tenant were such of testator's nearest blood relations ascertained at his death as were living at the date of the expiration of the life estate.—*Re McRAE, McDONALD v. 8164 i. Whether first donee takes absolutely.—Residue of my estate that may be remaining over at her death.—A mortis causa settlement, by which testator conveyed his whole estate to his stepdaughter E., whom he also appointed his sole extrix., contained this provision: "In the event of T. surviving his sister, the said E., the revenue of the residue of my estate that may be remaining over at her death shall fall to the said T., but in liferent for his liferent use alienary, & at his death to my own heirs whomsoever in fee." E. survived testator, & died leaving a general settlement by which she bequeathed her whole estate to her brother T., who survived her. At the date of her death she still retained in her possession, in their original forms, certain securities which had belonged to the testator, & a deposit receipt representing heritage belonging to him which she had sold. In a question between T., as his sister's universal legatee, & testator's heirs whomsoever regarding the right of these funds:—Held: the effect of the provision above quoted was to restrict the absolute gift originally made by testator to E. to a right of consumption of testator's estate during her lifetime; & accordingly, as the funds in question were at her death still capable of identification as part of testator's estate, they passed in terms of his settlement, as residue of his estate, in fee to his heirs whomsoever, subject to a right of liferent in favour of T.—*HEAVYSE v. The issue of any deceased child to take parent's share. On the death of my wife the whole of my property shall be divided between my children (the issue of any deceased child shall be entitled to parent's share) said division to be in equal shares":—Held: the estate of any deceased child of testator who died in the lifetime of testator's widow & left no issue him surviving was not entitled to share in the income from the said residue or in the corpus when divided on the widow's death.—*BUSCH v. in the said estates, as if he were dead, & upon trust to pay the surplus, if any, of the said dividends, equally among the persons for the time being in possession of the estates under his will, during the continuance of the said trust; & immediately after the expiration thereof, to transfer one moiety of the said stock to the person then in possession of the H. farm, such person being one of his sons, or a descendant of a son; but if not, then to the descendants of testator's brothers & sisters, & to pay the other moiety in like manner to the person in possession of the S. farm. Testator devised the H. farm to the same trustees, in fee, upon trust for his son J., for ninety-nine years, if he should so long live, remainder to the use of his first & other sons in tail, with divers remainders over. Testator devised the S. farm in like manner for the benefit of his son H. & his issue. J. & H., & their eldest sons, barred the entail in remainder in the said farms & resettled the same, & the stock having been transferred into ct. under Trustees Relief Act, petitioned for the payment out of the fund to them:—Held: the fund being intended for the benefit of the sons & the issue, the period for the enjoyment of the capital had been accelerated by barring the entail, which had determined the restriction against cutting down timber.—Re COLSO'S TRUSTS (1853), Kay, 133; 2 Eq. 10,073 l. Death in lifetime of tenant for life.—Testator dying in 1998 gave to his daughter-in-law the use of a property for life, with the right to the exors. to sell the property & to pay her during her life the interest on the proceeds of sale, & after her decease to divide the principal among the children born to her & his son, & in any event after the death to sell . . .

such property . . . & to divide the proceeds among such children, the child or children of any such child or children of theirs ceased to receive in equal parts the portion of such deceased parents' share." The daughter-in-law, D., died in 1926, her husband having predeceased her. Five children were born of the marriage, three of whom survived. Two sons predeceased her, each leaving a widow but no issue, & each dying testate:—Held: at the death of testator in 1898 a vested estate was created in any child then born to his son & subject to be divested in part as other children were born; & the widows' personal representatives of the son who died before D. would take the husband's share unless there was issue, in which case the issue could be substituted for the father; the gift to the child of D. was determinable only in the event, their death leaving issue, an event which did not happen.—Re SMITH, [1928] 1 D. 10,720 l. Whether case of personal liability.—Testator devised all his real & bequeathed his residuary personal estate to his trustees in trust to sell the same & divide the proceeds into eleven parts, & one of such parts to his widow & each of his ten children. The will provided: "I declare that the share of any child of mine in my residuary estate shall be subject to deduction, from any sum or sums owing by or to him or me at my death or any . . .

payable by me upon any guarantee made or to be made by me or my exors. on her or his behalf." Testator had guaranteed the overdrawn bank account of R. one of his children, & at the time of testator's death this account was overdrawn to the extent of £1,396 0s. 10d. The exors. of testator paid off this sum to the bank in accordance with the said guarantee:—Held: the declaration operated as a gift to R. of the whole of his indebtedness to the estate.—In the Will of ANTHONY HEADLAM (1925), 21 Tas. Part II.—Statutory Determination of Minimum Rates of Wages.

63. Add. Annotation:—Folld. Pockney v. Atkinson (1929), 45 T. L. R. 639.

63a. —.]—An employer engaged a worker in agriculture for a period from Dec. 4, 1927, to Nov. 23, 1928, & agreed to pay him on the completion of that term a lump sum which, with his board & lodging, was equivalent to the minimum rate of wages prescribed under the Agricultural Wages (Regulation) Act, 1924 (c. 37). Before the completion of the term, the worker refused to obey a lawful order of the employer & left the employment without notice:—Held: the Agricultural Wages (Regulation) Act, 1924 (c. 37), did not prevent the making of an agreement for employment for a fixed term with payment of a lump sum equivalent to the prescribed rate at the end of the term, & the Act did not entitle a worker who had broken his contract to demand any wages for the period during which he was in fact employed.—POCKNEY v. ATKINSON (1929), 45 T. L. R. 639; 93 J. P. Jo. 480; 27 L. G. R. 645, D. C.

64. Add the following paragraph:—

By an order of the Agricultural Wages Board, embodying orders of a wages committee: "Where a whole-time male worker is employed by the week or any longer period & the hours of work agreed between the worker & the employer in any week (excluding hours of overtime employment) are less than 50 in summer & 48 in winter, the rate of wages applicable to that worker shall be such as to secure to the worker the wages which would have been payable if the agreed hours had been 50 in summer or 48 in winter as the case may be." Appls. employed one T. as an agricultural labourer by the week of 50 hours at 30s. per week. On Good Friday, T., according to custom, was not required by the appellants to work, & in consequence they refused at the end of the week to pay him his full weekly wages, deducting the portion appropriate to that day, but gave him, according to their custom, a small bonus instead:—Held: the above order was intra vires, & that T. was entitled to be paid 30s. for the Good Friday week.—*SEABROOK & SONS, LTD. v.
